BRYN MAWR COLLEGE

BRYN MAWR COLLEGE was founded by Dr. Joseph Taylor of Burlington, New Jersey. During his life time the site of the college at Bryn Mawr, five miles west of Philadelphia, was purchased and the buildings were begun. At his death in January, 1880, he left the greater part of his estate for the foundation and maintenance of an institution of higher education for women. In 1880 the college was incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania and was invested with the power to confer degrees; in 1883 the trustees issued a circular of information; in 1884 a President, Dr. James E. Rhoads, and a Dean of Faculty, Miss M. Carey Thomas, were elected, plans were matured, and academic appointments were made. In the spring of 1885 the first catalogue was issued and in the autumn of the same year the college began its first academic year.

On the death of President Rhoads in 1893, Dean Thomas was elected to the presidency, which office she held until she reached the age of retirement in 1922. President Marion Edwards Park was elected to the presidency in 1922.

Bryn Mawr College has believed always in the value of small classes and limits the total enrollment of undergraduates to about four hundred and resident graduates to less than one hundred. From the first it has been the policy of the trustees to organize no department in which they could not provide for graduate as well as undergraduate study offered by the same faculty.

Bryn Mawr College confers the degrees of Bachelor of Arts, Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy.

The departments of the college are:

Biblical Literature	History
Biology	History of Art
Chemistry	Italian
Classical Archaeology	Latin
Comparative Philology and Linguistics	Mathematics
Economics and Politics	Music
Education	Philosophy
English	Physics
French	Psychology
Geology	Social Economy
German	Spanish
Greek

THE UNDERGRADUATE SCHOOL

THE UNDERGRADUATE SCHOOL

The undergraduate school offers courses in ancient and modern languages and literature, the social sciences, philosophy and psychology, mathematics and the natural sciences, music, art, and education. The full course of study covers four years and leads to the Bachelor of Arts degree.

1. Admission to Bryn Mawr College is based upon the candidate's record in the competitive entrance examinations and upon the evidence, secured by the college, in regard to her health, character and general ability. If the number qualifying for admission in a given year is greater than the number of rooms available for first-year students, the college reserves the right to determine which of the candidates shall form the admitted group.

*Admission of Undergraduate
Students*

2. All candidates must pass without qualification certain of the matriculation examinations conducted by the College Entrance Examination Board in accordance with the Board's Plan A. The New Plan (Plan B) is not accepted.

*Admission
by Examination*

3. Application for rooms, accompanied by the fee of fifteen dollars payable to Bryn Mawr College, should be made as soon as the year of entrance is definitely known by the candidate. In case of doubt it is well to make application for two consecutive years by sending a fee of thirty dollars. The filing of a room application does not insure admission to the College.

*Room
Application*

4. Candidates for admission to Bryn Mawr College upon honourable dismissal from a college or university whose graduates are eligible for national membership in the American Association of University Women, must present credits equal to the Bryn Mawr College requirements for matriculation. They must, moreover, present a certificate of honourable dismissal and an official statement that they have studied in regular college classes for one college year, that they have passed examinations covering at least one year of academic work in a regular college course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts, that they are in good standing in said college, and that they would be able to take their degree there in due course. They must be re-examined, before graduation from Bryn Mawr College, on all work done elsewhere which they wish to submit as credit toward the Bryn Mawr degree.

*Honourable
Dismissal*

For some years, however, precedence in admission has been given to candidates who have taken the regular examination for matriculation.

Students of other colleges who have outstanding conditions, or have otherwise failed to meet prescribed standards of academic work, or have been put on probation, have been suspended or excluded, will under no circumstances be admitted to Bryn Mawr College. Such students may not cancel their college work elsewhere, offer the Bryn Mawr College requirements for matriculation and enter Bryn Mawr as Freshmen.

Students presenting certificates of honorable dismissal from any college or university not eligible for national membership in the American Association of University Women must take the regular examination for matriculation required by Bryn Mawr. Unless such students inform the Secretary and Registrar of the College at the time of filing their application for examination that they have studied at another college, they will not receive permanent credit.

Hearers

5. Women over twenty-five years of age are admitted as "hearers" without matriculation examination, but they must furnish proof that they have at some time pursued the studies required for matriculation. Hearers are clearly distinguished from regularly matriculated students and must obtain permission from each instructor to attend recitations, examinations, and laboratory exercises; they must satisfy their various professors that they can profit by their elected courses. Hearers are not, strictly speaking, recognized by the college; they are not eligible for degrees, and may receive only such certificates of collegiate study as their various instructors see fit to give.

Matriculation Examinations

The subjects chosen by the college for matriculation examination are counted as 15 points. Candidates may take such examinations in one or in two "divisions." A division consists of one or more examinations taken in a single examination period. If two divisions are taken they must not be separated by more than one calendar year. Any number of subjects may be offered in one division; an entire division may be cancelled and repeated any number of times.

Permanent Credit

"Permanent Credit" is given to candidates who, having offered for examination all the required subjects in one or two divisions, have received a grade of "Passed" (60 per cent or over) in at least 12 of the required 15 points. "Permanent Credit" enables candidates to remove conditions at any time before entering the college by passing the corresponding examinations given by the College Entrance Examination Board.

Candidates not receiving "Permanent Credit" are considered to have cancelled one division and therefore must be examined again in all of the points of the cancelled division.

The autumn examinations of the College Entrance Examination Board are held at Bryn Mawr College beginning on the third Monday of September solely for the purpose of removing conditions. Application for these examinations, accompanied by a fee of $5 for each condition examination, must be made to the Secretary and Registrar of the college before September 1.

Application for College Entrance Board Examinations

Examination of June 15-30, 1931

The week of examinations begins annually on the third Monday in June; the autumn condition examinations start on the third Monday in September.

Application blanks for the examinations should be obtained from the Secretary of the College Entrance Examination Board, 431 West 117th Street, New York City, N. Y.

A standard fee of $10.00, remitted by postal order, express order, or draft on New York, should accompany each application.

In order to facilitate the holding of examinations in the various centers, all applications should be filed at the earliest possible date. Applications for examination must reach the Secretary of the Board:

For examination east of or on the Mississippi River: on or before Monday, May 25, 1931. For examination elsewhere in the United States or Canada: on or before Monday, May 18, 1931.

For examination outside the United States and Canada except Asia: on or before Monday, May 4, 1931.

For examination in Asia: on or before Monday, April 20, 1931.

If a candidate fails to obtain the regular application blank, the usual examination fee arriving before the specified date will be accepted provided that it is accompanied by a memorandum containing the name and address of the candidate, the exact examination center selected, and a complete list of the subjects in which she expects to be examined.

Applications for examination received later than the dates specified will be accepted when it is possible to arrange for the examination of the candidate, but only upon the payment of an additional fee of $5.00.

The designation of the center to which the candidate will go for examination is regarded as an essential part of her application. Requests that examinations be held at particular points should be sent to the Secretary of the Board not later than February 1. A list of examination centers will be published about March 1.

Candidates should report for a morning examination at 8.45 and for an afternoon examination at 1.45, Standard or Daylight Saving Time, according to the usage in the local schools. Under no circumstances will a candidate be admitted to the Scholastic Aptitude Test later than 9.00 A. M.

Detailed definitions of the requirements in all examination subjects are given in a circular of information published by the College Entrance Board annually about December 1. Every candidate is advised to become familiar with these requirements. Upon request a single copy will be sent to any teacher free of charge; in general a charge of twenty-five cents, which may be remitted in postage, will be made.

Candidates wishing to enter Bryn Mawr must state their intention on their application for examination to the College Entrance Board. Since the college recognizes only examinations definitely offered in a first or second division, those who take the examination for practice purposes only, before the regular first and second divisions, are asked not to state to the College Entrance Board their intention to enter Bryn Mawr College. When application for examination in a regular first or second division is made the section of the application blank (School recommendation—Form E), should be sent promptly to the Secretary and Registrar of the College so that any necessary correction may be made. All candidates for admission to Bryn Mawr College, on receipt of their reports of examination from the College Entrance Examination Board, must forward them to the Secretary and Registrar; failing the receipt of the report from the candidate herself the College will take no action upon her application for admission.

EXAMINATIONS FOR ADVANCED STANDING

Advanced Standing

Candidates who wish to enter the college with advanced standing may, in addition to the fifteen points required for matriculation, offer the following subjects: the First Year Course in Latin, counting as one unit; Trigonometry, and Solid Geometry, counting as one-half unit; elementary Greek, counting as one and one-half units, or French or German, counting as one unit each, provided one of these was included in the fifteen points required for matriculation.

* Candidates are advised to divide the Latin examination if possible. They may offer Latin Cp. 3 (Prose Authors) or Latin Cp. 3 (Poets) in one division and Latin Cp. H (if already credited with Cp. 3, Prose Authors) or Latin Cp. K (if already credited with Cp. 3, Poets) in the other.

Candidates wishing to divide the Greek examination may offer the Cp. 2 in one division and the Cp. H in the other. Those wishing to divide the French examination may offer French Cp. 2 in one division and French B in the other. Candidates offering German may make a similar division of that examination.

§ See page 37 for note.

The first year course in Latin may be offered for examination by candidates for matriculation who desire to enter the college with advanced standing, and, at their discretion, by matriculated students without attendance on the college classes provided it is offered not later than the beginning of the student's junior year. In 1930-31, the first year is considered for this purpose as comprising two sections. No substitutions are allowed for any part of the following requirements, except in the case of students entering with advanced standing from other colleges.

A. Terence, Adelphoe (Sloman's edition, New York, Oxford Press). Catullus, Select Poems (all the poems in F. P. Simpson's Select Poems of Catullus, Macmillan, New York), Cicero, De Senectute, Lucretius, De rerum natura, Book I, 1-148, II, 1-58, 600-657, III, 1-93, 931-1052, V, 1-54, 925-1010, 1161-1240 (W. H. Sanborn).

B. Letters of Cicero, Abbott (Ginn and Co.), Letters 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 11, 13, 14, 15, 16, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 27, 30, 31, 39, 41, 42, 45, 47, 49, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 61, 63, 64, 68, 69, 74, 75, 76, 83, 90, 91, 92; Pliny, Merrill (Macmillan and Co.), Letters 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10, 12, 15, 17, 22, 23, 25, 29, 34, 42, 43, 45, 46, 54, 58, 69, 104, 105; Petronius, Cena Trimalchionis Waters, (B. H. Sanborn and Co.), Martial, Epigrams, Post (Ginn and Co.), Liber Epigrammatum, 1, 29; I, 1, 2, 3, 4, 9, 10, 12, 15, 20, 27, 29, 32, 33, 41, 43, 47, 53, 61, 70, 72, 75, 76, 79, 85, 89, 93, 103, 117; II, 7, 11, 14, 18, 20, 30, 41, 57, 66, 69, 77, 80, 90; III, 2, 4, 12, 14, 25, 38, 46, 60, 63; IV, 8, 10, 26, 30, 32, 44, 47, 57, 64, 86; V, 13, 24, 34, 37, 39, 43, 49, 56, 58, 69, 81; VI, 8, 35, 63, 70, 82; VII, 36, 48, 54, 59, 79, 83, 86, 92, 96, 99; VIII, 6, 12, 17, 23, 29, 32, 35, 43, 55, 69, 76; IX, 18, 59, 61, 68, 97; X, 20, 25, 30, 35, 48, 61, 62, 83, 96; XI, 18, 52, 84; XII, 21, 31, 67.

† The Teacher's Laboratory Certificate, furnished to the candidate by the College Entrance Examination Board, should be forwarded to the office of the Secretary and Registrar not later than the day for which the science examination is scheduled. Laboratory notebooks should not be submitted to the college.

‡ The college strongly urges that ancient history be offered as the requirement for entrance in history. Knowledge of the civilization of the ancient world is essential both for an appreciation of the Greek and Latin literature as studied in preparatory school and college and for the introductory course in college history, which begins with the downfall of the Roman Empire.

In case the curriculum of the school in which the candidate has received her preparation makes it difficult for the candidate to offer ancient history, American history may be offered instead. If this alternative is adopted, and, if the candidate should in college wish to enter the course in minor history, she will be expected to give evidence of familiarity with ancient history. Such evidence should be either a certificate from her preparatory school that she completed within reasonable time before entering college an adequate course in ancient history and attained in it a satisfactory grade or that she has done suitable private reading in the subject. The private reading will be tested by a brief oral examination.

§ If Greek and Latin are chosen under the heading "Ancient Language," French or German must be offered. Attention is called to the advantage of offering Greek or German as an extra subject for advanced standing. See next page.

In 1930-31 there will be two examinations, one in Section A and one in Section B, each three hours in length. Students are expected to be familiar with the text, the lives of the authors, the scansion of meters and the material in the introductions of the various editions. These examinations may be taken in different years, and in the order preferred by the candidate; or one section may be studied in the corresponding college class, and the other offered for examination without attending the class.

There will also be offered as an alternate in 1930-31, and as the only possibility in 1931-32 and afterwards, the following reading. The credit given for passing the examination on this reading will be one unit.

Plautus, Mostellaria; Livy, Book I; Catullus, as stated above (Section A); Horace, as stated above (Section A); Vergil, the Eclogues; Reading of the chapters on Plautus, Livy, Horace, Vergil in Duff's Literary History of Rome.

The examinations in Latin, Trigonometry and Solid Geometry are held in the first three weeks of the college year and may be taken by a student in her freshman, sophomore or junior year. Examinations in Elementary Greek, French or German may be taken in the College Entrance Examinations in the spring or, by special arrangement with the Secretary and Registrar, in the autumn. They may not be offered later than the autumn of the junior year.

Students who have passed examinations for advanced standing are credited with the equivalent number of units of college courses and are so enabled to enter at once the more advanced courses to which these are preliminary; they thus secure a larger choice of elective courses or may, at some time in their college course, with the consent of the Dean, substitute this credit for that obtained by attendance at college classes. Students may also secure credit for elective courses in Modern Languages by passing certain examinations in French, German, Italian and Spanish which may be taken only in the first three weeks after entering the college. In no case, however, is it possible by passing examinations for advanced standing to shorten the required four years of study necessary for the bachelor's degree.

GENERAL REGULATIONS

Residence in the college buildings is required of all undergraduate students except those who live with their families in Philadelphia or the vicinity. Residence

Every student enrolled is required to register with the Comptroller. Freshmen and graduate students are required to register also with the Secretary and Registrar. This registration must be completed before 8.45 A.M. on the first day of lectures. The Dean of the College is academic advisor to all undergraduate students and every undergraduate student consults the Dean of the College in regard to the planning of her academic work, and registers her chosen courses with the Dean of the College before entering upon college work. Registration

The members of the entering class are asked to come into residence four days before the college is opened to returning students. They are received by the Wardens of the various halls and a Reception Committee of upper classmen. Appointments with the President of the College, who wishes to interview all new students, should be made promptly at the office of the Secretary and Registrar and appointments with the Dean should also be made. These interviews with the President and the Dean begin immediately, and registration of courses is concluded before the college year officially opens. The new students are made familiar with the intricacies of the library, take their tests, their medical and physical examinations, and become at home in the college before the stress of the first days of academic work. Freshman Week

The Student's Association for Self-Government, organized in 1892, controls the conduct of the students in all matters except those which are purely academic and which affect the management of the halls of residence, or the student body as a whole. All undergraduate students of Bryn Mawr College are members of this association. Conduct

The college reserves the right to exclude at any time students whose conduct or academic standing it regards as undesirable; in such cases the fees due or already paid to the college will be neither refunded nor remitted in whole or in part. College Regulations

In case of emergency the college assumes the right to take all responsibility.

Regular attendance at classes is expected of all undergraduates; an unreasonable number of unexcused absences will be penalized. Attendance

The absolute integrity of all work is demanded of every student. No student shall give or receive any assistance in an examination or written quiz or hold any communication with another student. The rules governing written work are published for each freshman and are publicly announced at the beginning of each semester and before each examination period. Any infraction of the rules, regardless of motive, or any action contrary to their spirit, constitutes an offense. Examination Regulations

Schedule

While the required studies leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts are not prescribed for any special year in the college course, students are advised to plan their work carefully with reference to the lecture schedule so that a conflict of hours will not prevent them from electing the advanced courses they wish. For example, students who elect English as their major subject should take the required English courses their first and second years because they must have completed this work before entering the major course in English. Students electing a scientific group, such as chemistry and biology, should arrange their work to avoid possible conflict in laboratory hours.

REQUIREMENTS FOR DEGREE OF BACHELOR OF ARTS

The full course of undergraduate study leads to the degree of Bachelor of Arts. The basis of credit is the "unit," which represents one-quarter of the student's time for one year, or approximately ten hours of work a week, including class meetings.

Degree of Bachelor of Arts

Every candidate for the degree of Bachelor of Arts must have attended college classes in Bryn Mawr College for a period of four years*; must have passed examinations on work amounting to sixteen units; and must have obtained an examination grade above that of "passed," that is, the grade of merit or over, on half of these sixteen units. In her major subject she must have an average of merit in the first two years of major work. She must have a reading knowledge of French and German, and must also have fulfilled the requirements of the department of Physical Education.

STUDIES LEADING TO THE DEGREE OF BACHELOR OF ARTS

The following course of study must be pursued by every candidate for the degree of Bachelor of Arts:†

Ancient Language (Greek or Latin), one unit. Students entering on Latin and three-point Greek may substitute Elementary French or German for the Required Ancient Language.‡ These courses may not be taken later than the junior year.

*Required
Studies*

English, two units. In connection with these courses students are required to attend the courses in English diction, one-half hour a week for two years.

Philosophy, one-half unit.

Psychology, one-half unit.

Science, one unit. For students who major in Science a choice between Science and Mathematics as a required study is permitted.

Major Subject with Allied Subjects, six and one-half units. All students must take at least three and one-half units in the major subject: one unit in the first year, one and one-half or two units in the second year, and one unit in advanced work. Students of more than average ability will be expected to take more than one unit of advanced work; and students who, in the opinion of the department show special promise, will be recommended for honours work.

*Major
Courses*

* By permission of the Curriculum Committee of the Faculty, obtained in advance, work done at some other college of high standing may in special cases be submitted for one of the four years of required attendance at classes. See pages 31 and 32.

† A student choosing Greek as her major subject, and not wishing to study Latin, may substitute one unit of advanced Greek, or of French, or Italian, or Spanish, or German for the required Ancient Language.

‡ A student choosing Latin as her major subject, and not wishing to study Greek, may substitute one unit of advanced Latin, or of French, or Italian, or Spanish, or German for the required Ancient Language.

§ For a number of years no Elementary French course has been offered by the College. Students who wish to substitute Elementary French for the Ancient Language requirement, as allowed by the above rule, may offer Elementary French, prepared without attendance on college classes, as advanced standing, in an examination to be taken not later than the beginning of the junior year.

Free
Elective
Courses

Free Elective Courses, four and one-half units, to be chosen by the student. The only limitation is that imposed by the prerequisites of the courses selected, and any courses open to the individual student as free electives may be taken without the remainder of the courses of which they may form a part.

Visitors

Students who wish to attend a course regularly without being formally registered must obtain permission from the Dean. No one may attend a course for which she is not eligible as a regular student. The Dean is expected to limit the number of courses a student may visit; and any instructor may notify the Dean that his courses are not open to such students.

Course in Hygiene

A Course in Hygiene of one hour a week for one semester, to be taken in addition to the regular four units of college courses but not counting in the required sixteen units, must be attended by all candidates for the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

Reading Knowledge of French and German

A Reading Knowledge of French and German is required of all students. The language which the student offers at entrance is known as the First Foreign Language, and the other as the Second Foreign Language. The First Foreign Language must be offered for examination in the autumn or spring of the junior year. Students failing to pass this must present themselves for re-examination on the first or second Saturday of their senior year. Any student who receives the grade of Failure will be prevented from receiving her degree at the end of her senior year. She will not be allowed to present herself for a third examination before the autumn of the following year, but may present herself for any subsequent examination. Any student receiving the grade of Condition must register for a course under the direction of the department. She may then take a third examination in the spring of her senior year. The Second Foreign Language may be taken in any fall or spring after entrance up to the end of the junior year. A student who fails the examination may not offer herself for re-examination until the following fall.*

Extra-curriculum
Courses

Extra-curriculum supervised reading in French and in German, conducted by regular members of the respective departments without charge to the students, may be taken if desired by students in either French or German.

Tatular Statement

The studies required for a degree may be tabulated as follows:

1	2	3	4	5	6
English. Two units	Philosophy and Psychology. One unit	Science: Physics or Chemistry, or Geology, or Biology. One unit	Ancient Language (Greek or Latin). One unit	Major and Allied Subjects. Six and one-half units	Elective Courses. Four and one-half units

* A student who offers Latin and Greek at entrance may count both French and German as Second Foreign Language.

Required courses may be taken in any year with the exception of the required course in the Ancient Language, which must be completed before the end of the Junior year.

In order to give more time for advanced studies and to lighten the college course, students are permitted to take examinations in certain subjects included in the course without attending the college classes in these subjects. Trigonometry, solid geometry, and elementary Greek, French, or German, or first year Latin may be taken in this way if offered not later than the beginning of the junior year. A student who can furnish proof that she has acquired advanced knowledge of French, Italian, or Spanish, or German, is permitted to take examinations for advanced standing in reading and composition in these languages, but only in the first three weeks after entering college.

*Advanced
Standing*

Students not wishing to study for a degree are permitted to elect any of the undergraduate studies for which they have been fitted by previous training. If at any time a degree should be desired, such students will be given full credit for all courses leading to the degree.

SCHOLARSHIP GRADES

1. Grades are assigned with the following significances:

*Scholarship
Grades*

High Credit (H. C.).....Work distinguished for its excellence.

Credit (C.).....Work above the average; superior work.

Merit (M.).....Average work, work done by median group neither superior nor inferior.

Passed (P.).....Work below the average.

Conditioned (Con.).....Unsatisfactory work the deficiencies of which may be met by passing a condition examination.

Failed (F. F.).....Unsatisfactory work, the deficiencies of which may not be met by passing a condition examination.

2. This system of marking is the basis of the Honour Point system:

1 unit of Merit.....	4 honour points.
1 unit of Credit.....	8 honour points.
1 unit of High Credit.....	12 honour points.

CURRICULUM

There are offered each year to undergraduates major courses in the following subjects: Greek, Latin, English, French, Italian, Spanish, German, Modern History, Economics and Politics, Philosophy, Psychology, Classical Archæology, History of Art, Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry, Geology, and Biology; and elective courses in the above and in Biblical Literature, Social Economy, Education, and Music.

Major Courses

In each fully organized department there is the following course: one unit of first year work, one and one-half or two units of second year work, and advanced work according to the needs of the department. Every candidate for a degree is required to take three years of work in her major subject, and at least two units of allied subjects. The object of this system is to enable the student to acquire the foundations of a specialist's knowledge; and the required courses, namely, English, Philosophy and Psychology, and Science, and an ancient language are intended to insure a more liberal training than could be obtained if every student combined elective studies without restriction.

Required Courses

The required courses in English and in an ancient language serve as a general introduction to the study of language and literature. The required course in science permits the student of chemistry and biology to pursue an advanced course in one of these branches, or to take a first year course in physics, and gives, for one year at least, to the student of history and literature the same kind of instruction and discipline as is received by the scientific student. The courses in philosophy and psychology form a general introduction to the study of the laws, conditions, and history of thought.

Free Elective Courses

All first year courses that do not presuppose required courses may be elected by any student, and special free elective courses of one unit and one-half unit are offered in many departments.

Advanced Courses

Advanced courses are open only to students who have completed the first and second year major work in the subject.

Honours

Most departments offer honours work to students who have shown exceptional ability in the first and second year courses. This work consists of advanced courses accepted as honours courses by the Curriculum Committee; or of study carried on independently under the guidance of individual instructors; or of a combination of the two. Credit will be given in accordance with the amount of work done, and reports or special examinations covering the field will be required. Students who have received credit for as much as one and one-half units of honours work may be recommended for their degree with distinction in the subject.

COURSES OF STUDY

Biblical Literature

PROFESSOR:

HENRY JOEL CADBURY, Ph.D.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department includes three units of free elective courses.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

The Religion of Israel;

The Life and Teaching of Jesus: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One unit.

Free
Elective
Courses

(Given in each year)

The Religion of Israel is given during the first semester. It includes a survey of the development of religious ideas and practices among the Hebrews during the early monarchy, under the influence of the prophets, and in the beginning of Judaism. The Life and Teachings of Jesus is given during the second semester. It is a discussion of the principal problems presented by the gospels for a recovery of an understanding of the career and character of Jesus of Nazareth.

These courses may be elected separately each with one-half unit of credit.

Rapid Reading in the Greek New Testament: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

This course is open to students who have passed the matriculation examination in Greek or attended the elementary course in Greek. It is intended to give a knowledge of Biblical Greek and facility in reading. The course is varied so that it may be pursued through several semesters.

New Testament Introduction: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in 1930-31 and again in 1932-53)

A general study of the origin and character of the New Testament writings.

Old Testament Introduction: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

A general study of the origin and character of the Old Testament writings.

Elementary Hebrew: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given when requested)

GRADUATE WORK

Graduate work is offered in this department. Further information will be found in The Calendar of Graduate Courses.

Biology

PROFESSOR:

*DAVID HILT TENNENT, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATES:

MARY SUMMERFIELD GARDINER, Ph.D.

DOROTHEA EGLESTON SMITH, Ph.D.

To be appointed.

DEMONSTRATOR:

J. GORDON CARLSON, A.B.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department includes one unit of first year work and one and one-half units of second year work. Advanced work is offered in Embryology of the Vertebrates, Cytology, Biochemistry and Physiology, with a minimum of one unit of credit and a maximum of two units for each course. One unit is offered in the Biology of Bacteria and Protozoa and one-half unit in Theoretical Biology, to which students may be admitted after completion of the first year's course.

At the end of the second year of work a student may be recommended for Honours in Biology. Honours work may be done in Embryology, Cytology, Biochemistry or Physiology, and the satisfactory completion of at least two units of honours work entitles the student to receive her degree with Distinction in Biology.

The work of the first year course forms a general introduction to the subject through a broad comparative study of living things (general biology). In the second year the foundation of a more minute knowledge of animal morphology and physiology is laid. The third-year work is devoted to a study of more advanced subjects and to the practical investigation of simple problems. A knowledge of the elements of physics and chemistry is desirable for students entering any course in biology.

FIRST YEAR

Major Course

Lectures and Laboratory Work in General Biology.

1st Semester.

Lectures: Dr. Gardiner.

Laboratory: Dr. Gardiner and Mr. Carlson.

2nd Semester.

Lectures: An instructor to be appointed.

Laboratory: An instructor to be appointed and Mr. Carlson.

The object of this course is to give the student clear conceptions of the fundamental principles of morphology and physiology and of the relations of the biological sciences to one another and to other branches of science. The laboratory practice is designed to enable the student, as far as possible, to examine for herself the facts discussed in the lectures, to encourage the habit of exact observation, and to impart a knowledge of the methods of practical work.

*Granted leave of absence for the year 1930-31. The courses offered by Dr. Tennent will be given by Dr. Gardiner.

The general subject is treated in two courses which supplement each other and must be taken together. The work is designed not simply to teach the elements of zoölogy and botany, as commonly understood, but in addition to treat plants and animals with constant reference to one another, both as to structure and as to mode of action. Emphasis is therefore laid on the essential facts of comparative morphology and physiology (general biology) as illustrated by a thorough study of a few types, rather than on the minutiae of classification.

During the first semester, the student studies a number of animals and plants, so arranged as to form a natural progressive introduction to the general principles of biology. The student makes a detailed examination of unicellular organisms, and from these proceeds gradually to the complex conditions of structure and function in higher animals and plants. During the second semester attention is given mainly to the biology of higher animals. Two-thirds of the semester is devoted to a study of the morphology and physiology of vertebrates; the remainder of the semester to a study of the embryology of the frog, and in greater detail, that of the chick.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: One and one-half units

Lectures and Laboratory Work in Invertebrate Zoölogy and Vertebrate Anatomy and Physiology.

1st Semester.

Lectures on Zoölogy of Invertebrates: An instructor to be appointed.

Laboratory Work: An instructor to be appointed and Mr. Carlson.

This course extends the work of the first year so as to include a survey of the morphology and taxonomy of the main groups of invertebrate animals.

2nd Semester.

Lectures on Elementary Physiology: Dr. Gardiner.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Gardiner and Mr. Carlson.

The aim of this course is to present the facts of animal physiology. Digestion, respiration, circulation, nervous and muscular activity are studied from the point of view of the processes themselves rather than that of the physical and chemical principles underlying them. The laboratory time is devoted to a study of the anatomy of the cat, both from dissection and from histological preparations, and very briefly, to methods and practice of physiological experimentation, especially of muscle and nerve. A previous knowledge of chemistry is not required.

OR

2nd Semester.

Introductory General Physiology: Dr. Smith.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Smith.

In this course vital processes are studied from a chemical as well as from a biological standpoint. Knowledge of chemistry equivalent to that given by the first-year course in chemistry is prerequisite. The aim of the laboratory work is to develop physiological technique as well as an understanding of the functions studied. There are three hours of lectures and six hours of laboratory work each week.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

The advanced courses are designed to extend the work of the first two years and to offer the student the opportunity for specialization in chosen fields. By special arrangement any of the advanced courses may be extended to one and one-half or two units of credit.

Embryology of Vertebrates: Dr. Tennent.

Credit: One unit

(Given in 1932-33)

This course consists of lectures, assigned reading, and laboratory work on the embryology of vertebrates. The lectures deal with the development of specific forms and with theoretical questions of embryological interest. The department has material for the study of the development of Amphioxus, Ascidian, Amia, Lepidosteus, Squalus, Ctenolabrus, Necturus, Rana, Chrysemys, Chick, and Pig. At least six hours of laboratory work are required.

*Advanced
Courses*

The course is divided as follows: Early stages of Development is the subject of the first semester and Organogeny is the subject of the second semester.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1930-31)

This course consists of a study of the structure of protoplasm, the structure of the cell, the phenomena of cell division, maturation, and fertilization. Both plant and animal cells are studied, and instruction is given in methods of preparing cytological material for microscopical examination. At least six hours of laboratory work are required.

Biochemistry: Dr. Smith.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

This course deals with the simpler aspects of the chemistry of living organisms. The properties and reactions of substances of biological importance are studied. Since a knowledge of organic chemistry is essential, students are advised to study organic chemistry first. However, in exceptional cases this course may be taken in the same year with second-year chemistry. There are two lectures and six hours of laboratory work each week.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Free Elective Courses

Biology of Bacteria and Protozoa: Dr. Smith.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1930-31)

During the first semester the time is devoted to an introduction to general bacteriology, covering the routine bacteriological technique and a consideration of the principles of immunity and infection. During the second semester problems of growth and cell division of bacteria and protozoa are treated. The rôle of bacteria in nature and their economic importance are also discussed. Some special work is assigned to each student. The first year course in Biology is prerequisite. There are two lectures and six hours of laboratory work each week.

Theoretical Biology: Dr. Tennent.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Not given in 1930-31)

This course deals with the development of theories of biology. It is open to students who have completed the first year course in Biology. It will not be given for less than five students.

HONOURS WORK

Honours

Honours work in any of the advanced fields is offered to qualified students.

GRADUATE WORK

Graduate work is offered in this department. Seminaries are arranged in a three-year cycle. Further information will be found in The Calendar of Graduate Courses.

* Granted leave of absence for the year 1930-31. The courses announced by Dr. Tennent will be given by Dr. Gardiner.

Chemistry

PROFESSOR:	JAMES LLEWELLYN CRENSHAW, Ph.D.
ASSOCIATE:	NELSON KELLOGG RICHTMYER, Ph.D.
INSTRUCTOR:	EDITH HAMILTON LANMAN, M.A.
DEMONSTRATOR:	LOUISE FROST HODGES CRENSHAW, A.B.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department covers five and one-half units of work; it includes two and one-half units of undergraduate first and second year work and three units of advanced courses and honours work open only to graduates and to undergraduates who have completed the major course in chemistry.

The first year's work is a general introduction to the subject. Lectures are given in inorganic chemistry and qualitative analysis.

In the second year particular attention is paid to the quantitative side of chemical phenomena. The lectures are on physical and organic chemistry.

The advanced undergraduate courses are intended to prepare students for independent work, particular attention being paid to laboratory methods.

Allied Subjects:

Biology
Geology
Mathematics
Physics

FIRST YEAR

*1st Semester.Credit: One unitMajor
Course*

Introduction to General Chemistry: Dr. Crenshaw.

Laboratory Work: Miss Lanman and Mrs. Crenshaw.

The course does not presuppose any knowledge of chemistry. In the class-room the nature of chemical action is taught by lectures that are illustrated by a series of experiments in which the more important substances are made and transformed, the time being spent largely on the non-metals. Throughout the semester the lectures and the laboratory work are complementary.

2nd Semester.

The Chemistry of the Metals: Dr. Richtmyer.

Laboratory Work: Miss Lanman and Mrs. Crenshaw.

This course deals with the properties of the more important metallic elements and their compounds. The methods of separation employed in the laboratory are discussed, and the fundamental principles upon which these methods of separation are based are emphasized. The lectures are supplemented by required private reading.

The laboratory work consists of qualitative analyses. The students are first taught to identify the basic and acidic constituents of solutions; later they are required to carry out analyses of a few alloys and salts.

SECOND YEAR

1st Semester.Credit: One and one-half units

Organic Chemistry;

Laboratory Work: Dr. Richtmyer.

The methods of preparation and the behaviour of the various classes of organic compounds are studied. Emphasis is laid on the processes of reasoning by which the constitution of organic compounds is established.

The laboratory work is devoted to organic preparations. Simple representatives of the more important classes of organic compounds are first prepared and their typical reactions studied. After a familiarity with the methods of dealing with organic substances has been gained, syntheses of a few of the more complex organic compounds are carried out.

2nd Semester.

Lectures on Elementary Physical Chemistry: Dr. Crenshaw.

Laboratory Work: Miss Lanman.

In this course chemical facts are considered from the point of view of common and exact relations and from these relations the laws and theories of chemistry are developed. Special attention is paid to the atomic theory, the laws of gases, the theory of solutions and electrochemistry. Private reading and outside preparation amounting to at least three and a half hours are required.

The laboratory work consists of quantitative analyses. Each exercise is important in itself and illustrates some principle or involves some manipulation of general application in analytical work.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Advanced Courses

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to select some of these courses.

Physical Chemistry: Dr. Crenshaw.

Credit: One and one-half units.(Given in each year)

The aim of the lectures is to extend the student's knowledge of physical chemistry and to lay a foundation for independent work in this subject. The lectures are supplemented by assigned reading and reports and are intended to give a general outline of the subject. The solution of a large number of problems is required.

The laboratory work is designed to prepare the students for physio-chemical research. When this course is offered as a seminary the student is required to devote to it one-third of her time. By special arrangement this course may count for more than one and one-half units of credit.

Advanced Organic Chemistry: Dr. Richtmyer.

Credit: One unit(Given in each year)

The course consists of lectures, assigned reading with occasional reports, and laboratory work. During the past year the following subjects received particular emphasis: quaternary ammonium compounds, simple types of unsaturation, the ketenes, conjugated systems, the quinones, non-benzenoid cyclic hydrocarbons, the properties of aromatic compounds, heterocyclic systems, the carbohydrates, stereochemistry. The laboratory work includes a study of the more important synthetical reactions of organic chemistry.

By special arrangement this course may count for more than one unit of credit.

Inorganic Chemistry: Miss Lanman.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

Selected topics in inorganic chemistry are discussed in detail, and parallel reading is required. The laboratory work consists of advanced quantitative analyses. By special arrangement this course may count for more than one unit of credit.

HONOURS WORK

Students specially recommended by the department may register for honours work in any one of the three advanced courses. A minimum of one and one-half units of work must be taken in the particular advanced course chosen.

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR AND ACTING

HEAD OF THE DEPARTMENT:

MARY HAMILTON SWINDLER, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR:

†PRENTICE DUELL, M.Arch.

INSTRUCTOR:

History of Art

Latin

FIRST YEAR

Credit: One unit

1st Semester.

Greek Sculpture: Dr. Swindler.

A critical study of the rise, perfection, and ultimate developments of sculpture in Greece. The course is intended as a general introduction to the principles and appreciation of sculpture.

2nd Semester.

Ancient Painting: Dr. Swindler.

The course traces the development of ancient painting. The material studied includes Egyptian and Cretan frescoes, Greek vases, Pompeian wall paintings and the paintings from Etruscan sites.

*Major
Course*

* Granted leave of absence to fill the post of Director of the School for Classical Studies in Athens.

† Granted leave of absence for the years 1929-1931. The courses announced by Mr. Duell will be given by an instructor to be appointed.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: One and one-half units

Ancient Architecture: Mr. Duell.*

Credit: One unit.

The introductory lectures deal with Egyptian, Babylonian, Assyrian, Persian and Ægean building. The remainder of the semester is devoted to a detailed study of the principles and practice of Greek architecture until late Hellenistic times. Emphasis is laid on architectural evolution and its connection with the civilization of the period.

During the second semester the Architecture of Rome and the Roman Empire down to the late Imperial times are studied.

Topography of Ancient Athens and Rome: Dr. Swindler and Mr. Duell.*

Credit: One-half unit.

During the first semester the monuments and the life of ancient Athens are studied; during the second semester the course deals with the art and material civilization of Rome through Republican and Imperial times. It is intended as an archaeological background to Latin studies and as an introduction to Roman art, especially sculpture and painting.

Egypt and Crete: Dr. Carpenter.†

A general study of the artistic and material aspects of the ancient Egyptian and the Cretan and Mycenaean civilizations. This course may be combined with Ancient Architecture, Ancient Rome, or Greek Minor Arts.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSE

*Advanced
Course*

Crete, Mycenae and the Islands from 3000 to 1100 B. C.: Miss Swindler.

Credit: One unit.(Given in each year)

FREE ELECTIVE COURSE

*Free

Course*

American Archaeology: Mr. Duell.*

Credit: One unit.

The first semester deals with the Pueblo, village, and camp dwelling Indians of the Southwest; the second semester with the Mayas, Toltecs, and Aztecs of Mexico and the Incas of Peru.

HONOURS WORK

Honours

Honours work is offered by the department for students who have completed two years of work in the department with distinction.

In 1930-31 the work deals with Greek Vases. Various styles and masters are studied and some of the problems connected with Greek Vases, such as Kalos names, Etruscan trade relations and their significance, and the importance of Greek Vases for certain aspects of Greek life, e.g. of the vases dealing with the theatre and with religious subjects.

The work is conducted by means of reports, reading assigned in various fields and discussion of topics.

GRADUATE WORK

Graduate work is offered in this department. Further information will be found in The Calendar of Graduate Courses.

* Granted leave of absence for the years 1929-1931. The courses announced by Mr. Duell will be given by an instructor to be appointed.

† On leave of absence.

Economics and Politics

PROFESSORS:

MARION PARRIS SMITH, Ph.D.

CHARLES GHEQUIERE FENWICK, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR:

ROGER HEWES WELLS, Ph.D.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department includes four units of first and second year work; one-half unit of free elective work and two or more units of advanced work. The object of the undergraduate courses in economics and politics is three-fold: first, to describe the development of economic and political institutions; second, to trace the history of economic and political thought; and third, to consider the practical economic and political questions of the day. Instruction is given by lectures, individual and group conferences, assigned readings, oral and written quizzes, written reports, and such special class-room exercises and field trips as the different subjects require.

Allied Subjects:

History
Labour Movements
Mathematics
Philosophy
Psychology

FIRST YEAR

Credit: Two units

The Economic World: Dr. M. P. Smith and Dr. Wells. Credit: One unit.

(This course may be taken as a free elective.)

The object of the course is to familiarize students with the economic world in which they live. Among the topics studied are the following: Economic Geography and Natural Resources of the United States; Population and Immigration; Manufacturing; Labor Problems; Transportation; Marketing; Money and Banking; International Trade; and Public Finance.

The course is not only intended as a foundation for the students who wish to specialize in economics, but also for the students whose interests lie in other fields and yet who desire a survey of the more important problems of economic life.

Modern Governments: Dr. Fenwick and Dr. Wells.

Credit: One unit.

(This course may be taken as a free elective.)

The course is designed to present the structure and functions of federal, state and municipal government in the United States, together with an examination of the party system and its effects upon the actual operations of government. It is followed by a comparative study of the leading European governments, chiefly those of Great Britain, France, and Germany.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: Two units

History of Economic Thought and Recent Economic Problems: Dr. M. P. Smith. Credit: One unit.

(This course may be taken only by students who have completed the first year course in economics.)

The object of the course is to trace the history of western thought on such subjects as the just distribution of wealth, property and slavery, capital and usury, the wages of labor, and value and price; and to familiarize the students with modern economic theory. The latter part of the course is devoted to a study of selected problems of the modern economic world.

*Major
Course*

History of Political Thought and Present Political Problems: Dr. Fenwick and Dr. Wells. Credit: One unit.

(This course may be taken only by students who have completed the first year course in politics.)

The first semester of the course is devoted to the history of western political thought and the writings of some of the more important political thinkers are studied in detail. During the second semester, the vital problems of modern government, both theoretical and practical, are examined. The course inquires into the authority of the state and the legal and moral basis upon which it rests. It analyzes the constitutional foundations of modern democracy and the newer forms of organization which are replacing the older governmental machinery. In particular, attention is given to the new fields into which government is extending its control, and the limitations in this respect imposed by the Constitution of the United States.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Advanced Courses

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate courses and graduate work. Since the amount of time given to undergraduate courses varies in different colleges, graduate students often find it advisable to elect some of these courses.

American Economic and Social Problems: Dr. M. P. Smith.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1930-31)

(This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year courses in economics.)

The object of the course is to give advanced students training in the use of source material for economic and social studies and in the methods of research requisite for graduate or professional studies. A few introductory lectures trace the history of certain social and economic events in the United States from 1865 to the present time; but the main work of the course consists in studies made by the students and presented to the class for discussion. Among the subjects included are Changes in Urban and Rural Population, Development of City Life, Problems of Country Life, Immigration and Race Problems, Food Distribution and Marketing, Standards of Living, Newer Phases of the Unemployment Problem.

American Constitutional Law: Dr. Fenwick.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1930-31)

(This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year courses in politics.)

This is a strictly legal course devoted to an analysis and criticism of the leading decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States. The method followed consists in the assignment of individual cases for oral report and discussion, together with longer written reports covering a group of related cases.

International Law: Dr. Fenwick.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

(This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year courses in politics.)

The object of the course is to examine the existing rules of international law in order to determine their origin, their general observance, and their applicability to the changed conditions of modern life. Special stress is laid upon the interpretation of international law by the United States and upon the organization and administration of the League of Nations.

Money and Banking: An instructor to be appointed.

Credit: One unit.

(The course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year courses in economics.)

Modern Political Thought: Dr. Wells.

Credit: One unit.

(This course is open to students who have completed the first and second year courses in politics.)

The course is devoted to a detailed study of western political thought from Machiavelli to the present time. It was given in 1929-30.

Public Opinion and Political Parties: Dr. Wells.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

Municipal Institutions: Dr. Wells.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

FREE ELECTIVE COURSE

Elements of Law: Dr. Fenwick.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in 1930-31)

(This course may be elected only by students who have completed the first course in politics or in economics or in history.)

The object of this course is to familiarize the student with the principles and technical terms of those branches of private law with which the ordinary citizen is brought into contact. The topics covered include Persons and Domestic Relations, Contracts, Torts, Real and Personal Property, and the chief forms of procedure. The lectures are supplemented by a study and discussion of court cases bearing on the subject.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Rogers.

*Free
Elective
Courses*

For a description of this course see the Department of Psychology, p. 86. This course may be elected by students who have attended the second year course in Experimental Psychology and if taken in combination with that course the credit is one and one-half units.

Child Psychology: Dr. Forest.Credit: One unit.

This course deals with the psychological aspect of child development. A study is made of the mental and emotional characteristics of growing children, with special reference to the problems of training and guidance arising at various age levels.

Principles of Education: Dr. Forest.Credit: One unit.

This course treats of the principles basic to educational procedure. The origin and significance of present controversies in education is presented during the first semester through a study of the rise and development of educational institutions. During the second semester special emphasis is placed upon the philosophy and the practice of modern progressive schools.

The undergraduate instruction offered in English covers lectures and recitations, and includes lectures on composition and literature required of every candidate for the Bachelor's degree; five units of second year and advanced English, which presuppose as much information as is contained in the required course; three units of free elective work; one unit of elective work in English diction; and honours work.

The required course consists of lectures on English literature; collateral reading assigned in illustration of the lectures; and a study of the principles of composition with practice in writing. The first year course must be completed before the second year course is taken.

Since the first year course in English Literature is required of all students for the degree, those majoring in English must complete four units of second year and advanced work. They must take one of the courses in Old or Middle English and students who wish to specialize in the earlier period must take at least one course in the later period. Any of the second year courses may be taken separately as free electives by students who have completed the first year course.

* Granted leave of absence for the year 1930-31.

COMPREHENSIVE EXAMINATION

A comprehensive examination over the general field of English Literature will be required of all students electing English as a major.

ENGLISH COMPOSITION

Credit: One unit

English Composition: Dr. Glen, Miss Goodell, Mrs. Wakeman, Miss Woodworth, Miss Collins.

*Required
Courses*

A study of the forms of composition based upon reading in the prose and poetry of the Nineteenth Century and the present time.

The Principles of Articulation: Mr. King.

This course deals with a system of oral gymnastics, by which a distinct, firm, and fluent articulation can be acquired. The means of instruction for improving the quality of the speaking voice, and for acquiring a correct production, are pointed out. Special attention is paid to the cure of nasality and other vicious habits of speaking. The common errors of articulation and the vulgarisms constantly heard in every-day speech are clearly defined. A special class will be formed to assist those students whose defects of articulation are so marked as to make it difficult for them to work with the other members of the class. This course is required for the degree and must be taken by all students registered for the course in English Literature, but does not count in the required sixteen units.

FIRST YEAR

Credit: One unit

English Literature: *Miss Donnelly, Miss Garvin, Miss Goodell, Mrs. Wakeman, Miss Woodworth.

Credit: One unit.

*Major
Course*

A survey of English literature from the Early English Period to the Romantic Movement. The lectures are supplemented by class discussions and written tests. The reading includes the best and most representative works in the field of the lectures.

The Sonant Properties of Speech: Mr. King.

This course consists of a detailed study of the principles of inflection, pitch, and rhythm, together with special treatment of emphasis and rules on pausing. Students are required from time to time to read aloud in order that individual faults may be corrected. This course is required for the degree and must be taken by all students registered for the course in English Literature, but does not count in the required sixteen units.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: Two units

English Literature of the Middle Ages: Dr. Herben.

Credit: One unit.

Sufficient instruction is given in Middle English to enable the student to read ordinary texts intelligently. Lectures and recitations deal with the important currents of medieval English literature with special emphasis upon Chaucer and his contemporaries. Reports are required from each student.

* Granted leave of absence for the year 1930-31.

English Literature of the Romantic Period: Dr. Chew. Credit: One unit.

The eighteenth-century background; the poetry of the period; the essay and novel; and the influence of continental literatures upon English literature are the chief topics in the course. Reports are required from each student.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Advanced Courses

English Critics of the Nineteenth Century: Miss Donnelly.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32 and again in 1933-34)

Carlyle, Ruskin, Arnold, Pater, and, if time allows, two or three other writers are studied with regard to their theories of criticism and their influence upon the thought of their time. Reports are required from each student.

English Literature from Dryden to Johnson: Miss Donnelly.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1932-33 and again in 1934-35)

Dryden, Swift, Pope, Addison, Johnson, and, if time allows, other writers are studied, with regard to the development of classicism. Reports are required from each student.

English Literature of the Seventeenth Century: Miss Glen.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1930-31)

The literature of the seventeenth century, with especial stress on Milton and the lyric poets. Certain prose writers are also studied.

Old English Literature; Beowulf: Dr. Herben.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1930-31 and again in 1932-33)

The first part of the course is devoted to an outline of Old English grammar. Graded selections of Old English prose and poetry are read, followed by the Beowulf entire.

Middle English Romances: Dr. Herben.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32 and again in 1933-34)

Selected romances in Middle English are read. The lectures deal with the development of Romance literature in Europe, with special reference to the romances of the Arthurian cycle.

Shakespeare; Elizabethan Drama: Dr. Chew.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

A large number of plays from the dramatists from Lyly and Marlowe to Ford and Shirley are read. The lectures deal in part with aspects of contemporary life, as reflected in the drama. Reports are required from each student attending the course.

Private Reading.

For students who elect English as a major. Reading under direction to supplement the regular courses for which a time allowance is made. Occasional conferences are held.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Free Elective Courses

Rhetoric: Dr. Crandall.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

The course consists of the study of rhetoric, with parallel reading and analysis of English prose and verse, and the writing of illustrative papers. The course is open to students who have completed the required course in English composition.

Argumentation: Dr. Crandall.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

The writing of arguments, the study of the form with reference to other types of writing, and other problems connected with argumentation, formal and informal, make up the work of the course. The course is open to students who have completed the required course in English composition.

The Short Story: Dr. Crandall.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in 1930-31 and again in 1932-33)

The course deals with various forms of narrative, more especially the short story, and includes a study of the work of representative authors, both English and French. The course is open to students who have completed the required course in English composition.

Criticism: Dr. Crandall.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in 1931-32 and again in 1933-34)

Versification: Mrs. King.

Credit: One-half unit

(Given in each year)

The course is not historical but theoretical, and students are required to write short exercises in verse every week. The course is open to students who have completed the required course in English composition.

Play Writing: Mr. Hughes.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in 1930-31)

The modern drama is studied in connection with the writing of plays.

English Poetry from 1850 to 1900: Miss Garvin.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

The course covers the development of poetry from Browning until the present day. In the modern period, special emphasis is laid upon Robert Bridges and the significant poets of the past twenty years.

General Reading of Prose Authors: Mr. King.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in 1930-31 and again in 1932-33)

This course is open only to those students who have attended the lectures in English diction given in the general course.

Reading of Shakespeare: Mr. King.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in 1931-32 and again in 1933-34)

This course is open only to those students who have attended the lectures in English diction given in the general course. A special study is made of the principles of correct delivery of blank verse. The needs of those students who expect to teach English literature and desire to read Shakespeare to their pupils are given special attention.

HONOURS WORK

In the second year and advanced courses work in special fields or subjects is offered to students who are recommended by the department for honours in English. Such work is related to the courses the student is following but adapted to her individual interests. It consists of independent reading, reports and conferences, followed by special examinations.

GRACE FRANK, A.B.

JEAN M. F. CANU, Agrégé

MARGARET GILMAN, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATES:

ROBERT TURNER, Docteur d'Université

MADELEINE SOUBEIRAN, Agrégée

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department covers seven units of lectures and recitations a week; it includes two and one-half units of undergraduate first and second year work; three and one-half units of advanced courses, open only to graduates and to undergraduates who have completed the major course in French, and one unit of free elective. All the courses in French except the elective course and the seminars in Old French are conducted in the French language.

ADVANCED STANDING

An advanced standing examination in French, that is an examination taken without attendance on the college classes, may be taken by students in the first three weeks after entering the college. Students who are successful in this examination will receive credit for one-half unit of elective work in French, and, if they enter the first year French course, will be allowed to substitute additional work in literature for the language work of that course.

UNDERGRADUATE STUDY IN FRANCE

Students who have chosen French as their major subject and who have at the end of their Sophomore year completed the major course, may by a joint recommendation of the Dean of the College and the Department of French be allowed to spend their Junior year in France according to the "Delaware Foreign Study Plan."

This plan provides for one year's supervised undergraduate study. The year is divided into two periods, a three-month preliminary period, from the last week in July to the last week in October, and the regular French academic session of eight months, November 1 to June 30. The preliminary period is spent at the University of Nancy. The regular session is spent in Paris, at the University of Paris and the Ecole Libre des Sciences Politiques.

The list of subjects available includes literature, history, history of art and economics. The formal lecture system of the French universities is supplemented by tutorial system classes arranged for the Foreign Study group. Private lessons in composition and diction are given throughout the year.

The students live in French families where they speak the language and gain some knowledge of French life. They also have the advantage of a carefully arranged programme of "extra-curriculum activities," which includes operas and plays, as well as excursions in France and adjacent countries.

Only those students will be recommended who have shown a natural aptitude for the French language, have a high average in their college work and seem in the opinion of the Dean and the Department of French well qualified to represent the college.

Geology

ASSOCIATES:

EDWARD H. WATSON, PH.D.

A. LINCOLN DRYDEN, PH.D.

DEMONSTRATOR:

ELLA-KATE WEMPEL, A.B.

Undergraduate work in this department includes two and one-half units in first and second year work, two units of advanced work and one unit of elective work open to students who have completed the first year course.

To major in geology an undergraduate must take a total of six units in geology and allied subjects. Four units should be in the department of geology and include the following courses: elementary geology and historical geology (one unit), systematic paleontology and structural geology (one and one-half units) or determinative mineralogy (one and one-half units) and one-half unit of optional work in geology. One unit should be in either physics, chemistry, or biology.

Any student wishing to major in geology is advised to take the elementary courses (elementary geology and historical geology) not later than her sophomore year.

Allied Subjects:

Biology
Chemistry
Physics

FIRST YEAR

1st Semester.

Credit: One unit

Elementary Geology;

Field Work and Laboratory Work: Dr. Watson.

*Major
Course*

The lectures deal primarily with the processes that alter the form of the surface of the earth. The effects of the wind, rivers, glaciers, oceans, volcanoes and mountain building forces are considered. During October and November a field excursion is taken every Monday afternoon to localities of geologic interest. These trips illustrate the composition, origin, folding and erosion of rock masses. In the laboratory, which is held during December and January on Monday and Tuesday afternoons from two to four, an elementary study of minerals, rocks and land forms as illustrated by topographic maps is undertaken.

2nd Semester.

Historical Geology;

Field Work and Laboratory Work: Dr. Dryden.

The history of the earth and its inhabitants as read from the record of the rocks. Laboratory work includes a study of characteristic fossils, and geological folios of the United States Geological Survey. In the spring field trips may be substituted for laboratory work. One all day field trip, on Saturday, will be substituted for two half day trips.

SECOND YEAR

1st Semester.

Credit: One and one-half units

Systematic Paleontology;

Laboratory Work: Dr. Dryden.

Invertebrate fossils are studied in detail. Vertebrate fossils and plants are studied more generally. Some field work or reading may be substituted for the laboratory work.

2nd Semester.

Structural Geology;

Laboratory Work: Dr. Watson.

In addition to the laboratory and lectures there is reading of geological literature. A brief summary is made of the various types of geologic structures followed by a detailed study of the Appalachian Mountains, the North American Cordillera, the northwest highlands of Scotland and the Alps. The shape and the mechanics of intrusion of igneous masses are also considered.

OR

Determinative Mineralogy;

Credit: One and one-half units.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Watson.

A systematic study of minerals is made. The various tests are used: physical properties, crystallography, blow-pipe analysis and chemical tests. The various mineral groups are then studied: native elements, sulphides, etc. In the fall and spring some field trips to near-by localities may replace laboratory work. (Students majoring in the Department of Chemistry may take this course without having had any of the first or second year geology courses.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Advanced Courses

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work.

Optical Mineralogy and Descriptive Petrography;

Laboratory Work: Dr. Watson.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

Optical Mineralogy is given during the first semester. The course deals with the principles of optical mineralogy and a full training is given in the emersion method of mineral identification. This course is essential for all courses in petrography and petrology.

Descriptive Petrography is given during the second semester. The course deals with the mineralogy, texture, chemistry, origin, and geographic distribution of igneous rocks.

Prerequisites: elementary geology, historical geology, determinative mineralogy and optical mineralogy.

Stratigraphy and Paleontology;

Laboratory Work: Dr. Dryden.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

Three hours a week are devoted to lectures, six hours a week to laboratory. The work of the first semester consists of lectures and assigned reading in sedimentation. This is studied by a study of the successive formations and their faunas.

Prerequisites: elementary geology, historical geology, systematic paleontology, and structural geology.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSE

Free Elective Course

Glaciology and Advanced Physiography;

Laboratory Work: Dr. Dryden.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

Glaciology is given during the first semester. This course considers the erosive and depositional features of mountain and continental glaciers. Particular emphasis is on the Pleistocene, but the earlier Ice Ages are also considered.

Advanced Physiography is given during the second semester. This course deals with land forms and their origin. Selected areas are also studied.

Prerequisites: elementary geology and historical geology.

A class for beginners, conducted in ten sections.

The purpose of this course is to lay the foundation for a reading knowledge of German. Students are expected to complete this reading knowledge before coming up for the general language examination in German, either by private reading during the summer or, during the following year, under the direction of the German Department in the extra-curriculum course in Supervised Reading.

Students of exceptional ability (Credit or High Credit) are given an opportunity to complete the development of their reading knowledge during the second semester of the course by devoting the majority of their time to reading, meeting the instructor once a week for conference instead of attending classes.

MAJOR COURSE

The major course in German is open to students who have passed the matriculation examination in this subject (Cp. 3) or the Bryn Mawr general reading examination in German and with special permission students who have completed the elementary course in German may be admitted without further examination.

Major Course

FIRST YEAR

The Age of Goethe: Dr. and Mrs. M. M. Diez.

The course includes lectures on the history of German Literature in the Classical and Romantic Periods; collateral reading of the principal works of Goethe, Lessing, Schiller, Kleist, Grillparzer and the Romanticists; intensive study in class of Goethe's shorter poems and Faust. There are exercises in German Composition with private conferences.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: One and one-half units

German Literature: Dr. Diez.

The course includes lectures on the History of German Literature from the beginning to the present time. The first semester is devoted largely to the literature of the Hohenstaufen period, the second semester covers the period from Goethe's death to the present time.

Reading and Composition: Mrs. Jessen.

The course consists of studies in German Style and Composition, based on an intensive study of the Nibelungenlied and the history of the Nibelungen legend; "Kulturkunde" and "Heimatkunst."

The following courses are offered for advanced work and honours, for selection by students in consultation with the department. Each course counts for one-half unit and is given for one semester and it includes an assignment of private reading in Greek texts or work in syntax. One unit of advanced work is the minimum requirement for students who offer Greek as a major subject.

Attic Tragedy;
Pindar and Bacchylides;
Attic Orators;
Rhetoricians: Dr. Sanders.
Plato;
Theocritus;
Melic Poets;
Old Comedy: Dr. Wright.

ASSOCIATE:

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department comprises nine and one-half units; it includes five units of undergraduate first and second year work in modern history and ancient history; one and one-half units of free elective and two units a week of advanced undergraduate courses, open only to graduates and undergraduates who have completed the major course in history and one unit of honours work.

Undergraduate instruction offered in history comprises a general course in the history of Europe followed by several somewhat specialized courses. The first is a prerequisite to any of the others except the courses in ancient history. Students not majoring in history may elect the general course and afterward any of the second year courses. Of the specialized courses two are devoted to civilization of the middle ages and the renaissance, two to continental Europe from the sixteenth to the nineteenth century, three to the history of England and the British Empire, and two to the history of the United States. Somewhat more advanced are courses in Europe since 1870 and the United States since 1865. Concurrent with these is study preparatory for honours.

Whether the courses are general or specialized an attempt is made to teach history as a record of the development of man in his political, economic and social relations. The courses are, therefore, supplementary to other college study of a linguistic, literary, archaeological or artistic nature. Lectures are supplemented by reading of a varied character with little use of summary texts. To develop the student's initiative and independence of judgment, emphasis is put, after the first year, on the preparation of reports and upon the discussion of subjects studied.

For students who have shown marked ability in the first two years of their historical study provision is made for honours work. At the end of the senior year a general examination in history is offered and the satisfactory passing of this examination will entitle the student to receive her degree with Distinction in History.

FIRST YEAR

Mediaeval and Modern Europe: Dr. W. R. Smith, Dr. David and Dr. Robbins.

*Major
Course*

This course is designed not to give a summary view of European history but to select and enlarge upon such aspects of it as are essential to the understanding of the modern world. In consequence, more attention is devoted to the period beginning with the French Revolution than to the preceding centuries. Among the topics considered during the first semester are the ideal of a united Christendom as embodied in the Holy Roman Empire and the Catholic Church, the causes and effects of the Crusades, the rise of national states, the Reformation and the Counter Reformation, the maintenance of a European balance of power, the progress of colonization, the rise of Prussia and of Russia. During the second semester the political and social transformation of Europe which was initiated by the French Revolution is studied. The outcome of the Revolution, the career of Napoleon, the absolutist reaction of the early Nineteenth Century, the successive revolts against this, the formation of modern constitutional governments, the creation of the German Empire and the Kingdom of Italy, the extension of European influence to Asia and Africa, the causes and progress of the World War, and the treatment of social problems of today are among the topics considered. The instruction is given by means of lectures, required reading and discussion.

SECOND YEAR

The second year work in history is arranged in semester courses and the credit for each is one-half unit. The student majoring in history must select as a minimum four of these semester courses and for them she will receive two units of credit.

1st Semester.

History of the Renaissance: Dr. Gray.

An endeavor is made to indicate in what ways mediæval life and thought were transformed into those of modern Europe. Political, economic, literary, artistic and scientific changes, therefore, are studied. Since Italians were prominent in the new movements, most attention is given to Italian history, but the innovations of the North, especially those connected with the new Burgundian State, are not neglected. The period extends in a general way from 1250 to 1527.

History of England to 1485: Dr. David.

This course deals with English history in all its more important aspects from earliest times to the establishment of the Tudor monarchy. The following topics are among those considered: the civilization and institutions of the Anglo-Saxon period, the Norman Conquest and the development of the Anglo-Norman empire, the feudal régime and the national state, English relations with the church, Magna Charta, the origin and growth of Parliament, the rise of the towns and commerce, the Hundred Years' War and the Wars of the Roses, the social, economic and religious aspects of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries.

Continental History from the Sixteenth to the Eighteenth Centuries: Dr. Robbins.

The development of civilization, religion and institutions in Western Europe, together with discussion of such foreign relations and diplomacy as affect their development, are studied.

American Colonial History: Dr. W. R. Smith.

This course deals primarily with the English colonization of America, but some attention is also paid to the early history of Spanish, Portuguese, Dutch and French imperial expansion.

2nd Semester.

Mediæval Civilization: Dr. David.

Building upon the brief treatment of the first year course, this course is designed to give a broader and deeper knowledge of the Middle Ages through a study of selected topics, among which the following may be mentioned: the transformation of ancient culture and of Christianity in their transition from antiquity to the early Middle Ages, the effects of the Germanic invasions, the political, economic and social changes of the ninth and tenth centuries, the Carolingian revival of learning, Byzantine and Moslem civilizations and their influence upon the culture of western Europe, the revival of commerce and the rise of cities, the culmination of mediæval civilization in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries.

History of England since 1485: Dr. Robbins.

Attention is given to the rise and character of Tudor and Stuart absolutism, parliamentary and local government, dynastic ambitions, foreign trade, the prosperity of the towns and the yeomen, the progress of the Reformation, and the complications of the affairs arising from religious changes.

British Imperialism: Dr. W. R. Smith.

This course deals with the external history of the English people: the sea-rovers of the Sixteenth Century; the beginnings of American colonization; the contrast between the old colonial system and the new; the history of Canada, Australasia, South Africa, India, Egypt and other colonies and dependencies; the new imperialism of Beaconsfield and Chamberlain; the present position of England as a world power.

History of the United States since 1783: Dr. W. R. Smith.

The aim of this course is to present the historical background necessary to enable students to discuss intelligently the more important social, industrial, political, and diplomatic problems of the present day. The chief emphasis is placed upon the period since 1850.

The French Revolution and Napoleon: Dr. David.(Not given in 1930-31)

This course treats of the history of France and of Europe from 1789 to 1815. Attention is paid to the broad background of the eighteenth century out of which the French Revolution developed, to the course of the Revolution itself and to the political, economic and social transformation of France and of Europe which resulted from it, to the rise of the military dictatorship under Napoleon and to the course of his long struggle with a hostile Europe, to the influence of Napoleon upon the institutions of France and Europe, and finally to the situation created by his overthrow. It should be noted that this course is no longer conducted, as heretofore, as an advanced course. Instruction is by means of lectures, assigned readings and one written report.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. Since the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses.

Advanced CoursesEurope since 1870: Dr. Gray.Credit: One unit.(Given in each year)

This course is designed for students who wish to know the genesis and setting of contemporary social and political problems. It is of necessity largely concerned with the causes, progress, and effects of the World War. The rise of Germany as a unified industrial state, her rivalry with her neighbours, the consequent formation of alliances, the immediate antecedents of the war, the military and industrial conduct of it, the appearances of revolutionary governments in central and eastern Europe, the consequences of the peace of Versailles, and the strong position of labour in post-bellum society are among the subjects studied. A reading knowledge of French is required.

Special attention is paid to Greece and Rome; but extended consideration is also given to the subject of pre-history, to the early civilizations of western Asia, Egypt, and the Aegean region, and to the influence of environment, race, and culture upon human development. The evolution of civilization as a whole, from earliest times to the Fourth Century A. D., is presented in a single synthesis.

(This and the following course may be taken as free electives and if elected must be continued throughout the year.)

The Roman Empire: Dr. Ballou.Credit: One-half unit(Given in 1930-31)

The course deals with the social, economic, and administrative history of the Empire. The growth and development of the Principate is also traced from the earlier institutions of the Republic, and primary source material is used where available.

HONOURS WORKHonours Work: Dr. H. L. Gray meet Dr. Robbins.Credit: One unit.Honours*

Students admitted to this work meet the instructor each week for the discussion of various topics in the general field of history. These are selected to coordinate their knowledge and to prepare them for the general honours examination to be taken at the end of their senior year. Each student also in each semester undertakes for herself independent historical investigation of a single topic under the immediate direction of the instructor.

History of Art

PROFESSOR:	GEORGINA GODDARD KING, M.A.
ASSOCIATE:	EDWARD S. KING, M.F.A.
INSTRUCTOR:	ELIZABETH H. NORTON, M.A.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department covers five and one-half units. It includes three and one-half units of undergraduate first and second year work, and two units of advanced undergraduate work open to graduate students and to undergraduates who have completed the major course in history of art. Honours work is offered by this department.

All the courses are illustrated with lantern slides, a large collection of photographs is used in the course of study and the photographs are available for review and comparison.

The Art Club, a student organization, offers an extra-curriculum course in drawing and painting on Saturday mornings. The students work individually also during the week. This work is carried on under the auspices of the Department of History of Art.

Major
Course

Italian Painting of the Renaissance from the Middle of the Thirteenth to the Middle of the Sixteenth Century: Miss King.

During the first semester the Italian primitives are studied, chiefly in the schools of Florence, Siena, and Umbria; during the second semester the painters of the High Renaissance, with special attention to those of Venice and the north of Italy, ending with an introduction to Baroque. The course is illustrated with photographs and lantern slides.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: Two units

Painting since the Renaissance.

Credit: One unit.

1st Semester: Miss Norton.

Northern painting. The Flemish primitives and the great masters of Spain and the Low Countries in the Seventeenth Century are studied carefully; some acquaintance with the French and German primitives, and with the art of the Eighteenth Century in France and England is also comprehended in the plan.

2nd Semester: Miss King.

Modern Painting. The course deals with the history of painting since 1800 and comes down to the present year. Students are expected to make trips to Philadelphia and the neighbourhood to study pictures as often as may seem necessary.

Mediæval Architecture: Mr. King.Credit: One unit.

During the first semester the various aspects of Early Christian architecture in the West, in Syria and Asia Minor, the rise of the Byzantine and the evolution of Romanesque architecture in France, Italy, Germany and Spain are studied. The rôle of the allied arts, such as mosaics and sculpture, is considered in the survey.

The second semester, continuing the work of the first, carries the subject of mediæval architecture to its conclusions. The goal is principally French Gothic of the thirteenth century, but the developments in England and Germany are given relatively ample inquiry; those of Italy and Spain somewhat less. The course terminates with Flamboyant and the end of the middle ages. The allied arts of sculpture and stained glass are studied in some detail.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSESRenaissance Sculpture: Miss King.Credit: One unit.Advanced Courses(Given in 1930-31)*

The first semester is devoted to the sculpture of the Italian Renaissance, the second partly to Northern art, and in especial to figure sculpture in France and Spain from the finishing of the Cathedrals to the close of the Renaissance. The great sculptors of Germany are studied carefully in between. The course is illustrated with photographs and lantern slides.

Spanish Primitives: Miss King.Credit: One unit.(Given in 1931-32)

The work begins with a consideration of the Mozarabic and proto-Mudéjar manuscripts and is occupied with the Catalan and Valencian primitives, their sources and their special qualities, for the greater part of the year. Castilian, Leonese and early Sevillian painting are taken into account and the study stops arbitrarily at 1500.

Spanish Architecture: Miss King.Credit: One unit.(Given in 1932-33)

This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year work in history of art, or an equivalent course. After the Visigothic, Reconquest and Mozarabic Churches have been considered, the greater part of the work is devoted to Romanesque and Gothic, with a short study of Mudéjar art in the middle of the year and one later of the special aspects of the Spanish Renaissance.

Mediæval Art: Mr. King.Credit: One unit.(Given in 1930-31)

This course is concerned primarily with the minor arts of the middle ages: manuscript illuminations, ivories, metal work and enamels, mosaics and mural paintings, stained glass, and also sculpture. The implications arising from the introductory treatment of these arts in the second year course in mediæval architecture are followed out. In point of time the course extends from the Early Christian period to the beginning of the Renaissance. The various constituents of the mediæval complex—antique, patristic, barbarian, the Eastern and the Western aspects—are studied in their developments, interactions and in their own right. The guiding principle followed is the evolution of style.

Renaissance and Baroque Architecture: Mr. King.*Credit: One unit.(Given in 1931-32)FREE ELECTIVE COURSE*Art of the Far East: Mr. King.Credit: One-half unit.Free Elective Course*

A general introduction to the history of art in Asia from the earliest times. The architecture, sculpture and painting of China, India and Japan constitute the main burden of the course. Special problems, such as the interrelations between the arts of the Oriental nations and the esthetic differences between the East and West are considered.

Students majoring in history of art are expected to elect this course before being admitted to advanced work.

HONOURS WORK

Honours

Special work is offered to students recommended by the department for honours in history of art, either in Oriental Art, Mediæval Archæology, or in Renaissance and Modern Art. It involves a scheme of reading and individual conferences and includes the preparation of reports and special examinations.

Italian

PROFESSOR:

ANGELINE HELEN LOGRASSO, Ph.D.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department includes two and one-half units of undergraduate first and second year work; one unit of free elective work and one and one-half units of advanced undergraduate work.

An advanced standing examination in Italian, that is, an examination in translation and composition taken without attendance on the college classes, may be taken by students in the first three weeks after entering college. Depending on the result of this examination credit will be given for all or part of the first or second year Italian courses. Credit thus received may not be counted as part of the major course if Italian is elected as a major subject; more advanced courses in Italian chosen with the approval of the Department of Italian must be substituted for that part of the first or second year course for which credit has been given in the advanced standing examination by students taking Italian as a major subject.

A study of selected literary types with a consideration of their relation to Greek literature and their influence on modern literature. The reading includes Plautus's Mostellaria, portions of Livy's first decade, the shorter poems of Catullus, Horace's Odes and Epodes, Vergil's Eclogues, and selections from Mediæval Latin. In addition to the regular meeting of the class, the students have special meetings in groups once in two weeks.

SECOND YEAR*Credit: One and one-half units*

The Development of Latin Literature: Dr. Broughton.

Credit: One-half unit.

This course treats the history of Latin Literature from its earliest beginnings down to the end of the second century of the Christian era, including all the authors from whose writings any important remains have been preserved. If this course is elected in the first semester it must be continued in the second.

Latin Comedy: Dr. Swindler.

Suetonius and Tacitus: Dr. Taylor.

Credit: One unit.

Latin Comedy is given during the first semester. A number of the plays of Plautus and Terence are read and studied for their literary merit. The influence of Plautus and Terence on later ages, the stage, actors, origin, development, and characteristics of Roman comedy and various other topics are taken up. Students are assigned individual plays for reports.

Suetonius and Tacitus are given during the second semester. The beginning of the Roman Empire is studied from literary and archæological sources. The reading includes Augustus's Res Gestæ, the Augustus of Suetonius, and selections from the first six books of Tacitus's Annals. In addition to the reading, each student is expected to prepare a report on a subject of importance for the reign of Augustus. The course in the Development of Latin Literature and the courses in Latin Comedy and in Suetonius and Tacitus may be elected in different years. If either of the latter courses is elected for one semester only the credit will be one-half unit.

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses.

Except for the course in Latin Prose Style the work of the advanced Latin is arranged in semester courses. If elected separately the credit for each course is one-half unit.

Latin Prose Style: Dr. Taylor and Miss Fairman.

Credit: One-half unit.

Weekly exercises in the writing of Latin prose combined with the reading of Cicero, Cæsar, and Livy, and the study of their style. In 1930-31 the Brutus of Cicero forms the chief basis of the study.

Livy: Dr. Broughton.

Literature of the Empire: Dr. Ballou.

Credit: One unit.(Given in 1930-31)

Livy is given during the first semester. Selections significant for the style and artistry of the author are read. Problems of Roman history connected with these selections are treated in lectures, discussions and reports.

Literature of the Empire is given during the second semester. The reading is from authors of both prose and poetry who give as complete a picture as possible of the society of the empire, such as Seneca, Petronius, Martial, Statius, Pliny, Juvenal and Apuleius. Students may elect these courses separately each with a credit of one-half unit.

Vergil, Aeneid: Dr. Taylor.

Roman Satire: Dr. Broughton.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

The Aeneid is given during the first semester. The poem is studied as a whole with a consideration of its language, its structure, and its place in the history of epic.

Roman Satire in its literary form and its historical development is studied during the second semester.

Music

PROFESSOR:

HORACE ALWYNE, F.R.M.C.M.

ASSOCIATE:

ERNEST WILLOUGHBY, A.R.C.M.

The undergraduate instruction offered in theoretical music covers four and one-half units.

The objects of the undergraduate course in music are to permit students to make music an integral part of a liberal education, and to enable them, through the courses in Harmony and Counterpoint, to gain a knowledge of the technique of composition by actual experience in using its materials, and, through the courses in History and Appreciation of Music, to realize the significance of great music æsthetically, historically and sociologically. In the latter courses a large number of compositions drawn from all forms of music are performed and discussed in the classes.

The "Music Fund" of Boston, Massachusetts, offers a scholarship of the value of $350 to $500 to students, graduate or undergraduate, training to become teachers of music in public or private schools or colleges. This is open to students who have complied with the requirements for admission to Bryn Mawr College.

The Department of Music gives a series of concerts and recitals assisted by well-known artists, which is designed to supplement and amplify the work done in the Courses in History and Appreciation of Music, and an informal musicale once a month in which students take part as well as visiting musicians. A lecture is given each week outside college hours and open to all members of the College, on the programme to be performed by the Philadelphia Orchestra or by other important musical organizations or artists.

The chapel choir of forty members and the college glee club are organized under the direction of the Department of Music.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

History and Appreciation of Music: Mr. Alwyne and Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One unit.

*Free
Elective
Courses*

(Given in each year)

This course consists of the study of the History of Music up to and including Beethoven, and of the masterpieces of music produced during that period. Characteristic examples of Early Church Music, in the form of Plain Chant, Organum, Discant, etc., and of Sixteenth Century vocal polyphony, Reformation Chorales and Bach choral works are illustrated by the College Choir in class. Compositions of the following composers are performed in class: Monteverdi, Corelli, Scarlatti, Rameau, Couperin, Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven. The forms included are folk-song, motet, madrigal, fantasia, toccata, early dance-forms, fugue, suite, rondo, variations, sonata and symphony. All study and analysis is based on the actual hearing of the music itself. The instruction is given by means of lectures, required reading, discussion, and by analysis by the students in class. At occasional meetings of the class, members of the Faculty of the Departments of History, Classical Archaeology, History of Art, and English discuss social, artistic and literary movements which were of special importance in the history of the evolution of music.

Advanced History and Appreciation of Music: Mr. Alwyne and Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

The course in History and Appreciation of Music is required for admission.

The course consists of the study of the history of music from Schubert to the present day and of the musical masterpieces produced during that period. The instruction follows the same plan as in the preceding course.

Third Year History and Appreciation of Music: Mr. Alwyne and Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the two courses in History and Appreciation of Music.

This course consists of two special courses of one semester each in some particular period or aspect of Music. The subjects are Bach and Wagner, or Symphonic Music and Modern Music. These subjects are dealt with in a more detailed and amplified way than is possible in the two foregoing courses in History and Appreciation of Music. The instruction follows the same plan as in the preceding courses.

Elementary Harmony: Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: knowledge of intervals, scales and keys, ability to sing simple melodies at sight.

This course is the beginning of composition. It does not impose upon the student the mere copying of a model but gives her some intellectual and æsthetic liberty.

Melodic movement and harmonic progression are studied concurrently. The student learns to write simple melodies based on poetic meters and the addition of a second melody to one already given with ornamentation by means of passing notes, neighbouring notes, etc. When some facility in horizontal writing has been obtained melodies are harmonized in four parts using major and minor triads in root positions and their inversions.

The importance of the student being able to hear what she writes is stressed by means of progressive ear training and musical dictation.

Advanced Harmony: Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One-half unit

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the course in Elementary Harmony; or the student must satisfy the instructor that she is qualified to enter.

This course is the continuation of the course in Elementary Harmony from the Chord of the Dominant Seventh and carries the student through modern harmonic relations. Original melodies are written and harmonized in both close and open score and the use of C clefs is studied when writing for strings. Modern compositions are analyzed. This course gives an opportunity for freedom of expression and calls for more original work on the part of the student.

Elementary Counterpoint: Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the two courses in Harmony; or the student must satisfy the examiner that she is qualified to enter.

This course deals with the various modes of counterpoint to which the courses in Harmony have led in so far as it has been possible to bring about "horizontal" writing in those courses. This course consists of Strict Counterpoint in two parts up to and including Fifth Species and three-part Strict Counterpoint up to and including Third Species.

Advanced Counterpoint: Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the three preceding courses in Harmony and Counterpoint; or the student must satisfy the instructor that she is qualified to enter.

This course is a continuation of Elementary Counterpoint and carries the student through to Strict and Combined Counterpoint in three and four parts, later dealing with the stated contrapuntal forms. The course requires some originality on the part of the student and some facility in pianoforte playing.

READER:

DORIS GRACEY, M.A.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department includes a first year half-unit course, which is required for the degree, second year unit and half-unit courses, advanced unit and half-unit courses, and honours work, which may be taken in conjunction with the advanced courses by students who have shown marked ability. The half unit of first-year philosophy and the half unit of first-year psychology together constitute one unit of first-year work in philosophy.

FIRST YEAR

Credit: One-half unit

History of European Thought: Dr. Theodore de Laguna, Dr. Grace de Laguna.

Required Course

The lectures treat in outline of the development of the scientific attitude toward the world, from the beginnings of Greek speculation to the Nineteenth Century. Selections from ancient and modern philosophical literature are read by the class.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: One and one-half units

Elementary Ethics: Dr. Theodore de Laguna.

Philosophical Problems: Dr. Grace de Laguna.

Credit: One unit.Major Course

Elementary Ethics is given during the first semester. The classical theories of the subject, such as Stoicism and Epicureanism, are briefly treated, emphasis being laid less upon the abstract issues involved than upon the rival "ways of life." The modern evolutionary theory of morals is studied at greater length.

Philosophical Problems is given during the second semester. This is primarily a discussion-course. The student is introduced to certain of the classic philosophical problems and typical solutions which are offered for them. The problems selected for discussion are those which are living issues, and an attempt is made to show their bearing on scientific and social movements of the present time. For example, the problem of free-will and determination is considered in its bearing upon the question of social responsibility and the punishment of criminals; the problem of the nature of mind and its connection with the body is related to the recent psychological controversy over behaviorism.

Evolution of Morality: Dr. Grace de Laguna.

Elementary Logic: Dr. Theodore de Laguna.

Credit: One-half unit.

Evolution of Morality is given during the first semester. This course treats of the development of moral ideals and obligations from primitives to civilized conditions. Especial attention is given to moral standards connected with marriage and the position of women. The relation of morality to magic and taboo, as well as to polytheistic and monotheistic religion, is studied, and also the interaction between economic conditions and moral standards.

Elementary Logic is given during the second semester. The object of this course is, first, to give the student an acquaintance with the traditional subject-matter of deductive and inductive logic, and, secondly, to show its relations to the wider problems of metaphysics and the theory of knowledge. In the concluding weeks some account is given of recent developments in logical theory.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Credit: One and one-half units

The advanced courses in philosophy are open only to students who have taken the second year courses in Elementary Ethics and Philosophical Problems. They may be taken as a free elective.

From Kant to Spencer: Dr. Grace de Laguna.

Recent Philosophical Tendencies: Dr. Theodore de Laguna.

From Kant to Spencer is given during the first semester.

Credit: One unit.Advanced Course

This course is principally devoted to the study of the post-Kantian idealism. The naturalistic systems of Comte, John Stuart Mill, and Spencer are more briefly considered.

Recent Philosophical Tendencies is given during the second semester. An introduction to contemporary controversy is given by way of a study of a few of the more important recent movements of thought.

Social Philosophy: Dr. Theodore de Laguna.

Elementary Aesthetics: Dr. Gracs de Laguna.

Credit: One-half unit

Social Philosophy is given during the first semester. This course is a study of the philosophical ideas that have been connected with the rise of modern democracy and nationalism. The more important theories of the nature of the state, and of the relation of the state to other forms of social union, are discussed; also certain special moral questions related to the theory of punishment.

Elementary Aesthetics is given during the second semester. The subject is approached primarily from the anthropological side. The origins of art and its relations to other forms of culture, especially magic, religion, industry, and war, are studied, as well as the development and diffusion of aesthetic standards. Briefer consideration is given to the psychological phenomena involved in aesthetic appreciation.

HONOURS WORK

Honours

Work for special honours in philosophy consists of independent private reading, with frequent conferences with the instructor, and occasional reports in which the principal results of the reading are brought together.

The subjects chosen are not confined to the technical aspects of philosophy, but on the contrary emphasize its connection with general literature, art, and politics, or with some special science in which the student has an interest. The following are suggested as possible subjects:

The Philosophy of Plato.

Platonism in English Poetry.

The Philosophy of Jean-Jacques Rousseau.

Philosophical Interpretations of Evolution.

Theories of Language: their Bearing upon the Problem of Knowledge.

Mathematical Logic.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department includes at least three and one-half units, two and one-half units of undergraduate first and second year work and at least one unit of advanced work, open only to graduates and to undergraduates who have completed the major courses in physics.

The first year of the major course deals principally with the development of physical facts and is accordingly mainly experimental and descriptive in its nature. A wide range of physical phenomena and the elements of physical theories are treated. The course is planned to cover the whole subject from this point of view so as to give those who do not intend to pursue physics further, such a knowledge of its principles as will enable them to follow its recent development and applications, and also to provide those electing physics as a major with a good foundation for more advanced work. In the second year the course is intended to serve as an introduction to the theories to which experimental evidence has led. The treatment is accordingly more mathematical than in the first year, but the experimental side of the subject is still emphasized. A knowledge of trigonometry is required, and some familiarity with the methods of the calculus will be of assistance.

Mechanics, Heat, Sound, and Properties of Matter: Dr. Huff.
Laboratory Work: Dr. Huff and Miss Blake.

*Major

2nd Semester.

Electricity, Magnetism, and Light: Dr. Barnes.
Laboratory Work: Dr. Barnes and Miss Jenkins.

The instruction in this course is given by means of lectures, daily oral quizzes, occasional written quizzes, regular problem papers, and required private reading. Students are expected to use, in connection with the lectures, text-books on the special part of the subject under discussion; at present Kimball's College Physics is used for reference; also the text-books of Ames and Glazebrook. The lectures are illustrated throughout by means of the lantern, by demonstrations on the lecture table, and by the exhibition of apparatus, etc.

In the laboratory, the students are first instructed in the methods of accurate measurement of the simple quantities, length, time, and mass; later, they make a series of determinations, mainly quantitative, on the part of the subject under discussion in the lecture room at the time. Ames and Bliss's Manual of Experiments in Physics is found useful as a reference work for part of this course. A system of laboratory lectures has also been developed to supplement the class-room work, to point out sources of error and their treatment, to demonstrate methods of manipulation, and, in general, to give directions for working which are applicable to the class as a whole; they are given at the beginning of each week's laboratory work. The object of the work is to familiarize the students with the instruments and methods used in physical measurements, with special reference to the quantitative laws upon which the science is based. The laboratory is equipped with this object in view, and the apparatus is all of the most modern design.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: One and one-half units

1st Semester.

Theoretical Mechanics, Theory of Light: Dr. Barnes.
Laboratory Work: Dr. Barnes and Miss Jenkins.

2nd Semester.

Theory of Heat, Theory of Electricity and Magnetism: Dr. Huff.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Huff and Miss Blake.

The instruction is given by lectures, supplemented by the discussion of weekly problem papers; the text-books mentioned below indicate the character of the ground covered, and form the basis of the lectures. An endeavour is made to bring the student into contact with the work of original investigators.

The general text-book used is Watson, Physics; the books used in special subjects are as follows: heat: Maxwell, Theory of Heat, Preston, Theory of Heat; dynamics: selections from Tait and Steele's Dynamics of a Particle, Jean's Theoretical Mechanics; and special lectures dealing with the application of dynamics to physical problems; electricity and magnetism: J. J. Thomson, Elements of the Mathematical Theory of Electricity and Magnetism; optics, physical and geometrical: Preston, Theory of Light, Edser, Light.

The laboratory work of the second year is designed to follow and illustrate the subject-methods of physical investigation. A special study is made of the sources and amounts of the errors involved in the different operations, and the problems assigned are adapted as far as possible to the requirements and wishes of the individual students.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Advanced Courses

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses. A knowledge of differential and integral calculus is required. These lectures deal not only with the theoretical development of the subject, but great stress is laid on the important experimental work which has been done in it, and methods and results are criticised and opportunities for further investigations pointed out. The object of the courses is to prepare students to undertake independent work. The laboratory work is planned with this object in view and is arranged to meet the special needs of each individual student. Graduate students may be permitted to take the lectures without the laboratory work. In addition to the laboratory work which accompanies the lectures a student may take extra laboratory work.

Electricity and Magnetism: Dr. Huff.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

The lectures of this course treat typical mathematical and experimental problems chosen from the various parts of the entire subject. A large number of problems on potential and attraction are assigned.

By special arrangement this course may count for more than one unit.

Properties of Matter;
Theory of Sound: Dr. Huff.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1933-34)

Properties of Matter is given during the first semester. The lectures cover the general subject of the properties of matter studied from the point of view of the Molecular Theory. The different theories of matter are discussed and an account of recent investigations concerning the relations of matter and electricity is given. Poynting and Thomson's Properties of Matter is read in connection with the course.

Theory of Sound is given during the second semester. The lectures form an introduction to the theory of modes of vibration of pipes, strings, and rods. The theory of music and musical instruments is then studied. Poynting and Thomson's Sound is used during the earlier part of the course, and frequent references are made to Helmholtz and Rayleigh.

The semester courses may be elected separately and by special arrangement they may count for more than one unit.

Spectroscopy;

Astrophysics: Dr. Barnes.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1930-31)

Spectroscopy is given during the first semester. The course begins with a complete discussion of the apparatus used in this subject; the results of past and present investigations are then considered, and problems for investigation are pointed out. The many important applications of spectroscopy to astronomy and atomic structure are not neglected. The standard books of reference are Kayser's Handbuch der Spectroscopie and Sommerfeld's Atom Structure and Spectral Lines. Detailed reports of laboratory investigations are required.

Astrophysics is given during the second semester. This course consists of lectures on the application of physical principles and methods to the study of the composition, structure, and motions of the heavenly bodies. Selected chapters in Moulton's Celestial Mechanics and many papers from the Astrophysical Journal are read and discussed.

General Optics: Dr. Barnes.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1932-33)

These lectures give a general discussion of the theories advanced to explain many phenomena in light. Students are required to have a good knowledge of elementary optics and to be sufficiently familiar with optical apparatus to undertake a detailed study of some special problem. The books on optics by Drude, Wood and Schuster are used for reference.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Physical Basis of Music: Dr. Huff.

In the lectures of this course it is planned to present some of the physical principles illustrated in the construction of musical instruments and underlying the general theory of music. Private reading is assigned. This course was given in 1929-30.

Descriptive Astronomy: Dr. Huff.

This course is elementary. Students use a text-book and star-maps and do some general reading on assigned topics. Lecture-experiments and lantern-slides are used. The course is open to juniors and seniors only, but not to auditors or hearers. This course was given in 1928-29.

In connection with the lectures there are experimental demonstrations.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: One and one-half units

1st Semester.

Experimental Psychology;

Laboratory Work: Dr. Helson and Mr. Newman.

The lectures take up certain topics in systematic psychology. The historical, critical and theoretical features of the subjects covered are discussed and the experimental features demonstrated. Special stress is laid on the comparative study of methods. The laboratory work consists of individual practice in selected topics. This course may be taken as a free elective with a credit of one-half unit by students who have completed the required course in psychology.

2nd Semester.

The Psychology of Action, Including Instinct, Emotion and Animal Behaviour: Dr. Leuba.

The analysis of learning and of behaviour in man and animals is of special interest to students of education. This course may be taken as a free elective with a credit of one-half unit by students who have completed the required course in psychology.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

1st Semester:

Advanced
Courses

Social Psychology: The Psychology of Group Life and of Some Social Institutions: Dr. Leuba.

This course is open to students who have taken the course in Psychology of Action. Experimental Psychology is not a prerequisite. If taken in combination with Psychology of Action the credit is one and one-half units.

2nd Semester:

Mental Tests and Measurements;

Laboratory Work: Dr. Rogers.

This course provides a foundation for the theory and practice of mental tests and the measurement of school achievements. It prepares the student for more specialized work in the application of tests to education, vocational guidance, business, etc. The laboratory work includes practice in giving tests of general intelligence, of special abilities (mechanical, intellectual, artistic, etc.), and of achievements.

This course is open to students who have taken the second year course in Experimental Psychology. If taken in combination with the course in Experimental Psychology the credit is one and one-half units.

These semesters may be elected separately each with a credit of one-half unit.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSE

Advanced Experimental Psychology: Dr. Helson.

Credit: One to two units.

(Given in each year)

*Free

The Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department of Social Economy and Social Research was opened in the autumn of 1915 in order to afford women an opportunity to obtain an advanced scientific education in Social Economy which, it is hoped, will compare favorably with the best preparation in any profession. It is known as the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department in order that the name of Carola Woerishoffer who devoted her life to social service and industrial relations, may be associated in a fitting and lasting way with Bryn Mawr College which she so generously endowed.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department covers three and one-half units of free electives.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Elements of Statistics: Dr. Kingsbury.

Courses*

This course deals with the elementary principles of statistics. Among the topics are the array, frequency distributions, graphic methods, averages, measures of variation.

theory of sampling, index numbers, theory of probability, and linear correlation. It also attempts briefly to acquaint the student with the principles and methods of record keeping and filing which are applicable to municipal, state, and federal offices, to business organizations and to social organizations.

The course is recommended to students of social economy, of economics and of education. No knowledge of mathematics beyond the requirements for matriculation is presupposed.

Applied Sociology: Dr. Hart.*

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Relationships between personalities, the causes of social conflicts, and the methods whereby maximum stimulation, release, facilitation and integration of the purposes and possibilities of all members of society may be attained, constitute the problems of the course. Specific applications to social relations in the family, in industry, between races, and the like, are worked out. By means of laboratory experiments and objective observation of social phenomena, outstanding sociological theories are tested by attempting to apply them to concrete data. A course in some social science is prerequisite for this course.

Social Anthropology: Dr. Hart.*

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

An anthropological approach to the problems of human progress. An objective definition of progress is developed. Data relating to prehistoric, primitive, ancient and modern cultural and racial development, bearing on the amount and the direction of change in human intelligence, technology, and social relations, are examined. The desirability of various possible future directions of social change is explored. Methods of innovation in mechanical invention, medicine, science, social work, and other fields, are studied in terms of instances, with a view to developing the fundamental principles of the technique and dynamics of social progress. A course in some social science is prerequisite for this course.

Labour Problems: Dr. Fairchild.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

The present day problems of labour considered with special reference to the history of the labour movement form the subject matter of this course. A study of critical episodes in labour's struggle for organization is made in order to forecast tendencies in trade unionism and to appraise efforts for industrial peace. Some of the topics considered are the strike, the lockout, working conditions, industrial accidents, scientific management and labour, compensation, social insurance, welfare work, and the radical experiments of labour. The significance of workers' education and of the various labour colleges and schools is stressed with special reference to the Bryn Mawr Summer School for Women Workers in Industry.

Physical Education

DIRECTOR:

JOSEPHINE PETTS

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR:

MARNA V. BRADY, M.A.

INSTRUCTOR:

JANET SEELEY, A.B.

Freshmen

The Physical Education requirement for Freshmen consists of two hours a week of some one activity or of rest, according to the advice of the College Physician and the Director of Physical Education based upon the student's Physical Examination, and one hour a week of Body Mechanics for fifteen weeks during the winter.

Sophomores

For Sophomores the Physical Education requirement is the same as for Freshmen except that one hour a week of Hygiene throughout one semester takes the place of the Body Mechanics course.

Physical Education classes are divided into three sections: Autumn (October first to December first), Winter (December first to April first), Spring (April first to the end of college). The required work in each section for two years must be satisfactorily completed for graduation as well as the Freshman Swimming Test, which consists of:

1. Dive—plain front.
2. Sink and come up twice.
3. Float for two minutes.
4. Swim for twenty minutes, using any stroke, floating and treading water included.

Autumn

In the autumn, Freshmen and Sophomores may elect their required work, with the consent of the College Physician and the Director of Physical Education, from the following list: Hockey, Sun Baths, Fencing, Natural Dancing, Archery, Swimming, Tennis.

Winter

During the winter, the required work for those students who have not passed the swimming test consists of two periods a week of swimming. The only exceptions to this are made by the College Physician. The students who have passed the swimming test may elect their Physical Education classes from the following list: Swimming, Natural Dancing, Basket Ball, Lacrosse, Fencing, Sun Baths.

Spring

The spring program of Physical Education may be chosen from the following list: Lacrosse, Fencing, Tennis, Swimming, Archery.

Upper-classmen

It is expected that the Juniors and Seniors, being aware of the value of play in a busy existence, will take advantage of the opportunities offered them at college to learn well some sport that appeals to them for future use as well as for the purpose of keeping fit while they are here.

Every provision will be made for the Juniors and Seniors in the way of instruction. All the Freshman and Sophomore required classes in sports are open to them. It is an obviously necessary rule, however, that all upperclassmen taking a required sports course must attend regularly so as not to retard the progress of the class. Special advanced work will be arranged for upperclassmen who are ready for it.

1930-31

PRESIDENT OF THE COLLEGE:	MARION EDWARDS PARK, Ph.D., LL.D.
DEAN OF THE COLLEGE AND
HEAD OF THE HEALTH DEPARTMENT:	HELEN TAFT MANNING, Ph.D.
DEAN OF THE GRADUATE SCHOOL:	EUNICE MORGAN SCHENCK, Ph.D.
DIRECTOR OF PHYSICAL EDUCATION:	JOSEPHINE PETTS
PHYSICIANS OF THE COLLEGE:	THOMAS F. BRANSON, M.D. MARJORIE JEFFERIES WAGONER, M.D. JOSEPHINE FISHER, A.B. JANET SEELEY, A.B. FRIEDRICKA MARGARETHE HEYL, A.B. CHARLOTTE BRONDEN HOWE, A.B. To be appointed.
WARDENS:
SENIOR RESIDENT:	CATHERINE PALMER ROBINSON, M.A.

All entering students are required to file at the office of the Dean of the College a report of a recent medical examination filled out and signed by a physician, on a blank to be secured from the College.

*Health
Certificate*

Every entering student must as well file a physician's certificate stating that she has been vaccinated against smallpox during the year preceding her registration at college and that she exhibited a typical or immune reaction to this vaccination. Students who do not certify to vaccination at entrance will be vaccinated by the College Physician, for which a fee of five dollars will be charged. There is no exception to this rule.

Vaccination

Every student must file a certificate stating that her eyes have been examined by an oculist within six months before entrance, and before the beginning of her junior year. Failure to comply with the above rule entails an examination by one of the college consultants in ophthalmology for which the students will be charged as private patients by the ophthalmologist who makes the examination. If glasses are prescribed they must be obtained.

*Oculist
Certificate*

Every undergraduate student and hearer is examined each year by the Resident Physician of the College, and twice each year by the Director of Physical Education with reference to physical development, strength of heart and lungs, and general health. The Physician-in-Chief of the College acts as consultant and is called in all serious cases.

Physical Examination

Any student who, at the time of the examination or at any other time during the year, is not in good health is placed on the health supervision list, is required to follow the special régime prescribed, and her extra-curriculum activities may be limited.

Health Supervision

The Director of Physical Education receives the reports of students under medical treatment, keeps records of the health of all students and endeavors, by interviews and advice on personal hygiene, to maintain and improve the health of the students. All students are urged by the Health Department to take some out-of-door exercise in addition to their periods of physical training.

*Physicians
and Nursing*

Eminent specialists practising in Philadelphia have consented to serve as consulting physicians of the college. The Associate Physician is in her office in the college infirmary daily and may be consulted by the students without charge. Office hours are:

8.30 to 9.30 A. M., daily except Saturday and Sunday.

10.00 - 12.30 A. M., by appointment, for special interviews of an advisory nature.

3.30 to 4.00 P. M., daily, for employees.

4.00 to 5.30 P. M., daily except Saturday and Sunday, for medical dispensary.

9.00 - 10.00 A. M., Saturday.

Sunday, by appointment only.

Infirmary

The infirmary fee of $20.00 paid by each resident undergraduate student entitles her to be cared for in the infirmary for four days (not necessarily consecutive) during the year, and to attendance by the college physicians during this time, and to nursing, provided her illness is not infectious. It also entitles her to the services of the nurses employed by the college during other temporary illness, provided one of the regular nurses is free at the time. In the case of an illness of longer duration and also in the case of all diseases of an infectious character the student must meet or, in case of two or more students with the same infectious disease, must share, the expense of a special nurse. She is responsible also for the infirmary fees, which are $6.00 a day, and for hospital or sanitarium charges should she be removed from the college by order of the Physician-in-Chief.

A special nurse for one student costs approximately $7.10 per day or $49.50 per week, which includes nurse's fee, board and laundry. When a student has not an infectious disease the infirmary fee of $6.00 per day will include the nurse's fee provided it is possible for one of the college nurses to care for the student. The fees of the consulting physicians and surgeons and other specialists recommended by the college will be furnished on request.

All communications concerning the health of the students from parents and guardians, outside physicians, and others, should be addressed to the Dean of the College, who will excuse students for absence before and after vacations on account of serious illness and from attendance on academic work during the time that they are in the infirmary or seriously ill at home. Any student who becomes ill when away from the college is asked to notify immediately the Dean of the College.

GENERAL INFORMATION

Plans and descriptions of the academic buildings and the undergraduate halls of residence, Denbigh, Merion Hall, Rockefeller Hall, Pembroke Hall East, Pembroke Hall West, and Wyndham, with full information regarding the charges for rooms, are published as Part 3 of the Bryn Mawr College Calendar and may be obtained, by application, from the Secretary and Registrar of the College. A resident warden is in charge of each hall. Each hall has its separate kitchen and dining-room except Pembroke, which has a common dining-room and kitchen for the two wings and for Wyndham. Students from Wyndham take their meals in Pembroke. Each hall provides a separate room for each of the sixty or seventy students, except Wyndham, which has six double bedrooms and five single rooms, and provides accommodation for seventeen students. All rooms are furnished with a bed, bureau, table desk, straight chair, desk chair, and bookcase, but students are expected to furnish their own rugs, curtains, and towels. All necessary service is supplied by the college. Though there are open fire-places in many studies and single rooms, all rooms are adequately heated by steam heat controlled by a thermostat. Because of the danger of infectious diseases personal laundry may be done only by laundries or laundresses recommended by the college.

Residence*

A deposit of fifteen dollars must be made by each resident student to reserve her room for the following academic year. Normally the deposit will be deducted from the rent of the room. It will be refunded only under the following circumstances:

*Room
Reservation*

(a) If a student of the college gives formal notice of the withdrawal of her reservation to the Secretary and Registrar before May 1 preceding the academic year for which reservation was made.

(b) If a candidate for admission in October gives formal notice of the withdrawal of her application to the Secretary and Registrar before August 1 preceding the academic year for which the application was made.

(c) If a former student who has applied for re-admission in February gives formal notice of the withdrawal of her application to the Secretary and Registrar before January 1 preceding the semester for which the application was made.

Otherwise the deposit will be forfeited to the college.

Every applicant reserving a room after September 1 or failing to withdraw her application by that date, not occupying the room or vacating it during the year, prevents another student from admission to college as a resident. Therefore, unless formal notice of withdrawal of an application for the approaching year is received by the Secretary and Registrar by September 1, the applicant is held responsible for the rent of the room reserved, or in case no definite assignment has been made, for the minimum of one hundred and seventy-five dollars. Room rent is subject to remission or deduction only if the college is able to re-rent the room. The applicant is not permitted to dispose of such vacant rooms.

Withdrawal

Non-Resident Students

Accommodation is made for students living with their families in Philadelphia and vicinity. There is a club-room for non-resident students in Goodhart Hall, a coat room in Taylor Hall and one in the library, and non-resident students also have the full use of the large Common Room in Goodhart Hall.

Non-resident students are liable in whole or in part for all undergraduate fees except those for residence in the halls and infirmary fees.

Expenses for Undergraduate Students

Fees for Tuition

Though the average cost of teaching each undergraduate student is estimated at about nine hundred and twenty-five dollars, the tuition charge for undergraduate students and for hearers is five hundred dollars a year. The difference between the actual cost and the price of tuition must be met from the small endowment funds of the college and by private gifts. Voluntary contributions from parents able and willing to pay this additional four hundred and forty dollars, in whole or part, will be used for scholarships for students unable to pay the regular tuition fee of five hundred dollars. No reduction of the tuition fee can be made on account of absence, illness, or dismissal during a semester, or for any other reason and no refund will be made in case of advance payment.

Fees for Board and Residence

The charge for board at the college is four hundred dollars a year, payable half-yearly in advance. The total fee for board and residence depends upon the room or rooms occupied by the student. About one-tenth of the rooms in the college rent for seventy-five dollars, making the cost of board, residence, and tuition for undergraduate students nine hundred and seventy-five dollars, but students desiring to apply for rooms at seventy-five dollars must file a statement at the office of the Secretary and Registrar that they are unable to afford rooms at a higher price. The rooms have different rentals depending upon the size and location, varying from seventy-five to five hundred and fifty dollars. Room rent is payable yearly in advance.

Reduction of Fees on Account of Illness

In case of prolonged illness and absence from college extending over six weeks or withdrawal from the college for a period of six weeks or more, there will be a special proportionate reduction in the charge for board, provided that written notice be given to the Dean of the College and to the Comptroller at the time of withdrawal, or, in case the student is ill at home, as soon as possible after her illness is known. Verbal notice to wardens or instructors is not sufficient to secure the above allowance.

Residence in Vacations

Students who wish to remain at the college during the Christmas and Easter vacations should apply to the Warden for information in regard to rooms and rates. During the Christmas vacation the halls of residence are closed but accommodation may be obtained near the college campus. During the Easter vacation the halls of residence are in general kept open and undergraduates and graduate students may occupy their rooms at a fixed rate.

Students remaining during any part of the Christmas or Easter vacations in Bryn Mawr, or in the immediate neighborhood, not in their own homes, are required to take advantage of the arrangements made by the college and will be charged according to the length of stay. A student not going to her own home is required to inform the Warden of her hall in advance of her intention to spend the vacation elsewhere and to register her address with her Warden.

For undergraduate students taking one laboratory course of four or more hours a week there is an additional charge of fifteen dollars a semester for materials and apparatus; for students taking two laboratory courses of four or more hours a week a charge of twenty-five dollars a semester; and for students taking three laboratory courses of four or more hours a week a charge of thirty dollars a semester. A charge of seven dollars and fifty cents a semester is made for students taking a laboratory course of less than four hours a week.

In courses in Geology each hour of field work is counted as one hour of laboratory work. Not more than one laboratory course is required of candidates for a degree.

Summary

In the course in History and Appreciation of Music a charge of one dollar and twenty-five cents a semester is made for the purchase of necessary books and material.

*Incidental
Fees and Charges*

The graduation fee is twenty dollars, payable in the senior year.

Every student who enters the college must register her courses within two weeks after entrance. A charge of one dollar will be made for each change made in the course after it has been definitely registered.

A fee of seven dollars a year is charged to each resident undergraduate, and a fee of three dollars and fifty cents a year to each non-resident undergraduate for the up-keep of the athletic fields.

Every student except a member of the freshman class who moves from one hall to another is charged a fee of ten dollars for moving, and every student except a member of the freshman class who moves from one room to another in the same hall is charged a fee of five dollars. This fee entitles a student to have five pieces moved free of charge.

The fees are due on the first day of each semester and students whose fees are not paid before November first in the first semester or before March first in the second semester are not permitted to continue in residence or in attendance on their classes.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Entrance Scholarships

Each year the College awards four competitive matriculation scholarships of $100 each. One scholarship is given in each of the following districts: (a) The New England States; (b) New York, New Jersey, and Delaware; (c) Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and the states west of the Mississippi River; (d) Pennsylvania and all places not otherwise mentioned. While the candidate's district is determined by the location of the school where she receives her final preparation, or, if preparation has been by private tuition, by her place of residence during the preceding year, candidates may present themselves for examination at any examination center. These scholarships, to be held for one year, are awarded for the highest general average obtained in each district. All regular candidates for matriculation who intend to spend at least one year at Bryn Mawr College, who have not cancelled an examination division, who have not received more than a two point condition, and whose general average is 75 per cent or above, are eligible and are without formal declaration candidates for these scholarships. When two divisions are taken conditions incurred in the first division and removed in the second are not counted.

Bryn Mawr School Scholarship Scholarships of $500 each were founded in 1885 by the Board of Managers of the Bryn Mawr School, of Baltimore, Maryland. One of these scholarships is open annually to the graduate of the Bryn Mawr School who has completed the school course with the most distinction.

Undergraduate Scholarships and Prizes Awarded for Distinction in Academic Work

Maria L. Eastman Brooke Hall Memorial Scholarship The Maria L. Eastman Brooke Hall Memorial Scholarship of the value of $150 was founded in 1901, in memory of Maria L. Eastman, Principal of Brooke Hall School for Girls, Media, Pa., by the Alumnae and former pupils of the school. It is awarded each year on the ground of scholarship, irrespective of the need of financial aid, to the member of the junior class with the highest record, to be held during the senior year. No application for the scholarship is necessary.

Elizabeth Duane Gillespie Scholarship The Elizabeth Duane Gillespie Scholarship in American History of the value of $60 was founded in 1903 by the Pennsylvania Society of Colonial Dames of America, in memory of Elizabeth Duane Gillespie. It is awarded annually to a member of the sophomore or junior class, on condition that the holder of the scholarship devote to the study of American history at least four hours a week for one year during the last two years of her college course. The candidate is to be selected by the Faculty of Bryn Mawr College on the ground of excellence in scholarship.

Charles S. Hinchman Memorial Scholarship The Charles S. Hinchman Memorial Scholarship of the value of $500 was founded in 1917 in memory of the late Charles S. Hinchman of Philadelphia by his family. The holder will be nominated to the Faculty by the Undergraduate Scholarships Committee of the Faculty guided in its selection by (1) the student's record in her group subjects, (2) written recommendations from the instructors in these subjects, (3) evidence of the student's ability as shown by written work in her major subject together with a written estimate of the same by the instructor most directly concerned, such work to be submitted not later than March 15th of the year preceding the one in which the scholarship is to be awarded.

George Bates Hopkins Memorial Scholarship The George Bates Hopkins Memorial Scholarship, consisting of the income of a gift of $10,000 from Mrs. Elizabeth Hopkins Johnson, in memory of her father, is to be awarded each year at the discretion of the President and Faculty of the College to the student in the Department of Music who in their estimation most needs it and is most deserving of it.

Elizabeth S. Shippen Scholarships The Elizabeth S. Shippen Scholarships were founded in 1917 by the bequest of the late Elizabeth S. Shippen of Philadelphia. Three scholarships are awarded each year, one to the member of the senior class who receives the Bryn Mawr European Fellowship and two to members of the junior class, as follows:

The Shippen Scholarship in Science of the value of $100 is awarded to a member of the junior class, one or both of whose major subjects lie in the Scientific Departments, viz., Physics, Chemistry, Geology, Biology, for excellence of work in one of these departments.

The Shippen Scholarship in Foreign Languages of the value of $100 is awarded annually to a member of the junior class, one or both of whose major subjects lie in the Departments of Foreign Languages, viz., Greek, Latin, German, French, Italian, Spanish, for excellence of work in one of these departments. Work in elementary language courses is not counted.

No student shall be considered eligible for the Science or Foreign Language Scholarship who has not completed at least three and one-half units of work in the subject on which the computation is based. The winner of the Charles S. Hinchman Memorial Scholarship will not be eligible for the Shippen Scholarship in Science or in Foreign Languages.

The Sheelah Kilroy Memorial Scholarships in English (the interest on $5000) were founded in 1919 by Dr. and Mrs. Philip Kilroy in memory of their daughter Sheelah. These scholarships are awarded annually on the recommendation of the Department of English as follows: $150 to a student for excellence of work in the Second Year or Advanced English; $75 to a student for excellence of work in the First Year English; and $50 to the student in the Required English Composition who does the best written work during the year.

SCHOLARSHIPS AWARDED AT ENTRANCE AND TENABLE FOR FOUR YEARS

Regional Scholarships of $300 to $500 each, administered by local alumnae committees, are awarded at regular intervals in each district of the Alumnae Association of Bryn Mawr College to candidates of exceptional ability who are unable to meet the fees of the college in full. The conditions are:

*Regional
Scholarships*

1. Application on blanks obtainable from the Alumnae Scholarships and Loan Fund Committee, Taylor Hall, Bryn Mawr, Pa., should be made before April 1 of the academic year for which the scholarship is desired.

2. Awards of the scholarships are made as soon as possible after the returns of the College Entrance Board Examinations to candidates who have been admitted to Bryn Mawr College who are judged to be of the highest promise by Local Committees in consultation with the Faculty Committee on Entrance Examinations.

3. Candidates awarded Regional Scholarships and maintaining a high standard of conduct and scholarship may be assured of further scholarships from local Alumnae committees or direct from the college. Further information may be obtained from the chairman of the Alumnae Scholarships and Loan Fund, Taylor Hall, Bryn Mawr, Pa.

Trustees Scholarships Eight free tuition scholarships, two awarded each year and tenable for four consecutive years, were founded for students prepared in Philadelphia High Schools by the Trustees of Bryn Mawr College on the following terms:

The candidate shall have matriculated for Bryn Mawr College, having received all her preparation for entrance examination at a Philadelphia High School; she shall have been recommended by the Board of Education of Philadelphia subject to the approval of the Directors of Bryn Mawr College. Provided that the conduct and academic standing of the student shall be satisfactory to the college authorities, the scholarship shall be renewed annually for three years by the Directors of the College.

City Scholarships Eight scholarships of the value of $175 similar to the trustees' scholarships are awarded to graduates of a Philadelphia High School by the Board of Public Education of Philadelphia.

Lower Merion Township Scholarship In 1895 one scholarship providing one year's free tuition for a graduate of the Lower Merion High School was founded by the College and presented to the School Board of Education of Lower Merion Township, Montgomery County, Pa. In 1926 the Board of Directors of the College added three more similar scholarships, one to be awarded each year to a non-resident student and tenable for four consecutive years. The conditions of award are that the candidate having received all of her preparation for examination at the Lower Merion High School shall have matriculated for Bryn Mawr College and shall be recommended by the School Board of Education of Lower Merion Township subject to the approval of the Directors of Bryn Mawr College.

Norristown Scholarship In 1909 one scholarship providing one year's free tuition to a graduate of Norristown High School was presented to the School Board of Education of Norristown, Pa., on the following terms: The candidate having received all of her preparation at the Norristown High School shall have matriculated for Bryn Mawr College not later than the June preceding her entrance to the college, and shall be nominated by the Superintendent of Schools or the Board of Education subject to the approval of the Board of Directors of the College; and that the award shall not be made twice to the same person unless the Superintendent of Schools shall file a statement with the President of the college that no other member of the graduating class is eligible for the scholarship.

Foundation Scholarship One competitive entrance scholarship of free tuition tenable for four years, is open annually to members of the Society of Friends who are unable to pay the full charge for tuition and residence. The scholarship is awarded, as far as possible, under the same rules as those governing the competitive entrance scholarships of Bryn Mawr College.

L. C. B. Saul Scholarship In 1893 the Alumnae Association of the Girls' High and Normal School of Philadelphia founded at Bryn Mawr a scholarship, tenable for four years, of the value of $100, increased in 1924 to $150. This scholarship is awarded every four years to the graduate of the Girls' High School who matriculates for Bryn Mawr College with the highest grade of that year.

Four Frances Marion Simpson Scholarships,* entitling the holder to free tuition, were founded in 1912 by Justice Alexander Simpson, Jr., in memory of Frances Simpson Pfahler, of the class of 1906, one scholarship to be awarded in each October, to a candidate who receives her certificate of examination in the preceding spring matriculation examination period. Competition for these scholarships is open in the first place to residents of Philadelphia and Montgomery counties who have been prepared for Bryn Mawr College in the public schools of the said counties, or at home by their parents and guardians, or in the Phebe Anna Thorne School of the Department of Education of Bryn Mawr College, or in Miss S. Janet Sayward's School at Overbrook, Pennsylvania, so long as she shall be conducting the same; or in default thereof to residents of other counties in Pennsylvania. Only those students who are unable to pay the fees for tuition, or if living at a distance, the fees for tuition and board, in Bryn Mawr College are entitled to compete. In special cases the scholarship may be awarded to a candidate from some other locality, in which case the restriction to preparation in public schools may also be relaxed, or it may be awarded to some one who can pay the charge for her tuition, or for her tuition and board in part.

*Frances

Simpson
Scholarships*

The scholarships are tenable for four successive years, and are meant exclusively for those students who take the full college course. Students holding the scholarships who become able to pay the tuition fees of Bryn Mawr College in whole or in part are required to do so, and all holders of the scholarships are required to promise to repay for the benefit of other students in need of the scholarship, the advances made to them, when they can conveniently do so.

The Charles E. Ellis Scholarships of $400 each, tenable for four years were founded in 1919 by bequest of the late Charles E. Ellis and are awarded on the recommendation of the Superintendent of Public Schools of the City of Philadelphia, subject to the approval of the Board of Directors and Trustees of Bryn Mawr College, to students educated in the Philadelphia public schools who have matriculated for Bryn Mawr College.

Scholarship at the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania

The Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania presented to Bryn Mawr College in 1910 the scholarship to be awarded to a graduate of the college recommended by the President and Faculty as in their opinion qualified to take up the study of medicine. The holder is given free tuition for one year at the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania and the scholarship will be renewed for the three remaining years of the medical course if the holder's record prove satisfactory.

Students' Loan Fund

*Students'
Loan Fund*

The Students' Loan Fund of the Alumnae Association of Bryn Mawr College was founded by the Class of 1890 for the use of students who need to borrow money in order to continue their college work, and for the purpose of receiving contributions, no matter how small, from those who are interested in helping students to obtain an education. The Fund is managed by a committee consisting of the President of the College and the Alumnae Scholarships and Loan Fund Committee.

These funds are managed by a committee consisting of the President of the College and the Alumnae Scholarships and Loan Fund Committee.

The Committee in administering this money follow a definite policy, designed to serve the best interests of the students concerned. Loans may be used for any purpose approved by the Committee, who strongly recommend the borrowing of small sums to relieve undue financial pressure, or to meet special emergencies. As a rule, money is not loaned to Freshmen. The terms under which money is loaned are as liberal as is consistent with business-like principles. Interest, which begins with the date of graduation, is at the rate of four per cent. Payment of the loan must be made in five years according to the following system: ten per cent in each of the first two years; fifteen per cent each in the third and fourth years; fifty per cent in the fifth year. At the discretion of the Committee, exceptions are made in special cases, for example that of a student working for a higher degree, to both the five-year limit and the date of the first interest charge.

Contributions may be sent to the chairman of the Scholarships and Loan Fund Committee, Alumnae Office, Taylor Hall, Bryn Mawr, Pa. Application blanks may be obtained from the Alumnae Office on the third floor of Taylor Hall by students who wish to borrow from the Loan Fund.

Parents' Fund

The Parents' Fund was founded and is supported by the contributions of parents and students who are able and willing to pay the full cost of tuition (approximately $925). It is used in making grants to supplement the scholarship awards and to assist other students in need of financial aid.

THE BUREAU OF RECOMMENDATIONS

The college conducts a Bureau of Recommendations which assists alumnae and former undergraduate and graduate students by securing recommendations from their professors and forwarding these to individuals or agencies to whom they may apply for positions. It is not primarily a bureau of employment or appointments, although it is often instrumental in putting individuals directly in touch with positions. The bureau also helps graduate and undergraduate students to find summer work. A series of vocational lectures and conferences are conducted each year for the benefit of the undergraduate body. The services of the bureau are given free of charge to alumnae and former students of Bryn Mawr College.

BEQUEST FORM

The Trustees of Bryn Mawr College will welcome any gift, bequest, or award which is to be devoted to scholarships, fellowships, or the endowment of professors' chairs in accordance to the wishes of the donor. Such funds may constitute memorials to the donor or to any person he may name. The sum of $9,000 yields sufficient income to provide the present tuition for one student at Bryn Mawr College.

Form of Bequest

I give and bequeath to The Trustees of Bryn Mawr College, a corporation established by law in the State of Pennsylvania, the sum of.....
.....to be invested and preserved inviolably for the endowment
of Bryn Mawr College, located at Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania.

THE LIBRARY

LIBRARY

The Bryn Mawr College Library is designed to be as far as possible a library for special study. There are at present on its shelves about 128,000 bound volumes and 10,000 dissertations and pamphlets. Of special interest is the classical library of the late Professor Sauppe of Göttingen, the Semitic library of the late Professor Amiaud of Paris, the mathematical library of Professor Charlotte Angus Scott and the Germanic library of the late Professor Karl Detlev Jessen.

The library is open daily except Sundays from 8 A. M. to 10 P. M. and on Sunday from 2 P. M. to 10 P. M. Books may be taken out by the students unless specially reserved for library reference use.

The sum of over twelve thousand dollars is expended yearly for books under the direction of the heads of the several collegiate departments, and, in addition to many gifts of single books, about thirty thousand dollars has been presented to the library during the past twenty years for expenditure in special departments.

Students may enjoy also the privileges of Haverford College Library, and the following:

The Library Company of Philadelphia, which contains about 260,000 volumes, divided between the Locust Street Building and the Ridgway Branch. Its valuable collection of pamphlets is not included in the number of volumes as given above. The Library is open from 9 A. M. to 5.30 P. M., and is open to students for consultation freely during these hours. To take books from the building a deposit must be made or subscriptions will be received as follows: $12.00 for one year, $6.00 for six months, $4.00 for three months.

The Mercantile Library, which contains about 215,000 volumes. Private subscription, $6.00 a year for two separate works at a time.

The Library of the Academy of Natural Sciences, which contains about 90,000 volumes. The Council of the Academy has generously conceded the use of its library and of its museum to the students of Bryn Mawr College.

The Library of the University of Pennsylvania, which contains about 550,000 volumes and 50,000 pamphlets. The custodians of this library have always been liberal in extending to the College inter-library loan courtesies.

The Free Library of Philadelphia, which contains over 625,000 volumes and 415,000 pamphlets and unbound documents, and is at all times open to the students for consultation.

The American Philosophical Society Library, which contains about 70,000 volumes, admission by card from a member.

The Historical Society of Pennsylvania Library, which contains over 150,000 bound volumes, and 250,000 pamphlets, is for reference only. The collection of manuscripts is one of the best in the country, comprising 7,000 volumes containing over 1,000,000 items. Every courtesy is extended to members of the college, and students and members of the Faculty are specially invited to all lectures delivered at the Library.

Over six hundred publications and reviews in the English, Greek, French, Italian, Spanish, German, and Swedish languages, are received by the library, as follows:

BRYN MAWR COLLEGE

BRYN MAWR COLLEGE was founded by Dr. Joseph Taylor of Burlington, New Jersey. During his life time the site of the college at Bryn Mawr, five miles west of Philadelphia, was purchased and the buildings were begun. At his death in January, 1880, he left the greater part of his estate for the foundation and maintenance of an institution of higher education for women. In 1880 the college was incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania and was invested with the power to confer degrees; in 1883 the trustees issued a circular of information; in 1884 a President, Dr. James E. Rhoads, and a Dean of Faculty, Miss M. Carey Thomas, were elected, plans were matured, and academic appointments were made. In the spring of 1885 the first catalogue was issued and in the autumn of the same year the college began its first academic year.

On the death of President Rhoads in 1893, Dean Thomas was elected to the presidency, which office she held until she reached the age of retirement in 1922. President Marion Edwards Park was elected to the presidency in 1922.

Bryn Mawr College has believed always in the value of small classes and limits the total enrollment of undergraduates to about four hundred and resident graduates to less than one hundred. From the first it has been the policy of the trustees to organize no department in which they could not provide for graduate as well as undergraduate study offered by the same faculty.

Bryn Mawr College confers the degrees of Bachelor of Arts, Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy.

The departments of the college are:

Biblical Literature	History
Biology	History of Art
Chemistry	Italian
Classical Archaeology	Latin
Comparative Philology and Linguistics	Mathematics
Economics and Politics	Music
Education	Philosophy
English	Physics
French	Psychology
Geology	Social Economy
German	Spanish
Greek

THE GRADUATE SCHOOL

The Graduate School of Bryn Mawr College exists to give advanced instruction and to foster research in the fields of ancient and modern languages and literature, the social sciences, philosophy and psychology, mathematics and the natural sciences, music, art, and education. Bryn Mawr College offers special opportunities to its graduate students for the working out of research problems in small seminars under the personal direction of the heads of departments. The degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy are conferred, and in addition to these degrees first and second year certificates are awarded by the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department of Social Economy and Social Research.

From the first it has been the policy of the Trustees of Bryn Mawr College to organize no department in which they could not provide for graduate as well as undergraduate study. In each department (except the Department of Music) a consecutive series of graduate courses pursued throughout three years provides preparation in the chief or major subject of the examination for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, and certain courses may be pursued for one or two years and offered as one of the two minor or secondary subjects.

Admission

Graduate students must present a diploma from some college of acknowledged standing. They must satisfy the several instructors of their ability to profit by the courses they desire to follow and may be required to pursue certain introductory or auxiliary studies before they are admitted to the advanced or purely graduate courses.

*Graduate
Students*

Graduates of Bryn Mawr College, and graduates of other colleges satisfying the Academic Council that the course of study for which they have received the degree of Bachelor of Arts is equivalent to that for which that degree is given at Bryn Mawr, or who have made up any deficiency, may apply to the Academic Council to be enrolled as candidates for the degree of Master of Arts, or Doctor of Philosophy and Master of Arts; admission to the graduate school does not automatically qualify a student to become a candidate for these degrees. Students not studying for these degrees are, however, entitled to personal guidance and supervision from the instructors of the Graduate School.

The most distinguished place in the Graduate School is held by the resident fellows and graduate scholars, who must live in Radnor Hall, the Graduate Hall of the college during the academic year. There are offered annually in the Graduate School three fellowships for study in Europe, one special foundation fellowship for study in America or abroad, one special foundation fellowship for study in an American college, twenty-three resident fellowships, twenty-four resident graduate scholarships and five graduate scholarships for foreign women.*

*Fellows
and Scholars*

* For details of these awards, see pages 91-94.

Residence

Residence for Graduate Students

Residence in Radnor Hall, the Graduate Hall, is optional except for holders of resident fellowships and scholarships. Every student has a separate room. The charge of $100 for room-rent includes all expenses of furnishing, service, heating and light. Those who do not reside in the Graduate Hall are expected to make arrangements which are satisfactory to the college.

Plans and descriptions of Radnor Hall are published in Part 3 of the Bryn Mawr College Calendar.

Application for Rooms

Application for rooms must be made as early as possible. The demand for graduate rooms is very great, and since unnecessarily reserving a room may prevent some other student from entering the college, a deposit of fifteen dollars is required in order that the application may be registered. In case the applicant enters the college in the year for which the room is reserved, the amount of the deposit is deducted from the first college bill. If she changes the date of her application or files formal notice of withdrawal at the Office of the Secretary and Registrar before August first of the year for which the application is made, the deposit will be refunded. If, for any reason whatever, the change or withdrawal be made later than August first, the deposit will be forfeited to the college. Students making application for a room for the second semester forfeit the deposit if they do not file notice of withdrawal at the Secretary's office before January first of the academic year for which the room is reserved. In order to make application for a room it is necessary to sign a room-contract, which will be sent on application, and return it with the fee of fifteen dollars to the Secretary and Registrar of the College. A deposit of fifteen dollars must also be made by each student in residence in order to insure the tenure of her room for the following academic year. This sum will be forfeited if formal notice of withdrawal is not filed at the office of the Secretary and Registrar on or before May first of the current year.

With- drawal

Every applicant who reserves a room after the first of September or who fails to withdraw her application by that date and either does not occupy the room at all or vacates it during the college year prevents some other student from obtaining admission as a resident student to the college. Therefore, unless formal notice of withdrawal of application for the ensuing academic year is received by the Secretary and Registrar of the College by the first of September (or in the case of an application for the second semester only, by the first of January) the applicant is responsible for the rent of the room for the whole year. The charge for room-rent is not subject to remission or deduction unless the college is able to re-rent the room. The applicant is not entitled to dispose of the room thus left vacant.

Any student who changes her room is required to pay an extra fee of fifteen dollars.

Students are expected to provide their own rugs—although upon request they will be supplied—curtains and towels. but in every other respect the rooms are completely furnished. No part is taken by the students in the care of their own rooms.

The charge for board is four hundred dollars a year, one half being payable on registration and the other half at the beginning of the second semester.

Board

In case of prolonged illness and absence from the college extending over six weeks or more, there will be a proportionate reduction in charge for board.

Accommodation is provided for graduate students who wish to remain at the college during the Christmas and Easter vacations at fifteen dollars a week. At Christmas the college halls are closed, but accommodation may be obtained near the college campus. At Easter graduate students may occupy their own rooms at the above rate. Any student remaining in Bryn Mawr or nearby and not in the college or in her own home for all or part of the vacation must make arrangements satisfactory to the Dean of the Graduate School.

Accommodation for Vacations

The college reserves the right to exclude at any time and to cancel the fellowships and scholarships of students whose conduct or academic standing renders them undesirable members of the college community. In such cases fees due or paid in advance will not be refunded or remitted in whole or in part.

College Regulations

In case of emergency the college assumes the right to take all responsibility.

Expenses

Tuition

The charge for tuition for graduate students is $250 a year, one-half being payable on registration and the other half at the beginning of the second semester.

Tuition

In cases where a full time registration is not made, fees for graduate students are as follows:

For one graduate seminary or for any graduate course meeting two hours a week.....	$100
For any graduate course meeting one hour a week.....	$50
For any undergraduate course*.....	$125

Summary of Total Expenses for the Academic Year

Tuition fee.....	$250
Room-rent.....	100
Board.....	400
Infirmary fee†.....	10

Total..... $760

* A special charge of $100 is made to Candidates for the degree of Master of Arts for the advanced undergraduate work that may be offered in partial fulfillment of the requirements for that degree.

† This fee entitles the student to two days (not necessarily consecutive) resident care in the Infirmary and to consultations with the College Physician during her office hours.

Tuition
Fee

The tuition fee for the semester becomes due as soon as the student is registered in the college office. No reduction of this fee will be made on account of absence, dismissal or any reason during a semester, or year covered by the fee in question. If a graduate student is admitted to residence or to attendance on lectures after the beginning of a semester a proportionate reduction is made in the charges for board and room-rent and for tuition. Every student who enters the college must register immediately at the Comptroller's office, and must register her courses at the Office of the Dean of the Graduate School within two weeks after entrance. Permission to make any change in registration must be received from the Dean of the Graduate School.

Students whose fees are not paid before November first in the first semester and before March first in the second semester are not permitted to continue in residence or in attendance on their classes.

Laboratory
Fees

Students registered for laboratory work only are charged a fee of $25 a semester for 5 hours or less a week of laboratory work, with an additional charge of $5 an hour for each additional hour.

Students in the departments of Physics, Chemistry, Geology, Biology and Psychology whose laboratory or field work is done in connection with a graduate course or an advanced undergraduate course that may be counted for an advanced degree, shall be charged a laboratory fee of $10 for each course, the maximum fee charged not to exceed $25. The laboratory fee for laboratory work done in connection with a first or second year undergraduate course is $15.

All graduate students, including fellows and scholars, taking two courses or a course which requires field work in the Department of Social Economy and Social Research are charged a laboratory fee of $10 a semester, and may also be required to provide themselves with two fifty-trip tickets between Bryn Mawr and Philadelphia costing $9.18 each, and to meet their traveling and incidental expenses while working in the field during the semester and vacations. The fee for the certificate is ten dollars, and all fellows and scholars are expected to complete work for a certificate and are charged the ten dollars certificate fee.

Graduation
Fee

The graduation fee for Doctors of Philosophy and Masters of Arts is twenty dollars.

Infirmary
Fees

The infirmary fee is ten dollars for each resident graduate student. Payment of this fee entitles each graduate student to care in the infirmary for two days during the year, with attendance by the college physicians, and, if the illness is not contagious, to nursing. In the event of an illness of longer duration and of all contagious illnesses the student must meet or, in the case of two or more students with the same contagious disease, share the expenses of a special nurse, the infirmary fees, and any hospital or sanitarium charges, should removal from the college be ordered by the Physician-in-Chief.

A special nurse for one student is $14.30 a day or $100.10 a week, which includes nurse's fee, board and laundry, and the student's infirmary fee. In contagious cases the fee is $15.30 a day or $107.10 a week. The infirmary fee for the student is $6.00 a day, which includes nursing, provided that one of the college nurses is able to care for her.

Any resident graduate student becoming ill while away from college is asked to communicate immediately with the Dean of the Graduate School.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

Health

A Health Committee consisting of the President of the College, the Dean of the College, who is Chairman of the Committee, the Dean of the Graduate School, the Director of Physical Education, the Physicians of the College, the Wardens and the Senior Resident of Radnor Hall has charge of the health of the students.

The department of health requires that every student file with the Chairman a certificate of a recent medical examination signed by the student's physician.

A certificate of vaccination within one year of entering college is also demanded, otherwise students must be vaccinated by one of the college physicians. The fee for such vaccination is five dollars.

All entering resident graduate students are required to have a medical, physical and oculist's examination and to follow the health directions of the physicians of the college which will be given them after the examination; those who are reported by the physicians of the college as suffering from uncorrected eye trouble will be expected to take the necessary measures to correct it.

Eminent specialists practising in Philadelphia have consented to act as consulting physicians to the college; their fees will be furnished upon request. Students may consult the Resident Physician without charge at her office in the college Infirmary from 8.30-9.30 A. M. and from 4-5.30 P. M. from Monday to Friday, Saturday from 9-10 A. M., and Sunday by appointment only.

Students ill in the Graduate Hall are required to report their illness immediately to the Senior Resident. Such cases will always be investigated, and if the College Physician believes it advisable, the student will be admitted to the Infirmary. Outside physicians will not be permitted to visit students in the Graduate Hall, unless called in special cases by the College Physician.

Graduate Association

Graduate Association

In 1893 the Bryn Mawr Graduate Association was organized by the graduate students then in residence, its object being to further the social life of the graduate students. In 1925 it took over the regulation of matters in regard to the conduct of the graduate students in cases not purely academic or affecting hall management or the student body as a whole. All persons studying in the Graduate School are members of this association.

THE DEGREES OF MASTER OF ARTS AND DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY

The Degree of Master of Arts

The degree of Master of Arts in no case will be conferred by the college as an honorary degree, but only upon the completion of the following requirements: The Degree of Master of Arts

A graduate student who desires to become a candidate for the M.A. degree should make application, if possible, before May 1st of the year preceding that in which she expects to take the degree. With her application she should submit her complete academic record, including matriculation credits, in order that the Committee on Graduate Students may estimate her work and advise her as to the removal of any deficiencies.

The Committee on Graduate Students has power to grant special consideration to foreign students whose previous training has been of a different character from that required for the A.B. degree in the United States. In such cases, however, the committee may reserve its decision until the student has given satisfactory evidence of her ability in graduate work at Bryn Mawr.

Any deficiency in the preliminary requirements must be made up according to the specifications of the Committee on Graduate Students not later than the last year in which courses are taken for the degree.

PRELIMINARY REQUIREMENTS

(a) Admission to courses.

Preliminary training equivalent to two and one-half units* of undergraduate work at Bryn Mawr College in the subject of the course is in general required for admission to a course to be counted for the M.A. degree. In special cases, with the approval of the department concerned, work in related subjects of equivalent value in preparation may be accepted. In all such cases, however, the candidate must have taken in some one subject the equivalent to two and one-half units of undergraduate work at Bryn Mawr College.

Requirements for the Degree of Master of Arts

(b) Knowledge of Literature.

A candidate is required to present credits for ten semester hours of undergraduate work in Literature, at least five of which must be English Literature. In case of failure to do so she will be required by the Committee on Graduate Students to make up her deficiencies.

* Counted by semester hours this amounts to approximately 20 semester hours. For admission to graduate seminars in the Department of English, however, approximately thirty-two semester hours are required.

(c) Knowledge of Philosophy, Psychology, Laboratory Sciences, or Mathematics.

A candidate is required to present credits for eighteen semester hours of undergraduate work in two or more of the following subjects: Philosophy, Psychology, Laboratory Science (i.e., Physics, Chemistry, Geology, or Biology, accompanied by laboratory work), or Mathematics. Not more than ten semester hours may be in any one of these subjects, and eighteen hours may not be entirely in Philosophy and Psychology. If the candidate has no college or matriculation credit in a laboratory science she will be required by the Committee on Graduate Students to make up her deficiency by taking in Bryn Mawr College, or in another institution approved by the committee, at least six semester hours of laboratory science, which may be counted in the above eighteen hours.

A candidate must be able to read Latin prose of moderate difficulty. This requirement will ordinarily be met by the presentation of three units of matriculation credit. A candidate who falls short of this requirement must make up her deficiency in a way prescribed by the Committee on Graduate Students.

(e) Knowledge of French and German.

A candidate must prove her ability to read French and German by passing written examinations. The Bryn Mawr undergraduate examinations in French and German are accepted as fulfilling this requirement in the case of graduates of Bryn Mawr College.

Examinations in French and German are held each year within two weeks after the opening of college and candidates must present themselves for examination at this time. For candidates who fail in this examination a second examination is held before Thanksgiving. These examinations shall be of the type of the Bryn Mawr General Language Examinations for the A.B. degree, and shall be conducted by the Committees on General Language Examinations.

If five years have passed between the date of a candidate's language examination and the autumn of the year in which she proposes to present herself for the degree she shall be re-examined unless the department in which she is working recommends to the Graduate Committee to excuse her from further examination on the ground of her proficiency in French and German, or French, or German. This shall apply to Bryn Mawr graduates as to all other candidates.

(f) Knowledge of English.

A candidate must be able to give a report and carry on discussion in satisfactory English. A candidate who is unable to write correct English will be required by the Committee on Graduate Students to make up her deficiencies in this respect by doing special work under the direction of the Department of English.

Deficiencies in preliminary requirements may not be made up later than the last year in which courses are taken for the degree.

REQUIREMENTS

Courses.—Every candidate must attend at Bryn Mawr College three unit graduate courses* or two unit graduate courses and one and one-half units of advanced undergraduate work.† These courses must be taken in a field established by one of the accepted combinations of Majors and Minors for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.‡

Requirements for the Degree of Master of Arts

Examinations.—Every candidate is required to take examinations on the courses offered. These examinations are held in the first week of the May examination period. The examination books together with the examiner's estimate of them as "satisfactory" or "unsatisfactory" shall be sent to the Committee on Graduate Students which shall report to the Academic Council.

The work for the degree need not be taken in one year, but examinations on all the courses offered must be taken in the May examination period of the year in which the degree is conferred.

The Degree of Doctor of Philosophy and Master of Arts

The degree of Doctor of Philosophy and Master of Arts will in no case be conferred by the college as an honorary degree, but only upon the completion of the following requirements:

Before an applicant for the degree of Ph.D. can be accepted as a candidate she must submit to the Committee on Graduate Students in writing§ an account of her general preparation, stating in particular the extent of her knowledge of French, German, and Latin, and also the subjects she wishes to offer as Major and Minors for the degree, and the amount and character of her previous work in these subjects. If this statement is satisfactory she will be registered as a candidate. If the candidate's preparation is found by the Committee on Graduate Students to be in any way insufficient she shall be required to undertake suitable extra work.

REQUIREMENTS

1. Time.—The candidate shall devote to graduate work at least the equivalent of three full years. This minimum will usually be exceeded.

2. Residence.—Two full years of work in residence at Bryn Mawr are required. The remainder of the work may be done at other institutions approved by the Committee on Graduate Students. In special cases the committee may accept work done under direction of scholars not directly connected with a college or university.

Requirements for the Degree of Doctor of Philosophy and Master of Arts

* A graduate seminary counts as one graduate unit.

† Undergraduate work thus substituted, while counting for the M.A. degree, may not be counted for the Ph.D. degree.

‡ In exceptional cases for students who have already proved their ability in graduate or advanced undergraduate work in their chief subject of study, a special plan of independent work may be recommended by the department concerned as a substitute for one of the unit graduate courses or for all or part of the one and one-half units of undergraduate work. The recommendation of students for this plan is entirely within the discretion of the department.

 This is the form in which the degree has always been conferred.

§ Using the application blank issued by the Committee on Graduate Students.

3. Subjects.—The course of study shall consist of one principal and one or two subordinate subjects, and shall be divided between at least two departments. The principal subject is known as the Major. When there are two subordinate subjects, one shall be in the same department as the Major or in a closely allied department, and is known as the Associated Minor, and the other shall be in a different department from the Major, and is known as the Independent Minor. When there is one subordinate subject it may be (a) the Independent Minor alone, in which case the Associated Minor and the Major are in the same subject, or (b) equivalent to both the Independent Minor and the Associated Minor, in which case it is known as a Double Minor. A list of all the approved combinations of Majors and Minors has been issued by the Academic Council, and no combination not on this approved list shall be allowed without special action of the Council, except that in the case of Independent Minors the Committee on Graduate Students has the power to accept a subject in a combination not on the approved list, such action, when taken, to be reported to the Council.

Graduate Courses or Seminaries

4. Courses.—Subject to the exception stated below, eight unit graduate courses or seminaries are required for the Ph.D. degree. A unit graduate course or seminary requires approximately one-third of a student's time for one year, so that three such courses will represent full-time work. Students are not permitted to register for more work than this.

Some courses are offered which require less than one-third of a student's time, and these count as proportionate parts of a unit course. When work done elsewhere is offered in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree at Bryn Mawr, the Committee on Graduate Students shall determine the equivalent of such work in terms of unit graduate courses at Bryn Mawr.

Of the eight courses required, six shall be in the Major and Associated Minor and two in the Independent Minor. The division of courses between the Major and Associated Minor, whether these are in the same or different departments, shall be subject to the approval of the Supervising Committee. If the Associated Minor and Independent Minor are in the same department, not less than four courses shall be taken in the major subject.

While the eight graduate courses required are understood to be organized courses, as announced in the Calendar, the department in which a candidate's major work is being done may, at its discretion, direct that other work shall be substituted for one of them. This substitution may be in the Major or in one of the Minors. Work thus substituted for a regular course may not be work upon the dissertation, except in the departments of laboratory science, viz., Physics, Chemistry, Geology, Biology, and Experimental Psychology. Such work must be covered in one of the examinations regularly provided or by a special examination or report. It shall be registered at the Office of the Dean of the Graduate School and at the time of registration its character and the way in which it is to be tested shall be indicated. When, under this option, only one graduate course is taken in the Independent Minor, no mention of the Independent Minor shall be made in the diploma.

If a student's complete work in any one department exceeds two courses it may not be taken with a single instructor, except with the permission of the Committee on Graduate Students.

No undergraduate courses shall count towards the Ph.D. degree, even though a candidate may be obliged to take such courses in order to supplement her preparation in her subjects, except certain advanced courses in science recognized by the Committee on Graduate Students as equivalent to graduate courses in virtue of assigned supplementary reading or laboratory work or both. Such assigned supplementary reading or laboratory work shall be reported in writing by the instructor to the Committee on Graduate Students so as to indicate in what respect the course differs from undergraduate work.

All graduate courses must be completed before the Final Examination.

Journal Clubs.—Every candidate takes part in the work of three Journal Clubs, two in her Major, and one in her Associated Minor; but candidates who are in residence for only two years may omit one of the three. Departments may, however, require participation in Journal Clubs on the part of all students who are pursuing the work as a Major.

*Journal
Clubs*

5. Tests in French, German, English, and Latin.—Every candidate must pass a written examination in the reading at sight of such French and German as it will be necessary for her to read in the course of her work in the major subject. These examinations shall be taken as soon after registration as possible; in any case not later than one calendar year* before the date of the Final Examination.† Any department so desiring may, however, require the passing of these examinations at an earlier point in the student's course. In case of failure, the Committee on Graduate Students may allow a second trial, but not later than an early date in the academic year in which the candidate is to complete the requirements for the degree. If the candidate's Major or Minor is modern French or German she will be excused from the corresponding test.

*Language
Examinations*

Every candidate must be able to write clear and correct English, and may be required to furnish to the Committee on Graduate Students satisfactory evidence of such ability. The candidate may also be required to give evidence that she has some knowledge of Latin.

6. Dissertation.—The candidate shall present a dissertation which must be the result of independent investigation in the field covered by the major subject. It must contain new results, arguments or conclusions or it must present accepted results in a new light. It must be published within three years from the Commencement after the candidate has passed the

Dissertation

* The Committee on Graduate Students regularly offers these examinations on the first Saturday after the Thanksgiving vacation, on the first day of the Mid-Year Examination period, and on the first Saturday after the Spring Vacation.

† Language examinations in French and German for the Ph.D. degree may be taken in the autumn of the year in which the student applies for the degree provided she has been abroad the preceding year and therefore unable to present herself for examination.

Final Examination (unless a special extension of time is granted by the Committee on Graduate Students), and 150* copies must be supplied to the College (addressed to the Office of the Dean of the Graduate School). The candidate shall not be entitled to use the degree until her dissertation shall have been published in approved form.

Examinations

7. Examinations.—The progress and attainments of the candidate shall be tested by examinations and certified, as specified in the printed regulations.

* Two of these must be bound in a specified manner for use in the Library.

COURSE OF STUDY

Graduate courses, which are open only to graduate students, are offered in Comparative Philology and Linguistics, Greek, Latin, English Philology, including Anglo-Saxon, Early and Middle English, English Literature, Modern and Old French, Italian, Spanish, German Literature, Gothic, Teutonic Philology, Old Norse, Old High German, Middle High German, Old Saxon, Biblical Literature, History, Economics and Politics, Social Economy and Social Research, Philosophy, Psychology, Education, Classical Archaeology, History of Art, Music, Mathematics, Physics, Physical and Organic Chemistry, Geology, Mineralogy, Palaeontology, Morphology and Physiology.

*Graduate
Courses*

Advanced undergraduate courses to which graduate students are admitted are offered in all departments.

REGULATIONS

Lists of approved associated and independent minors for all departments will be found in the Regulations of the Academic Council.

Regulations

Books needed by the graduate students are collected in the seminary library of each department.

Biblical Literature

PROFESSOR: HENRY JOEL CADBURY, Ph.D

GRADUATE COURSES

The work of the department is so arranged that students may specialize in Biblical history and literature or in Hellenistic Greek, and the private reading and original research of such students will be directed. Two hours a week of seminary work are offered in each subject and in some cases graduate students may profitably attend the elective courses.

*Graduate
Courses*

Seminary in Critical Readings of the Greek New Testament: Dr Cadbury.

Two hours a week throughout the year

Philological, historical and exegetical study of selected writings in the Greek Bible and in kindred Hellenistic literature. A knowledge of Greek is required.

Seminary in the Bible: Dr. Cadbury.

Two hours a week throughout the year

The study in successive years of different major literary and historical problems of the Bible, with the modern discussions of them. A knowledge of the original languages is useful but not indispensable.

1930-31: Early Christianity.

1931-32: Gospel of John.

1932-33: The Book of Acts.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

The Religion of Israel;

The Life and Teaching of Jesus: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One unit

*Free
Elective
Courses*

(Given in each year)

The Religion of Israel is given during the first semester. It includes a survey of the development of religious ideas and practices among the Hebrews during the early monarchy, under the influence of the prophets, and in the beginning of Judaism. The Life and Teachings of Jesus is given during the second semester. It is a discussion of the principal problems presented by the gospels for a recovery of an understanding of the career and character of Jesus of Nazareth.

These courses may be elected separately each with one-half unit of credit.

Rapid Reading in the Greek New Testament: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

This course is open to students who have passed the matriculation examination in Greek or attended the elementary course in Greek. It is intended to give a knowledge of Biblical Greek and facility in reading. The course is varied so that it may be pursued through several semesters.

New Testament Introduction: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in 1930-31 and again in 1932-33)

A general study of the origin and character of the New Testament writings.

Old Testament Introduction: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

A general study of the origin and character of the Old Testament writings.

Elementary Hebrew: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given when requested)

Biology

PROFESSOR: *DAVID HILT TENNENT, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATES: MARY SUMMERFIELD GARDINER, Ph.D.

DOROTHEA EGLESTON SMITH, Ph.D.

LECTURER: PAUL ORR, Ph.D.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

Ten hours a week of seminary work and graduate lectures are offered to graduate students of biology accompanied by the direction of private reading, laboratory work and original research. The advanced undergraduate courses of the department may be elected by graduate students. These courses are varied from year to year, so as to form a consecutive course for students who wish to make biology one of the chief subjects of the examination for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Such students may specialize either in animal morphology under the guidance of Dr. Tennent or in physiology or biochemistry under the guidance of Dr. Smith.

Seminary in Zoölogy: Dr. Tennent.* Three hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1930-31: Embryology of Invertebrates.

The work includes a systematic survey of the normal development of invertebrates; of the problems of germinal organization, cleavage and differentiation, and a discussion of the bearing of these questions on evolution and inheritance.

1931-32: Cytology.

* Granted leave of absence for the year 1930-31. The courses announced by Dr. Tennent will be given by Dr. Gardiner.

The work deals with the anatomy of the cell and the relations and functions of its various structures in unicellular and multicellular organisms. Special attention is given to the phenomena of spermatogenesis and oögenesis and the theories connected therewith.

Seminary in Biochemistry: Dr. Smith. Three hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in each year)

This course consists of supervised reading on selected topics, and pre-research training in laboratory methods. In certain cases a special problem may be undertaken. The advanced undergraduate course or its equivalent is prerequisite. Some knowledge of organic and physical chemistry is assumed.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Tennent* and Dr. Smith.

There is no regular course of laboratory instruction for graduates. Each student desiring to devote a considerable portion of her time to such work is given an experimental problem for verification or extension. The nature of the work depends in each case on the qualifications of the student.

Biological Journal Club: Dr. Tennent* and Dr. Smith.

One hour a week throughout the year.

The advanced students and the instructors meet for the presentation and discussion of topics of current biological literature.

*Journal
Club*

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses.

*Advanced
Courses*

Cytology: Dr. Tennent.*

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1930-31)

This course consists of a study of the structure of protoplasm, the structure of the cell, the phenomena of cell division, maturation, and fertilization. Both plant and animal cells are studied, and instruction is given in methods of preparing cytological material for microscopical examination. At least six hours of laboratory work are required.

Embryology of Vertebrates: Dr. Tennent.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1932-33)

This course consists of lectures, assigned reading, and laboratory work on the embryology of vertebrates. The lectures deal with the development of specific forms and with theoretical questions of embryological interest. The department has material for the study of the development of Amphioxus, Ascidian, Annia, Lepidosteus, Squalus, Ctenolabrus, Necturus, Rana, Chrysemys, Chick, and Pig. At least six hours of laboratory work are required.

The course is divided as follows: Early stages of Development is the subject of the first semester and Organogeny is the subject of the second semester

Biochemistry: Dr. Smith.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

This course deals with the simpler aspects of the chemistry of living organisms. The properties and reactions of substances of biological importance are studied. Since a knowledge of organic chemistry is essential, students are advised to study organic chemistry first. However, in exceptional cases this course may be taken in the same year with second-year chemistry. There are two lectures and six hours of laboratory work each week.

* Granted leave of absence for the year 1930-31. The courses offered by Dr. Tennent will be given by Dr. Gardiner.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

*Free
Elective
Courses*

Biology of Bacteria and Protozoa: Dr. Smith.

Credit: One unit.(Given in 1930-31)

During the first semester the time is devoted to an introduction to general bacteriology, covering the routine bacteriological technique and a consideration of the principles of immunity and infection. During the second semester problems of growth and cell division of bacteria and protozoa are treated. The rôle of bacteria in nature and their economic importance are also discussed. Some special work is assigned to each student. The first year course in Biology is prerequisite. There are two lectures and six hours of laboratory work each week.

Theoretical Biology: Dr. Tennent.

Credit: One-half unit.(Not given in 1930-31)

This course deals with the development of theories of biology. It is open to students who have completed the first year course in biology. It will not be given for less than five students.

Chemistry

PROFESSOR:

JAMES LLEWELLYN CRENSHAW, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATE:

NELSON KELLOGG RICHTMYER, Ph.D.

INSTRUCTOR:

EDITH HAMILTON LANMAN, M.A.

GRADUATE COURSES

*Graduate
Courses*

The graduate courses in chemistry consist of lectures upon inorganic, organic, and physical chemistry, seminars, reports upon current chemical literature, and laboratory work. A reading knowledge of French and German is indispensable.

The lecture courses are varied from year to year to meet the requirements of students and to form a consecutive course for those who wish to make chemistry the major subject in the examination for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Such students may specialize either in physical or inorganic chemistry under the direction of Dr. Crenshaw, or in organic chemistry under the direction of Dr. Richtmyer.

Chemical Seminary, Physical Chemistry: Dr. Crenshaw.

Two hours a week throughout the year(Given in each year)

In the lectures no attempt is made to give a general survey of the subject but certain selected portions of the science are treated in detail and the student is made familiar with problems of current interest. Students counting this course as the equivalent of a seminary are required to do enough laboratory work to make the work of the course occupy fourteen hours a week. The laboratory work consists of physico-chemical measurements.

Inorganic Chemistry: Dr. Crenshaw. One hour a week throughout the year.(Given in each year)

The work of the seminary consists of lectures, required reading, and reports on various topics. The needs of the individual students are considered in selecting the subjects for discussion.

Chemical Seminary, Organic Chemistry: Dr. Richtmyer.

One hour a week throughout the year.(Given in each year)

This is intended primarily for students who are carrying on research in organic chemistry and consists of reports on assigned topics which are usually related to the research in which the student is engaged.

Graduate Organic Chemistry: Dr. Richtmyer.

One hour a week throughout the year.(Given in each year)

Lectures, reading, and occasional reports cover the historical developments and present status of subjects of current interest.

Students counting this course as the equivalent of a seminary are required to do enough laboratory work to make the work of the course occupy fourteen hours a week. The nature of this work depends so largely on the past training of the student that no definite statement can be made regarding it. A sufficiently advanced student may be assigned a problem to investigate.

Chemical Journal Club: Dr. Crenshaw, Dr. Richtmyer, and Miss Lanman.

*One hour a week throughout the year.Journal
Club

The advanced students and the instructors meet to hear reports and discuss recent scientific articles.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses.

Advanced
Courses

Physical Chemistry: Dr. Crenshaw.

Credit: One and one-half units.(Given in each year)

The aim of the lectures is to extend the student's knowledge of physical chemistry and to lay a foundation for independent work in this subject. The lectures are supplemented by assigned reading and reports and are intended to give a general outline of the subject. The solution of a large number of problems is required.

The laboratory work is designed to prepare the students for physio-chemical research. When this course is offered as a seminary the student is required to devote to it one-third of her time. By special arrangement this course may count for more than one and one-half units of credit.

Advanced Organic Chemistry: Dr. Richtmyer.

Credit: One unit.(Given in each year)

The course consists of lectures, assigned reading with occasional reports, and laboratory work. During the past year the following subjects received particular emphasis: quaternary ammonium compounds, simple types of unsaturation, the ketenes, conjugated systems, the quinones, non-benzenoid cyclic hydrocarbons, the properties of aromatic compounds, heterocyclic systems, the carbohydrates, stereochemistry. The laboratory work includes a study of the more important synthetical reactions of organic chemistry.

By special arrangement this course may count for more than one unit of credit.

Inorganic Chemistry: Miss Lanman.

Credit: One unit.(Given in each year)

Selected topics in inorganic chemistry are discussed in detail, and parallel reading is required. The laboratory work consists of advanced quantitative analyses. By special arrangement this course may count for more than one unit of credit.

Classical Archæology

PROFESSOR:	*RHYS CARPENTER, Ph.D.
ASSOCIATE PROFESSORS:	MARY HAMILTON SWINDLER, Ph.D. ‡PRENTICE DUELL, M.Arch.
INSTRUCTOR:	To be appointed.

Two archæological seminars of two hours a week each and a graduate lecture course of one hour a week throughout the year are offered to graduate students who have done elementary archæological work, and also a journal club meeting one and a half hours a fortnight. In addition individual students will be directed in special work by means of private conferences.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

Two seminars in archæology, a graduate course, and a journal club in archæology are offered to graduate students in addition to the undergraduate courses which are open also to graduate students. A good reading knowledge of both French and German is indispensable, and familiarity with both Greek and Latin, though not required, is of the utmost value for graduate work in archæology.

In connection with graduate courses the students have access to the collections belonging to the department containing replicas of Greek and Roman Coins, facsimiles of gems and seals, and a collection of original vase fragments many of which are by Roman masters.

Archæological Seminary: Dr. Swindler. Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in each year)

1930-31: Ægean Archæology with Emphasis on the Recent Discoveries in Crete and Mycenæ.

1931-32: Ancient Painting, including a Detailed Survey of Cretan Frescoes, Painted Plaques, Stelæ, and Sarcophagi, Greek Vases, Paintings found in Etruscan Tombs, Pompeian Wall Decoration, and the Mummy Portraits from the Fayum.

1932-33: Archaic Greek Sculpture.

Archæological Seminary: Dr. Morgan. Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in each year)

This seminary is open only to graduate students who have had some previous training in classical archæology. The order of the subjects may be changed in accordance with the needs of the students.

1930-31: Fifth Century Greek Architecture.

1931-32: Hellenistic Architecture.

1932-33: Fourth Century Greek Sculpture.

Greek Epigraphy: Dr. Carpenter.* One hour a week throughout the year.
(Given in each year)

* Granted leave of absence to fill the post of Director of the School for Classical Studies in Athens.

† Granted leave of absence for the years 1929-31. The seminars announced by Mr. Duell will be given by an Instructor to be appointed.

In the first semester the origin of the Greek alphabet and the epichoric forms are studied Roehl's Imagines and Part I of Robert's Introduction to Greek Epigraphy are used as textbooks. In the second semester a variety of inscriptions of artistic and topographic interest are read. The emphasis is archaeological rather than linguistic or politico-historical.

Archæological Journal Club: Dr. Carpenter,* Dr. Swindler, Mr. Duell† and Dr. Morgan. One and a half hours a fortnight throughout the year.

The graduate students and the instructors meet for the presentation and discussion of topics of current archæological literature.

Comparative Philology and Linguistics

This department is under the joint direction of the professors in charge of philological work in the language departments. Comparative Philology and Linguistics may be offered as an independent minor, but not as a Major subject for the Ph.D. Graduate students in the language departments, if so directed by the department of major work, may take any of the courses listed below and count them as a part of their philology in the Major Department. Undergraduate preparation entitling to graduate work in any of the language departments will entitle to work in this department.

The following courses are offered:

Sanskrit: Dr. Mezger.

Two hours a week during one semester.

(Given in 1930-31)

Sounds and forms of Sanskrit are studied on a comparative basis.

Old and Middle Welsh: Dr. Mezger.

Two hours a week during one semester.

(Given in 1930-31)

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

Two or three seminars are offered each year in addition to the direction of private reading and original research. Two or more advanced undergraduate courses which may be elected by graduate students are given in each year. Students may offer either economics or politics as their major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

Seminary in Economics: Dr. Marion Parris Smith.

Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in 1930-31)

The object of the seminary is to train students in the methods of research and in the organization of material. Through short reports and longer papers, members of the seminary are given practice in using original sources and in critical study of secondary sources. The seminary discussion is supplemented by occasional lectures. Each student receives individual direction according to her particular needs and interests. The graduate studies pursued in the seminary are designed to assist in fulfilling the requirements for the higher degrees, in qualifying the student for teaching or further research in economics, and in preparing for various government civil service examinations.

1930-31: Present Problems in Distribution.

The subject of the seminary is the distribution of wealth in the modern industrial state. This includes such topics as the study of statistics of income, wage problems, limitation of profits and profit sharing, income and excess profit taxation, land reforms, projects for controlling monopolies, etc.

1931-32: The Industrial Revolution in Great Britain and Europe.

1932-33: Economic Institutions in the United States (including finance and banking, agriculture, manufacturing, and commerce).

1933-34: Economic Thought in the Nineteenth Century.

Seminary in Politics: Dr. Fenwick.

Two hours a week throughout the year.(Not given in 1930-31)

The methods of the seminary are designed to guide advanced students in special research work along the lines indicated by the titles of the courses. Some lectures are given but the main attention is devoted to the presentation and criticism of the results of studies made by the students themselves.

1931-32: Constitutional Questions Involved in Modern Economic and Social Problems.

1932-33: International Law.

1933-34: The Constitutional Law of the United States.

Seminary in Politics: Dr. Wells.

Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in each year)

1930-31: The History of Political Thought.

The purpose of this seminary is twofold: first, to familiarize the student with the writings of the principal political thinkers from Plato to the present time; and second, to enable the student to grasp clearly the main problems which political theory is called upon to explain and to solve. The work of the seminary includes lectures, general reading, student reports, and general class discussions.

1931-32: Comparative Municipal Government and Administration.

1932-33: American and Foreign Political Parties and Electoral Problems.

Economics and Politics Journal Club: Dr. Marion Parris Smith, Dr. Fenwick and Dr. Wells.

Journal ClubTwo hours once a fortnight throughout the year.

At the meetings recent books and articles are reviewed and the results of special investigations presented for discussion, comment, and criticism.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses.

Advanced Courses

American Economic and Social Problems: Dr. M. P. Smith.

Credit: One unit.(Given in 1930-31)

(This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year courses in economics.)

The object of the course is to give advanced students training in the use of source material for economic and social studies and in the methods of research requisite for graduate or professional studies. A few introductory lectures trace the history of certain social and economic events in the United States from 1865 to the present time; but the main work of the course consists in studies made by the students and presented to the class for discussion. Among the subjects included are Changes in Urban and Rural Population, Development of City Life, Problems of Country Life, Immigration and Race Problems, Food Distribution and Marketing, Standards of Living, Newer Phases of the Unemployment Problem.

American Constitutional Law: Dr. Fenwick.

Credit: One unit.(Given in 1930-31)

(This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year courses in politics.)

This is a strictly legal course devoted to an analysis and criticism of the leading decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States. The method followed consists in the assignment of individual cases for oral report and discussion, together with longer written reports covering a group of related cases.

International Law: Dr. Fenwick.

Credit: One unit.(Given in 1931-32)

(This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year courses in politics.)

The object of the course is to examine the existing rules of international law in order to determine their origin, their general observance, and their applicability to the changed conditions of modern life. Special stress is laid upon the interpretation of international law by the United States and upon the organization and administration of the League of Nations.

Money and Banking: An instructor to be appointed.

Credit: One unit.

(The course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year courses in economics.)

Modern Political Thought: Dr. Wells.

Credit: One unit.

(This course is open to students who have completed the first and second year courses in politics.)

The course is devoted to a detailed study of western political thought from Machiavelli to the present time. It was given in 1929-30.

Public Opinion and Political Parties: Dr. Wells.

Credit: One unit.(Given in 1931-32)

Municipal Institutions: Dr. Wells.

Credit: One unit.(Given in 1932-33)

FREE ELECTIVE COURSE

Elements of Law: Dr. Fenwick.

Credit: One-half unit.(Given in 1931-32)

(This course may be elected only by students who have completed the first course in politics or in economics or in history.)

The object of this course is to familiarize the student with the principles and technical terms of those branches of private law with which the ordinary citizen is brought into contact. The topics covered include Persons and Domestic Relations, Contracts, Torts, Real and Personal Property, and the chief forms of procedure. The lectures are supplemented by a study and discussion of court cases bearing on the subject.

Education

This Department is organized in part from the Phebe Anna Thorne Endowment and is connected with the Phebe Anna Thorne School

PROFESSOR:	AGNES LOW ROGERS, Ph.D.
ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR:	ILSE FOREST, Ph.D.
INSTRUCTOR:	CECELIA IRENE BAECHE, M.A.
DEMONSTRATOR:	E. LOUISE HAMILTON, Ph.D.

The department offers graduate courses designed to meet the needs of two types of students—graduate students who desire to qualify for a teacher's certificate, and graduate students who have had sufficient undergraduate training in education to qualify them for graduate work leading to a higher degree.

The degree of Master of Arts in Education and the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Education are open to graduates of all colleges of high standing under the general conditions prescribed for their degrees.

Students offering themselves as candidates for these degrees in Education must have studied in undergraduate courses: Psychology for 10 semester hours, Principles of Education for 4 semester hours, and Sociology, Statistics, or Education singly or in any combination for 6 semester hours.

THE PHEBE ANNA THORNE SCHOOL

The Phebe Anna Thorne School opened in the autumn of 1913 under the direction of the Bryn Mawr College Graduate Department of Education. It is maintained in part by an endowment of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars given by the executors of the estate of the late Phebe Anna Thorne to perpetuate her deep interest in school education and her desire to further research in the best methods of teaching school subjects. In 1922 the Phebe Anna Thorne School Association was organized and since then the school has been operated on a new financial basis. The Phebe Anna Thorne School is an integral part of the Graduate Department of Education and affords its students an opportunity to follow the work of the teachers of the school and discuss in seminars conducted by the professors of education the various problems of teaching and administration as they arise from day to day. Pupils are admitted to the pre-school class at four years and to the primary department at five years of age and to the elementary course at nine or ten years of age and will be fitted to enter Bryn Mawr and other colleges on the completion of a seven or eight years' school course. Candidates for the Teacher's Certificate or for higher degrees will be given an opportunity of attending systematic observation classes in the Phebe Anna Thorne School. It is believed that the opportunity of studying the newest approved methods of secondary teaching will enable teachers who have studied in the Graduate Department of Education to teach more efficiently and to command materially higher salaries.

A limited number of Apprentice Teachers are taken in the Phebe Anna Thorne School, who give one-third of their time to the School. The remaining two-thirds of their time are given to graduate work in Bryn Mawr College. This work is directly related to the school work. One-third must be in methods of teaching in their field. The rest may be Educational Psychology, Child Psychology or in the subjects to be taught.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

Six hours a week of seminary work are offered in each year to graduate students of education. In addition there are offered observation classes in the Phebe Anna Thorne School and other schools. The Department of Education also conducts an Educational Clinic in which examinations are made and advice given in regard to cases of retardation in special school subjects, general retardation, or any other maladjustment to school environment. Students electing education as their major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy may elect educational psychology, educational methodology, economics, social economy, social history, social psychology, or experimental and systematic psychology, as the associated minor. The list of approved independent minors will be found in the Regulations of the Academic Council.

Dr. Rogers will offer one of the following seminaries in accordance with the need and preparation of the students.

Seminary in Clinical Methods in Child Guidance: Dr. Rogers.

Three hours a week throughout the year.

This seminary gives training in the diagnosis of educational difficulties at all levels and also practical experience in giving remedial treatment as well as a critical study of the diagnosis and remedial methods now in use. The seminary is recommended to students preparing for work in child guidance clinics, for child welfare work and as visiting teachers and school counselors.

Seminary in Advanced Mental Measurements: Dr. Rogers.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

This seminary is devoted to the critical investigation of specific problems in the field of mental measurement and to training in research in applied psychology.

Seminary in Advanced Educational Psychology: Dr. Rogers.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

The main problems of educational psychology, and especially the psychology of elementary and high school subjects are studied from a theoretical and experimental point of view.

Seminary in Social Education: Dr. Forest.

Two hours a week during the first semester.

Seminary in Advanced Principles of Education: Dr. Forest and Miss Baechle.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

This seminary is organized to give students experience in recognizing and solving in actual practice some of the problems inherent in teaching their major subject to high school and elementary school pupils. The work includes a study of child development and behavior in direct relation to problems of curriculum making and class room method. The seminary is planned with special reference to the needs of students taking their first year of graduate study in education.

Seminary in Theory of Education: Dr. Forest.

Two hours a week throughout the year

This seminary is devoted to the study of modern educational theory, and to a consideration of the issues involved in actual and proposed solutions of present educational problems. Practical problems of curriculum, method, and school administration directly in line with the interests of individual students will be discussed in the seminary, and will in so far as possible determine the content of the theoretical readings in the philosophy of education

Journal Club in Education: Dr. Rogers, Dr. Forest and Miss Baechle.

Journal ClubTwo hours once a fortnight throughout the year.

The instructors and students meet to report on and discuss recent reviews and articles and the results of special investigations are presented for comment and criticism.

Elective
Courses*

For a description of this course see the Department of Psychology, p. 81. This course may be elected by students who have attended the second year course in Experimental Psychology and if taken in combination with that course the credit is one and one-half units.

Child Psychology: Dr. Forest.

Credit: One unit.

This course deals with the psychological aspect of child development. A study is made of the mental and emotional characteristics of growing children, with special reference to the problems of training and guidance arising at various age levels.

Principles of Education: Dr. Forest.

Credit: One unit

This course treats of the principles basic to educational procedure. The origin and significance of present controversies in education are presented during the first semester through a study of the rise and development of educational institutions. During the second semester special emphasis is placed upon the philosophy and the practice of modern progressive schools.

Geology

ASSOCIATES: EDWARD H. WATSON, Ph.D.

A. LINCOLN DRYDEN, Ph.D.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

The seminaries in petrology and crystallography should be preceded by the major and advanced undergraduate courses or their equivalents and are intended primarily for graduate students wishing to make inorganic geology a major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. The seminary in crystallography is also intended to meet the needs of graduate students in chemistry who wish to make crystallography a minor subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. The seminary in invertebrate palaeontology is designed primarily for graduate students wishing to make organic geology a major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Further seminaries in petrology and palaeontology will be arranged to suit the requirements of candidates for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy and research problems will be assigned.

Students may specialize either in petrology and crystallography, under the direction of Dr. Watson, or in stratigraphic geology and palaeontology, under the direction of Dr. Dryden, but students who make inorganic geology the major subject of examination must take either organic geology, economic geology or inorganic chemistry as the associated minor, and students who elect organic geology as the major subject must take either inorganic geology or biology as the associated minor.

Seminary in Petrology or Crystallography or Metamorphic Geology:
Dr. Watson.

Three hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

The seminary is conducted by means of lectures, informal discussions, required reading, laboratory work, and formal reports. The selection of subjects in petrology is dependent upon the needs of the individual students and is varied from year to year. In crystallography direction is given in crystal measurement with the two-circle goniometer, in crystal projection, and crystal drawing. When metamorphic geology is the subject of the seminary the products and processes of anamorphism and katamorphism are investigated and classified.

Seminary in Invertebrate Palaeontology or Economic Geology: Dr. Dryden.

Three hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Invertebrate Palaeontology.

The course is intended as an introduction to research work in palaeontology. Practice is given in preparation of material and in identification. Several biologic groups are traced through their geologic range.

Economic Geology.

The occurrence and origin of metallic and non-metallic mineral deposits. Practice is given in interpretation of textures and structures of polished ore specimens.

Geological Journal Club: Dr. Watson and Dr. Dryden.

Two hours once a fortnight throughout the year.

Journal
Club

The graduate students and the instructors meet for the presentation and discussion of recent geological literature.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses.

Advanced
Courses

Optical Mineralogy and Descriptive Petrography;

Laboratory Work: Dr. Watson.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

Optical Mineralogy is given during the first semester. The course deals with the principles of optical mineralogy and a full training is given in the emersion method of mineral identification. This course is essential for all courses in petrography and petrology.

Descriptive Petrography is given during the second semester. The course deals with the mineralogy, texture, chemistry, origin, and geographic distribution of igneous rocks.

Prerequisites: elementary geology, historical geology, determinative mineralogy and optical mineralogy.

Stratigraphy and Palaeontology;

Laboratory Work: Dr. Dryden.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

Three hours a week are devoted to lectures, six hours a week to laboratory. The work of the first semester consists of lectures and assigned reading in sedimentation. This is studied by a study of the successive formations and their faunas.

Prerequisites: elementary geology, historical geology, systematic palaeontology, and structural geology.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSE

Glaciology and Advanced Physiography;

Laboratory Work: Dr. Dryden.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

Free
Elective
Course

Glaciology is given during the first semester. This course considers the erosive and depositional features of mountain and continental glaciers. Particular emphasis is on the Pleistocene, but the earlier Ice Ages are also considered.

Advanced Physiography is given during the second semester. This course deals with land forms and their origin. Selected areas are also studied.

Prerequisites: elementary geology and historical geology.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

Eight hours a week of seminary work and graduate lectures are offered each year to graduate students of German and Germanic Philology accompanied by the direction of private reading and original research.

The courses are so varied that they may be followed by graduate students throughout three successive years and cover the work required of students who offer German Literature as a major or a minor for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Students who elect German Literature as their major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy must offer Germanic Philology as an associated minor and students who offer Germanic Philology as a major subject must offer German Literature as an associated minor. In the major together with the associated minor the student must offer two seminars and a journal club for three years.

Seminary in German Literature: Dr. Diez.

Three hours a week throughout the year.

1930-31: Topics from the History of the Drama: Friedrich Hebbel and the Nibelungen legend in the 19th century.

1932-33: Topics from the History of the Lyric.

Journal Club

German Journal Club: Dr. Diez and Dr. Mezger.

Two hours once a fortnight throughout the year

At the meetings recent books and articles are reviewed and the results of special investigations presented for discussion, comment, and criticism.

GERMANIC PHILOLOGY

The instruction in this department is under the direction of Dr. Fritz Mezger. The English and the German departments together have provided for a complete course in Germanic philology, comprising both the study of the individual languages (Gothic, Norse, Anglo-Saxon, Old Saxon, Old High German, Middle High German, Middle Low German, etc.), and the study of general comparative philology.

Students intending to elect Germanic philology are advised to study Greek for at least one year during their undergraduate course.

Introduction to Germanic Philology: Dr. Mezger.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1930-31)

Gothic and West Germanic sounds and inflection are studied on a comparative basis.

Old Norse: Dr. Mezger.

Two hours a week during the first semester.

This seminary is given when the seminars in Introduction to Germanic Philology and in Germanic Philology are not given.

Old Saxon and Old Frisian: Dr. Mezger.

Two hours a week during the second semester.

This seminary is given when the seminars in Introduction to Germanic Philology and in Germanic Philology are not given.

Germanic Metrics and German Style: Dr. Mezger.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

Six hours a week of seminary work are offered each year to graduate students of Greek, accompanied by the direction of private reading and original research.

The graduate courses in Greek are varied from year to year in two series, Attic Tragedy, Orators, and Historians, and the Homeric Question. Plato, Aristophanes and Greek Sophists, in order that they may be taken in consecutive years. Students electing Greek as a major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy must offer not less than two seminars and the journal club for two years and if Greek be also elected as the associated minor the candidate must offer two seminars and the journal club for three years. A large part of the work expected of graduate students consists of courses of reading pursued under the direction of the department, and reports on this reading are from time to time required of the students. A reading knowledge of French and German is required. The course in Comparative Philology is recommended to graduate students of Greek. For graduate courses in Classical Archæology, which may be offered as an associated or independent minor by students taking Greek as a major for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, see pages 48 and 49.

Greek Seminary: Dr. Sanders.

Three hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1930-31: Attic Tragedy.

The work of the seminary in textual criticism is devoted to Sophocles. Members of the seminary report on assigned subjects and give critical summaries of current classical literature.

1931-32: Greek Orators.

The work consists of the reading of large portions of all the orators and the critical interpretation of a selected part of each. Lectures are given on legal antiquities, the syntax, and the style of the various authors, in conjunction with which Dionysius of Halicarnassus and the Greek rhetoricians are studied. The later rhetoricians are treated and their criticisms of antiquity investigated. Students are expected to provide themselves with the Teubner text editions of Antiphon, Andocides, Lysias, Isocrates, Isæus, Æschines, Hyperides, and Demosthenes. The classical library is well equipped with works on the orators.

1932-33: Greek Historians.

Thucydides is studied in detail and reports are made on data of history contained in Greek literature in general. Lectures are given by the instructor on subjects connected with Greek historiography, such as the composition of Thucydides' history, the syntax and style of Thucydides, the history of early prose, Greek historical inscriptions.

Greek Seminary: Dr. Wright.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1930-31: Plato.

The work is mainly literary and critical. Lectures on the style, philosophy, and chronology of the dialogues are given by the instructor; a detailed interpretation of a portion of Plato, and reports on topics set for discussion are given by the class. The students are expected to read the Republic, Theætetus, Parmenides, and Sophist and discuss certain problems arising from these dialogues. The aim of the course is to lay a foundation for independent work by familiarizing the students with the achievements of scholarship and the general field of Platonic literature up to the present day. Every member of the seminary should provide herself in advance with a complete text of Plato. The Clarendon Press (Oxford) edition is recommended.

1931-32: The Homeric Question.

1st Semester.

The work consists of a review of the discussions of the Homeric question since the publication of Wolf's Prolegomena. The various tests that have been applied to the poems by archæologists, linguists, historians of myths, and æsthetic critics are taken up and criticized in detail.

Greek Sophists of the Fourth Century A.D.

2nd Semester.

The works of the Emperor Julian, Libanius and others are read and discussed. Lectures and reports are given on the literary movements of the second, third and fourth centuries A.D.

1932-33: Aristophanes.

The aim of the seminary is to make the students familiar with the more important Aristophanic literature up to the present day. Portions of the text are interpreted by the class and reports on assigned topics, literary, historical, and archæological, connected with the plays are expected from all the members. All the comedies of Aristophanes are read in the course of the year; lectures are given by the instructor on the metres and syntax of Aristophanes, on the dramatic structure of the plays and on the history of Attic comedy. Part of the work consists of analyses of dissertations on Aristophanes which are presented by members of the class. Every member of the class should provide herself in advance with a complete text of Aristophanes. The Clarendon Press (Oxford) edition is recommended.

Greek Journal Club: Dr. Sanders and Dr. Wright.

One and one-half hours once a fortnight throughout the year.

*Journal
Club*

The instructors and the advanced students meet to report on and discuss recent articles and books.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges, graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses. The value of each course is one-half unit.

GRADUATE COURSES

Apart from the direction of private reading and original research, seminars in Mediæval and Modern European history and in American history are offered to graduate students of history together with a graduate course in Historical Bibliography and Criticism and the Auxiliary Sciences. Students may offer either European History or American History as a major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

*Graduate
Courses*

Seminary in Mediæval and Modern European History: Dr. Gray.

Two or three hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1930-31: Topics in the History of England from 1250 to 1450.

Among these are national resistance to papal encroachments, the military, financial and legal innovations of Edward I, the causes of the Hundred Years War, the conduct of the war by Edward III, the role of Italians and Hansards in English economic life, the rise of the woolen industry and of a native merchant class, the consequences of the Great Pestilence, the doctrines advocated by Wycliffe, the Council of Constance, the loss of English possessions on the Continent, and the development of Parliament.

1931-32: Topics in the History of England from 1450 to 1600.

Among these are the significance of the War of the Roses, the reconstructed administration of Yorkists and Tudors, the agrarian and industrial problems of the sixteenth century, new international ambitions after 1485, the renunciation of papal authority by the English church, the consequent dogmatic and social changes, the maintenance of Protestantism under Elizabeth, commercial rivalry with Spain and the defeat of the Armada.

1932-33: Topics in the History of Europe since 1870.

Among these are the Bismarckian system, the rise of the third French Republic, the development of industrial England, the policy of the Tsars, the genesis and progress of the World War, the Treaty of Versailles and the problems of post-war Europe.

Seminary in American History: Dr. William Roy Smith.

Two or three hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1930-31: Slavery and Negro Problem.

After a preliminary survey of the history of slavery in the colonial period such topics as the slavery compromises of the constitution, the growth of slavery in the South, the abolition of the slave trade, the Missouri Compromise, the anti-Slavery movement, nullification, the Mexican War, the Wilmot Proviso, the compromise measures of 1859, the Kansas-Nebraska bill, the Dred Scott decision, the abolition of slavery, and the adoption of the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments are discussed. Special attention is paid to the conflict between sectionalism and nationalism and the connection between slavery, territorial expansion, and the development of constitutional theories.

1931-32: The Revolution, the Confederation, and the Constitution.

American history from 1776 to 1789 is discussed primarily from the local point of view as a step in the conflict between the seaboard aristocracy and the democracy of the frontier. The social and economic forces which led to the adoption of the Federal Constitution and the subsequent formation of national political parties are investigated.

1932-33: The Civil War and Reconstruction.

Special stress is laid upon the social, economic, and political reorganization of the South, the North, and the West, and also of the nation as a whole during the period from 1861 to 1877.

Seminary in the Constitutional History of England from earliest times to the Accession of Edward I.: Dr. David.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1932-33)

The course is based upon a wide reading of the sources, particularly those collected in Select Charters and other Illustrations of English Constitutional History, arranged and edited by William Stubbs, and on a careful examination of the older and the more recent theories of English constitutional development which are contained in an extensive secondary literature. The topics studied include: the origin of early English institutions, the institutions of the Anglo-Saxon period, the consequences of the Norman Conquest, the introduction of feudalism and its influence on constitutional development, the growth of the Norman monarchy, legal and administrative institutions under Henry II, the Exchequer, finance and taxation, Magna Carta, municipal institutions, the rise of a national spirit, the struggle between the king and the barons and the attempts to devise constitutional checks upon royal power during the reign of Henry III.

Seminary on the Age of the French Revolution: Dr. David.Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in 1930-31)

The subject matter of the course is chosen with reference to the needs and interests of the students who take it, the principal emphasis usually being placed upon France, but sometimes upon England. Topics are selected with a view to illustrating different kinds of historical problems and gaining an acquaintance with the principal printed sources and secondary works and extending the student's knowledge of the whole era from about 1750 to 1815. Attention is paid to social and economic as well as to political problems. The intellectual background of the revolutionary and reform efforts is also considered.

Historical Bibliography and Criticism and the Auxiliary Sciences: Dr. David.Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in 1931-32)

This graduate course should be elected by all students who are preparing themselves for the Ph.D. degree with History as a Major.

The principal subjects studied are historical bibliography, historical criticism, the history of history, and the auxiliary sciences, chronology, palaeography, and diplomatics. The course consists of lectures, assigned reading and problem work, and adjustments are made to meet the needs of individual students.

Historical Journal Club: Dr. Gray, Dr. William Roy Smith, Dr. David Dean Manning and Dr. Robbins.Journal Club

The instructors in the department of history and the graduate students who are pursuing advanced courses in history meet once a fortnight to make reports upon assigned topics, review recent articles and books, and present the results of special investigations.

Advanced CoursesCredit: One unit.Europe since 1870: Dr. Gray.(Given in each year)

This course is designed for students who wish to know the genesis and setting of contemporary social and political problems. It is of necessity largely concerned with the causes, progress, and effects of the World War. The rise of Germany as a unified industrial state, her rivalry with her neighbours, the consequent formation of alliances, the immediate antecedents of the war, the military and industrial conduct of it, the appearances of revolutionary governments in central and eastern Europe, the consequences of the peace of Versailles, and the strong position of labour in post-bellum society are among the subjects studied. A reading knowledge of French is required.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

Four hours a week of seminary work are offered each year to graduate students of history of art accompanied by the direction of private reading and original research, and the courses are varied from year to year so that they may be pursued by students through three or more successive years. In addition to the graduate seminars announced, other courses will be provided as need for them arises, and individual students will be directed in special work by means of private conferences. History of Art may be offered as a major for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. The first and second year courses of the department amounting to three and one-half units may be elected by graduate students.

Seminary in History of Art: Miss King. Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1930-31: Romanesque Origins; Architecture.

The work is devoted to architecture in Italy, France and Spain; the theories of Dieulafoy, Rivoira and Strzygowski are examined and appraised, and special regions particularly studied, while the students give close attention to individual monuments. In another year the sources of Romanesque figure-sculpture, especially in those countries, are studied and its development traced with due consideration of current theories as to priority, influence and outcome.

This course may be varied from year to year so as to permit a student's following it for more than one year, if desirable.

1931-32: Spanish Painting; Early Manuscripts to the Primitives, ending arbitrarily in 1550.

1932-33: Spanish Painting; The Golden Century.

In this two-year course the sources and development of Spanish painting are considered from the early miniature down to the work of living painters, a single epoch being selected in any one year. Students are expected to learn something about the Spanish character and history and to make short trips to see paintings on exhibition in America.

Either in 1933-34 or in the following year the subject will be Renaissance Sculpture and the students will be expected to study the various aspects of the art in the different countries of Europe, as well as the development of particular sculptors.

Graduate work in modern painting will also be arranged for any student who wishes to combine History of Art with English or French literature, and a course, if needed, offered in Sources and Problems of Modern Art. While the order of the courses may be altered to suit the needs of individual students, certain canons of art and certain aesthetic problems will be considered in successive years.

Tuscan Painting in the Trecento: Mr. E. S. King.

Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in 1930-31)

The first semester is devoted to an intensive study of the main problems of late thirteenth and early fourteenth century painting in Tuscany and Umbria. The pertinent frescoes of the church of S. Francesco at Assisi are given particular attention, with the emphasis placed on the origins and character of the Cimabue series. The Roman school at Assisi and elsewhere is investigated in some detail; likewise the Gothic painting of Tuscany generally.

The second semester continues the work of the first, with Giotto and Duccio forming the principal studies. While the plan of study aims to acquaint the student with the salient aspects of the greater artists, special problems, such as, for example, Barna Senese, may be undertaken according to the student's particular needs and interests.

Journal Club in the History of Art: Miss King, Mr. E. S. King and Miss Norton.

*Two hours once a fortnight throughout the year.Journal
Club

The instructors and the graduate students meet for the presentation and discussion of current literature on Mediæval Archæology and the History of Art and for discussion of current exhibitions.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Renaissance Sculpture: Miss King.

Credit: One unit.Advanced Courses(Given in 1930-31)

The first semester is devoted to the sculpture of the Italian Renaissance, the second partly to Northern art, and in especial to figure sculpture in France and Spain from the finishing of the Cathedrals to the close of the Renaissance. The great sculptors of Germany are studied carefully in between. The course is illustrated with photographs and lantern slides.

Spanish Primitives: Miss King.

Credit: One unit.(Given in 1931-32)

The work begins with a consideration of the Mozarabic and proto-Mudéjar manuscripts and is occupied with the Catalan and Valencian primitives, their sources and their special qualities, for the greater part of the year. Castilian, Leonese and early Sevillian painting are taken into account and the study stops arbitrarily at 1500.

Spanish Architecture: Miss King.

Credit: One unit.(Given in 1932-33)

This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year work in history of art, or an equivalent course. After the Visigothic, Reconquest and Mozarabic Churches have been considered, the greater part of the work is devoted to Romanesque and Gothic, with a short study of Mudéjar art in the middle of the year and one later of the special aspects of the Spanish Renaissance.

Mediæval Art: Mr. King.

Credit: One unit.(Not given in 1930-31)

This course is concerned primarily with the minor arts of the middle ages: manuscript illuminations, ivories, metal work and enamels, mosaics and mural paintings, stained glass, and also sculpture. The implications arising from the introductory treatment of these arts in the second year course in mediæval architecture are followed out. In point of time the course extends from the Early Christian period to the beginning of the Renaissance. The various constituents of the mediæval complex—antique, patristic, barbarian, the Eastern and the Western aspects—are studied in their developments, interactions and in their own right. The guiding principle followed is the evolution of style.

Renaissance and Baroque Architecture: Mr. King.

Credit: One unit.(Given in 1930-31)

This course covers the main aspects of Renaissance and Baroque architecture in Italy, France, Spain, Germany and England. The principles and development of design are made the integrating feature of the survey, whose object is to show the essential relations between the nature of the age and its architecture. Sculpture and painting are constantly referred to in the interests of interpretation. Drawings or reports are required.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSE

Free Elective Course

Art of the Far East: Mr. King.

Credit: One-half unit.

A general introduction to the history of art in Asia from the earliest times. The architecture, sculpture and painting of China, India and Japan constitute the main burden of the course. Special problems, such as the interrelations between the arts of the Oriental nations and the esthetic differences between the East and West are considered.

Students majoring in history of art are expected to elect this course before being admitted to advanced work.

GRADUATE COURSES

Two seminars are offered to graduate students of Latin accompanied by the direction of private reading and original research. The advanced undergraduate courses of the department may also be elected by graduate students.

Graduate Courses

The graduate courses in Latin are varied from year to year in such a way as to enable candidates for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy to pursue the work for three successive years. Students electing Latin as a major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy must offer not less than two seminars and the journal club for two years and if Latin be also elected as the associated minor the candidate must offer two seminars and the journal club for three years.

It is desirable that all students who intend to do advanced work in Latin should have a good knowledge of Greek. A reading knowledge of French and German is necessary.

Latin Seminary: Dr. Taylor.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

1930-31: Roman Religion and Latin Inscriptions.

Roman Religion is studied from the sources with special emphasis on the material provided by the Fasts of Ovid. The early Roman calendar, the coming in of Italic and Greek gods, the origin and development of the imperial cult, and the growth of the Oriental Religions are considered. In the second semester the work centres on inscriptions with special study of those dealing with religion and with Roman social life.

1931-32: The Poetry of the Augustan Age.

Special emphasis on the work of Horace and Vergil in its relation to the principate of Augustus. The subjects for investigation by each student may be selected from the whole field of Augustan poetry.

1932-33: Latin Literature from Livius Andronicus to Terence. The chief emphasis is placed upon Ennius and Plautus.

Latin Seminary: Dr. Ballou.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

1930-31: Latin Palaeography.

During the first semester the facsimiles in the collections of Chatelain, Zangemeister and Wattenbach, and Arndt will be used to furnish acquaintance with the more important Roman and Mediaeval Literary Hands, and photographic reproductions are used for practical exercises in collation and text emendation. During the second semester the poems of Catullus form the basis for the application of palaeographic principles to textual criticism.

Latin Seminary: Dr. Broughton.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

1931-32: Cicero's Correspondence.

An effort is made to master typical textual and linguistic problems presented by the text, and special attention is paid to Roman administration and political conditions during the last years of the Republic. The edition of Tyrrell and Purser, The Correspondence of M. Tullius Cicero, 7 vols., forms the basis of the work.

1932-33: Livy's History.

A study is made of the political and institutional development of Rome from the earliest times to the close of the Punic wars. The works of Livy are used as the basis of study with criticism of other sources.

Historical Grammar of Greek and Latin:* Dr. Broughton.

One hour a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1930-31)

This course may be elected by any students taking seminaries in Latin or Greek. A knowledge of Greek is essential.

Journal Club

Latin Journal Club: President Park, Dr. Taylor, Dr. Ballou, Miss Fairman and Miss Marti.

One and a half hours once a fortnight throughout the year.

The instructors and the advanced students meet to report on and discuss recent articles and books.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Advanced Courses

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges, graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses.

Except for the course in Latin Prose Style the work of the advanced Latin is arranged in semester courses. If elected separately the credit for each course is one-half unit.

Latin Prose Style: Dr. Taylor and Miss Fairman. Credit: One-half unit.

Weekly exercises in the writing of Latin prose combined with the reading of Cicero, Cæsar, and Livy, and the study of their style. In 1930-31 the Brutus of Cicero forms the chief basis of the study.

Livy: Dr. Broughton.

Literature of the Empire: Dr. Ballou.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1930-31)

Livy is given during the first semester. Selections significant for the style and artistry of the author are read. Problems of Roman history connected with these selections are treated in lectures, discussions and reports.

Literature of the Empire is given during the second semester. The reading is from authors of both prose and poetry who give as complete a picture as possible of the society of the empire, such as Seneca, Petronius, Martial, Statius, Pliny, Juvenal and Apuleius.

Students may elect these courses separately each with a credit of one-half unit.

Vergil, Aeneid: Dr. Taylor.

Roman Satire: Dr. Broughton.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

The Aeneid is given during the first semester. The poem is studied as a whole with a consideration of its language, its structure, and its place in the history of epic.

Roman Satire in its literary form and its historical development is studied during the second semester.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSE

The Roman Empire: Dr. Ballou.

Mathematics

PROFESSOR: DAVID VERNON WIDDER, Ph.D.
 ASSOCIATES: MARGUERITE LEHR, Ph.D.
 GUSTAV HEDLUND, Ph.D.
 NON-RESIDENT LECTURER: ANNA PELL-WHEELER, Ph.D.

GRADUATE COURSES

Six and a half hours a week of seminary work and graduate lectures are offered each year to graduate students of mathematics accompanied by the direction of private reading and original research. The subjects vary from year to year so that the seminaries may be pursued by candidates for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy for three or more successive years. The advanced undergraduate courses of the department amounting to eight hours a week may be elected by graduate students. Students who elect mathematics as a major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy are required to elect mathematics also as an associated minor.

Graduate Courses

Advanced Function Theory: Dr. Widder.

Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1930-31)

Theory of Integral Equations: Dr. Pell-Wheeler.

Two hours a week during the second semester.
(Given in 1930-31)

Plane Curves and Birational Transformations: Dr. Lehr.

Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1930-31)

Calculus of Variations: Dr. Hedlund.

Two hours a week during the first semester.
(Given in 1930-31)

Analysis Situs: Dr. Hedlund.

Two hours a week during the second semester.
(Given in 1930-31)

Theory of Functions of a Complex Variable: Dr. Widder.

Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1931-32)

Theory of Fourier Series: Dr. Pell-Wheeler.

Two hours a week during the first semester.
(Given in 1931-32)

Higher Algebra: Dr. Pell-Wheeler.

Two hours a week during the second semester.
(Given in 1931-32)

Geometry on a Curve: Dr. Lehr.

Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1931-32)

Linear Differential Equations: Dr. Hedlund.

Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1931-32)

Mathematical Physics: Dr. Widder.

Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1932-33)

Linear Equations in Infinitely Many Variables: Dr. Pell-Wheeler.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1932-33)

Differential Geometry: Dr. Lehr.

Two hours a week throughout the year

(Given in 1932-33)

Theory of Numbers: Dr. Hedlund.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1932-33)

Journal Club

Mathematical Journal Club: Dr. Widder, Dr. Lehr and Dr. Hedlund.

One hour a fortnight throughout the year.

The journal club holds fortnightly meetings at which reports on special topics or memoirs are presented by the instructors and the graduate students.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Advanced Courses

The advanced courses in mathematics are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to mathematical studies differs in different colleges, graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses. Regular written work is expected from all mathematical students, and a reading knowledge of French and German is presupposed.

The advanced courses given are selected from the following, with occasional modifications:

Advanced Calculus: Dr. Widder.

Credit: One unit.

Advanced Geometry: Dr. Lehr.

Credit: One unit.

Differential Equations and Mechanics: Dr. Hedlund.

Credit: One unit.

The first semester deals with Differential Equations and the second semester with Mechanics. The courses may be elected separately, each with a credit of one-half unit.

Theory of Functions of a Real Variable: Dr. Pell-Wheeler.

Credit: One unit.

(Not given in 1930-31)

This course is open only to students who have had four units of mathematics.

Music

PROFESSOR:

HORACE ALWYNE, F.R.M.C.M.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

The graduate courses and seminary may lead under certain fixed conditions to the degree of Master of Arts, but are not permitted to count as any part of the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

Students wishing to specialize in music who meet the preliminary requirements of the Academic Council for the degree of Master of Arts will be allowed to become candidates for the degree of Master of Arts of Bryn Mawr College in Music only if they have offered the equivalent of two seminaries in Music together with a seminary in Education or some other seminary, subject in each case to the approval of the Committee on Graduate Courses and of the Director of the Department of Music.

Preliminary requirements for admission to graduate courses in music:

1. A.B. degree from a college of recognized standing.

2. Certain standards of knowledge or facility in instrumental or vocal music will be required of all students. Students offering vocal music to answer the above requirements will be expected to have some facility in piano playing. Students who are deficient in the above requirements will be recommended by the Department of Music to certain qualified teachers outside the college.
3. Courses in the History of Music, Harmony and Counterpoint, in general equivalent to the undergraduate courses given in Bryn Mawr College, must have been taken, or must be taken without credit, as preliminary to graduate work.

Canon and Fugue: Mr. Alwyne.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the four undergraduate courses in Harmony and Counterpoint; or the student must satisfy the Instructor that she is qualified to enter.

This course deals with the application of counterpoint to composition in these established forms: it requires some originality on the part of the student and some facility in piano-forte playing.

Orchestration: Mr. Alwyne.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the four undergraduate courses in Harmony and Counterpoint; or the student must satisfy the Instructor that she is qualified to enter.

This course deals with the characteristics of each instrument in the orchestra—its tone-quality, range, technique, etc.—with the grouping of the instruments—strings, wood-wind, brass, percussion, etc.—and with the orchestra as a whole. Orchestral scores will be studied. Students will be required to apply the foregoing in scoring for orchestra and in original work.

Seminary in Music, Free Composition: Mr. Alwyne.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the four undergraduate courses in Harmony and Counterpoint; or the student must satisfy the Instructor that she is qualified to enter. This seminary deals with the application to Free Composition of the preceding courses in Harmony and Counterpoint.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

History and Appreciation of Music: Mr. Alwyne and Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

*Free
Elective
Courses*

This course consists of the study of the History of Music up to and including Beethoven, and of the masterpieces of music produced during that period. Characteristic examples of Early Church Music, in the form of Plain Chant, Organum, Discant, etc., and of Sixteenth Century vocal polyphony, Reformation Chorales and Bach choral works are illustrated by the College Choir in class. Compositions of the following composers are performed in class: Monteverdi, Corelli, Scarlatti, Rameau, Couperin, Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven. The forms included are folk-song, motet, madrigal, fantasia, toccata, early dance-forms, fugue, suite, rondo, variations, sonata and symphony. All study and analysis is based on the actual hearing of the music itself. The instruction is given by means of lectures, required reading, discussion, and by analysis by the students in class. At occasional meetings of the Faculty of the Departments of History, Classical Archaeology, History of Art, and English discuss social, artistic and literary movements which were of special importance in the history of the evolution of music.

Advanced History and Appreciation of Music: Mr. Alwyne and Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

The course in History and Appreciation of Music is required for admission.

The course consists of the study of the history of music from Schubert to the present day and of the musical masterpieces produced during that period. The instruction follows the same plan as in the preceding course.

Third Year History and Appreciation of Music: Mr. Alwyne and Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the two courses in History and Appreciation of Music.

This course consists of two special courses of one semester each in some particular period or aspect of Music. The subjects are Bach and Wagner, or Symphonic Music and Modern Music. These subjects are dealt with in a more detailed and amplified way than is possible in the two foregoing courses in History and Appreciation of Music. The instruction follows the same plan as in the preceding courses.

Elementary Harmony: Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: knowledge of intervals, scales and keys, ability to sing simple melodies at sight.

This course is the beginning of composition. It does not impose upon the student the mere copying of a model but gives her some intellectual and æsthetic liberty.

Melodic movement and harmonic progression are studied concurrently. The student learns to write simple melodies based on poetic meters and the addition of a second melody to one already given with ornamentation by means of passing notes, neighbouring notes, etc. When some facility in horizontal writing has been obtained melodies are harmonized in four parts using major and minor triads in root positions and their inversions.

The importance of the student being able to hear what she writes is stressed by means of progressive ear training and musical dictation.

Advanced Harmony: Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the course in Elementary Harmony; or the student must satisfy the instructor that she is qualified to enter.

This course is the continuation of the course in Elementary Harmony from the Chord of the Dominant Seventh and carries the student through modern harmonic relations. Original melodies are written and harmonized in both close and open score and the use of C clefs is studied when writing for strings. Modern compositions are analyzed. This course gives an opportunity for freedom of expression and calls for more original work on the part of the student.

Elementary Counterpoint: Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the two courses in Harmony; or the student must satisfy the examiner that she is qualified to enter.

This course deals with the various modes of counterpoint to which the courses in Harmony have led in so far as it has been possible to bring about "horizontal" writing in those courses. This course consists of Strict Counterpoint in two parts up to and including Fifth Species and three-part Strict Counterpoint up to and including Third Species.

Advanced Counterpoint: Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the three preceding courses in Harmony and Counterpoint; or the student must satisfy the instructor that she is qualified to enter.

This course is a continuation of Elementary Counterpoint and carries the student through to Strict and Combined Counterpoint in three and four parts, later dealing with the stated contrapuntal forms. The course requires some originality on the part of the student and some facility in pianoforte playing.

Philosophy

PROFESSORS:

THEODORE DE LAGUNA, Ph.D.

GRACE ANDRUS DE LAGUNA, Ph.D.

GRADUATE COURSES

Five hours a week of seminary work and graduate lectures are offered each year to graduate students of philosophy, accompanied by the direction of private reading and original research.

*Graduate
Courses*

A seminary in the history of philosophy is offered each year and a seminary in ethics and one in logic and metaphysics are offered in alternate years. The subjects of study are changed from year to year through a cycle of four years. Ten hours a week of undergraduate courses are also open to graduate students. Students electing philosophy as their major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy may emphasize either metaphysics or ethics.

Seminary in Ethics: Dr. Theodore de Laguna.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in alternate years)

1931-32: The History of Ethics in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries.

A brief preliminary survey is made of the Greek systems which have most strongly influenced modern theory.

1933-34: English Evolutionary Ethics, as exemplified in the writings of Darwin, Spencer, Clifford, Stephen, Alexander, and Hobhouse, and as criticized by Green, Sorley, Huxley, Pringle-Pattison, and Rashdall.

Special attention is given to the problem of determining the nature and limitations of the genetic method as applied in ethical research.

Seminary in Logic and Metaphysics: Dr. Grace de Laguna.

Two hours a week throughout the year

(Given in alternate years)

1930-31: English Empiricism.

Special attention is paid to its connection with Associationism and to the development of the theory of scientific method.

1932-33: Contemporary Realism.

The first semester is devoted to Neo-Realism, the second semester to Critical Realism.

Seminary in the History of Philosophy: Dr. Theodore de Laguna and Dr. Grace de Laguna.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1930-31: The Philosophy of Plato. Special attention is paid to the earlier dialogues, to the development of the theory of ideas, and to the relation of this theory to the teachings and method of Socrates.

1931-32: Pre-Kantian Rationalism.

In the first semester the work is principally based upon Descartes, and in the second semester on Spinoza and Leibniz.

This seminary is conducted by Dr. G. de Laguna.

Philosophical Journal Club: Dr. Theodore de Laguna, Dr. Grace de Laguna.

Two hours once a fortnight throughout the year.

*Journal
Club*

The advanced students and the instructors meet to report on and discuss recent reviews and philosophical articles.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

*Credit: One and one-half unitsAdvanced Courses

The advanced courses in philosophy are open only to students who have taken the second year courses in Elementary Ethics and Philosophical Problems. They may be taken as free electives.

From Kant to Spencer: Dr. Grace de Laguna.

Recent Philosophical Tendencies: Dr. Theodore de Laguna.

From Kant to Spencer is given during the first semester.

Credit: One unit.

This course is principally devoted to the study of the post-Kantian idealism. The naturalistic systems of Comte, John Stuart Mill, and Spencer are more briefly considered.

Recent Philosophical Tendencies is given during the second semester. An introduction to contemporary controversy is given by way of a study of a few of the more important recent movements of thought.

Social Philosophy: Dr. Theodore de Laguna.

Elementary Aesthetics: Dr. Grace de Laguna.

Credit: One-half unit.

Social Philosophy is given during the first semester. This course is a study of the philosophical ideas that have been connected with the rise of modern democracy and nationalism. The more important theories of the nature of the state, and of the relation of the state to other forms of social union, are discussed; also certain special moral questions related to the theory of punishment.

Elementary Aesthetics is given during the second semester. The subject is approached primarily from the anthropological side. The origins of art and its relations to other forms of culture, especially magic, religion, industry, and war, are studied, as well as the development and diffusion of aesthetic standards. Briefer consideration is given to the psychological phenomena involved in aesthetic appreciation.

PhysicsPROFESSORS:

WILLIAM B. HUFF, Ph.D.

JAMES BARNES, Ph.D.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

The graduate seminars consist of lectures, laboratory work, and original research under the direction of the instructors, the subjects varying from year to year so that the seminars may be pursued by students through consecutive years. A good working library containing the current and bound numbers of all the important physical journals is kept in the laboratory. Students electing physics as their major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy may elect it also as the associated minor, provided either mathematics or applied mathematics is taken as the independent minor; or mathematics or applied mathematics may be taken as the associated minor.

Seminary in Physics: Dr. Huff.

Three hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in alternate years)

1930-31: Radio-activity and Discharge of Electricity Through Gases. 1st semester.

The earlier lectures treat of the effects of fields on the path of a moving charged particle. A discussion of typical experimental methods of measuring velocity and the ratio of charge to the mass follows. After a study of the phenomena of electrical discharge and of radio-activity a brief account of theories is given.

Electron Theory.

2nd semester.

In the Electron Theory the mathematical development of the subject is first dealt with and this is followed by experimental tests of theory.

Seminary in Physics: Dr. Barnes.

Three hours a week throughout the year.(Given in alternate years)

1931-32: A General Mathematical Discussion of Physical Optics.

Students are expected to give detailed reports on the methods and results of investigations which illustrate the theory. When it seems desirable two and a half hours of experimental work will be substituted for one hour of the seminary.

1933-34: Radiation.

The modern developments of radiation from cosmic to infra-red are considered.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses. A knowledge of differential and integral calculus is required. These lectures deal not only with the theoretical development of the subject, but great stress is laid on the important experimental work which has been done in it, and methods and results are criticised and opportunities for further investigations pointed out. The object of the courses is to prepare students to undertake independent work. The laboratory work is planned with this object in view and is arranged to meet the special needs of each individual student. Graduate students may be permitted to take the lectures without the laboratory work. In addition to the laboratory work which accompanies the lectures a student may take extra laboratory work.

Advanced Courses

Electricity and Magnetism: Dr. Huff.

Credit: One unit.(Given in 1931-32)

The lectures of this course treat typical mathematical and experimental problems chosen from the various parts of the entire subject. A large number of problems on potential and attraction are assigned.

By special arrangement this course may count for more than one unit.

Properties of Matter;

Theory of Sound: Dr. Huff.

Credit: One unit.(Given in 1933-34)

Properties of Matter is given during the first semester. The lectures cover the general subject of the properties of matter studied from the point of view of the Molecular Theory. The different theories of matter are discussed and an account of recent investigations concerning the relations of matter and electricity is given. Poynting and Thomson's Properties of Matter is read in connection with the course.

Theory of Sound is given during the second semester. The lectures form an introduction to the theory of modes of vibration of pipes, strings, and rods. The theory of music and musical instruments is then studied. Poynting and Thomson's Sound is used during the earlier part of the course, and frequent references are made to Helmholtz and Rayleigh.

The semester courses may be elected separately and by special arrangement they may count for more than one unit.

Spectroscopy;

Astrophysics: Dr. Barnes.

Credit: One unit.(Given in 1930-31)

Spectroscopy is given during the first semester. The course begins with a complete discussion of the apparatus used in this subject; the results of past and present investigations are then considered, and problems for investigation are pointed out. The many important applications of spectroscopy to astronomy and atomic structure are not neglected. The standard books of reference are Kayser's Handbuch der Spectroscopie and Sommerfeld's Atom Structure and Spectral Lines. Detailed reports of laboratory investigations are required.

Astrophysics is given during the second semester. This course consists of lectures on the application of physical principles and methods to the study of the composition, structure, and motions of the heavenly bodies. Selected chapters in Moulton's Celestial Mechanics and many papers from the Astrophysical Journal are read and discussed.

General Optics: Dr. Barnes.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1932-33)

These lectures give a general discussion of the theories advanced to explain many phenomena in light. Students are required to have a good knowledge of elementary optics and to be sufficiently familiar with optical apparatus to undertake a detailed study of some special problem. The books on optics by Drude, Wood and Schuster are used for reference.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Free Elective Courses

Physical Basis of Music: Dr. Huff.

In the lectures of this course it is planned to present some of the physical principles illustrated in the construction of musical instruments and underlying the general theory of music. Private reading is assigned. This course was given in 1929-30.

Descriptive Astronomy: Dr. Huff.

This course is elementary. Students use a text-book and star-maps and do some a general reading on assigned topics. Lecture-experiments and lantern-slides are used. The course is open to juniors and seniors only, but not to auditors or hearers. This course was given in 1928-29.

Psychology

PROFESSORS:

JAMES H. LEUBA, Ph.D.

AGNES LOW ROGERS, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR:

HARRY HELSON, Ph.D.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

Ten hours a week seminary work and graduate lectures are offered each year to graduate students of psychology, accompanied by the direction of private reading and original research and the courses are varied from year to year so that they may be pursued by students through three or more successive years. The books needed by the graduate students are collected in the seminary library of the department. No undergraduates are admitted to graduate courses or to the seminary library, but the second and third year courses of the department amounting to ten hours a week may be elected by graduate students. The laboratory of experimental psychology is open to graduate students for research work. Students may offer either Social Psychology or Experimental Psychology as a major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

Psychological Seminary: Dr. Leuba.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1930-31)

As the foundation of the work of the seminary one or two of the following subjects is chosen each year: the psychology of mental and moral deficiencies with reference to the social problems they present, including case studies and research work in problems of delinquency; social psychology; chapters in abnormal psychology and the Freudian psychology; the fundamental principles of psychology; the psychology of religion and ethics.

Seminary in Social Psychology: Dr. Leuba.Two hours a week during the second semester.(Given in 1930-31)

Abnormal Psychology, chiefly Mental and Moral Deficiencies, and their Social Implications; or Personality and Character.

This half-seminary together with another half-seminary given in the first semester, may be counted as a seminary by students in the Department of Social Economy and Social Research.

Seminary in Experimental and Systematic Psychology: Dr. Helson.Three hours a week throughout the year(Given in 1931-32)

This seminary is intended, primarily, to give a systematic presentation of the literature of experimental psychology. Due consideration, however, is given to all points of systematic importance. The work is grouped about the following topics: sensation, the simpler sense complexes, perception and ideas, feeling and the affective processes, attention, action, and the intellectual processes (memory, association, imagination, etc.).

Seminary in Research Problems: Dr. Helson.Two or more hours a week throughout the year.(Given in each year)

This course is intended for students who wish to be trained in research work. Methods of measurement, particularly modern psychophysics, practise in observation, and acquaintance with standard types of apparatus are stressed. The instructor co-operates with the students in the solution of some original problems.

Seminary in the History of Psychology: Dr. Helson.*Two hours or more a week throughout the year.(Given in 1930-31)Journal
Club

The work of this seminary consists of three parts: (1) lectures by the instructor in which the history of psychology is treated through the consideration of fundamental problems; (2) readings and reports by students involving the use of sources; (3) a semester paper upon some selected topic in which the student's ability to organize and criticize material is tested.

Psychological Journal Club: Dr. Leuba and Dr. Helson.Two hours alternate weeks throughout the year.

The advanced students meet with the instructors to hear or read reports on the literature of the subject and on the work done in the laboratory.

For graduate work in Educational Psychology see the Department of Education (pages 54 and 55).

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES*Credit: One and one-half units1st Semester:*

Social Psychology: The Psychology of Group Life and of Some Social Institutions: Dr. Leuba.

Advanced
Courses

This course is open to students who have taken the course in Psychology of Action. Experimental Psychology is not a prerequisite. If taken in combination with Psychology of Action the credit is one and one-half units.

*2nd Semester:Mental Tests and Measurements;*Laboratory Work: Dr. Rogers.

This course provides a foundation for the theory and practice of mental tests and the measurement of school achievements. It prepares the student for more specialized work in the application of tests to education, vocational guidance, business, etc. The laboratory work includes practice in giving tests of general intelligence, of special abilities (mechanical, intellectual, artistic, etc.), and of achievements.

This course is open to students who have taken the second year course in Experimental Psychology. If taken in combination with the course in Experimental Psychology the credit is one and one-half units.

These semesters may be elected separately each with a credit of one-half unit.

Social Economy and Social Research

The Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department of Social Economy and Social Research

PROFESSORS:	SUSAN MYRA KINGSBURY, Ph.D. *HORNE LL HART, Ph.D.
ASSOCIATE:	MILDRED FAIRCHILD, Ph.D.
LECTURERS:	ALMENA DAWLEY, M.A. MARY PHLEGER SMITH, Ph.D.
SPECIAL LECTURERS:	EVA WHITING WHITE, A.B. ALICE HAMILTON, M.D.

The Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department of Social Economy and Social Research was opened in the Autumn of 1915 in order to afford women an opportunity to obtain an advanced scientific education in Social Economy which, it is hoped, will compare favorably with the best preparation in any profession. It is known as the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department in order that the name of Carola Woerishoffer, who devoted her life to social service and industrial relations, may be associated in a fitting and lasting way with Bryn Mawr College which she so generously endowed.

The departments of Economics and Politics, Psychology, Education, and Philosophy offer seminaries strongly recommended to students of Social Economy. These seminaries are given by Dr. Marion Parris Smith, Professor of Economics; Dr. Charles Ghequiere Fenwick, Professor of Political Science; Dr. Roger Hewes Wells, Associate Professor of Economics and Politics; Dr. Theodore de Leo de Laguna, Professor of Philosophy; Dr. James H. Leuba, Professor of Psychology; Dr. Harry Helson, Associate Professor of Experimental Psychology; Dr. Agnes Low Rogers, Professor of Education and Psychology; Dr. Ilse Forest, Associate Professor of Education, and Mr. Samuel Arthur King, Non-resident Lecturer in English Diction.

* Granted leave of absence for the year 1930-31. The seminaries announced by Dr. Hart will be conducted by Dr. Mary P. Smith.

The graduate courses in Social Economy and Social Research are intended for graduate students who present a diploma from some college of acknowledged standing and no undergraduate students are admitted.

Students of this department must offer for admission to their graduate work a preliminary course in economics, in psychology and in sociology* and in addition more advanced courses equivalent to the Bryn Mawr College major course in one of the following subjects: economics and politics, sociology, history, psychology or philosophy (that is altogether five hours' work per week for two years in one of these subjects).

The courses are planned on the principle that about two-thirds of the student's time shall be given to the study of theory and the remaining one-third to a seminary including field and laboratory work.

In the first year the student will probably pursue a seminary in the theory and technique applied to her chosen field, as for example: Social Case Work, or Community Organization, or Industrial Relations in which she will give seven hours a week during the term time and vacation practica to practice or field work in an institution or with a social agency or in a business firm chosen in relation to her selected field; she will take the seminary in theory most closely related to her special interests; unless already qualified she will take the course in statistics, and she will elect a third seminary. In addition all students attend the Journal Club. Each seminary requires about 14 hours of work each week, including hours of discussion, preparation and conference. Full graduate work involves about 43 hours of work per week.

Practice work in each field consists of two types: (1) field work consisting of seven hours each week, one hour of conference each week, and two hours of seminary discussion in alternate weeks; (2) non-resident experience with social institutions, agencies, or business firms obtained during one month in December and January and during two months in the summer following the eight months of work in Bryn Mawr College.

The department will endeavor to arrange that the students shall be at a minimum expense for room and board during the midwinter practicum, other than that paid to the college from December 9th to 20th, and during the two months of the summer practicum.

The year's programme of the students will therefore run as follows: (1) Work at Bryn Mawr College, September 30th to December 8th, during which period at least one day a week is given to field work. (2) A midwinter practicum in which the student gives full service to a social organization or a business establishment or to research, from December 8th to January 2nd in New York, Boston, Philadelphia or elsewhere. (3) January 3rd to January 30th, during which period the student will give her entire time to classes and study at Bryn Mawr College. (4) February 3rd to June 3rd, during which time the student will give one day a week to field practice work, with the exception of the spring vacations. (5) The summer practicum from June 8th to August 1st, during which time the student will give all of her time to practical work with a social organization or a mercantile or manufacturing establishment. The field work during the time of residence at the College, and during the mid-winter and summer practica is under the careful supervision of an instructor of the Department. After one year of work in this department one-half year may be given to a practicum in residence in a social service institution, in connection with a social welfare or community organization, in a federal or state department of labour and industry, in a federal or state employment office, or in a manufacturing or mechanical establishment in Philadelphia, New York, New England, or elsewhere, during which time the practical work and special reading and research will be supervised by the instructor in charge of the practicum and by the head of the institution, department, or business firm.

*Certificates
and Degrees*

Students entering the Department are expected to pursue the work throughout one year. Unless the student has had graduate courses providing a foundation for professional social work, or acceptable experience in social work, at least two years are necessary for satisfactory preparation. A certificate will be given upon the completion of one or two years' study. The candidate for a certificate must offer a seminary which includes practice or laboratory work, or a seminary in social and industrial research.

Graduates of Bryn Mawr College, and graduates of other colleges who shall have satisfied the Academic Council that the course of study for which they have received a degree is equivalent to that for which the degree of Bachelor of Arts is given by Bryn Mawr College, or who shall have attended such additional courses of lectures as may be prescribed, may apply to the Academic Council to be enrolled as candidates for the degree of Master of Arts or of Doctor of Philosophy;* admission to the graduate school does not in itself qualify a student to become a candidate for these degrees.

GRADUATE COURSES

*Graduate
Courses*

The seminaries and courses described below may be elected subject to the approval of the Director of the Department by students working for the first and second year certificates as well as by candidates for the degree of Master of Arts or of Doctor of Philosophy in Social Economy and Social Research, or may be offered as the associated or independent minor with the approval of the Director of the Department when the major is taken in certain other departments according to the regulations of the Academic Council.

Seminary in Social and Industrial Research: Dr. Kingsbury.

Three hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Research in Social Economy involves two distinct types of studies. First, that which uses manuscripts or printed documents as sources of information, and second, that which secures data concerning human relations and social conditions from individuals, groups, organizations, or institutions. Both phases of social research necessitate an ability to discover cause and effect, to see the relations and interpret the interaction of social forces, to recognize and evaluate the factors conditioning or controlling social situations, and to establish facts concerning social phenomena.

Consequently, training in the acquisition, arrangement, analysis, and interpretation of data is essential for students undertaking either phase of social research. As other seminars in the Department and allied departments deal primarily with the first type of studies, this seminary is devoted exclusively to the second type. A subject is selected and arrangements made which will require students to secure social data by work in the field. The material is then organized, analyzed, and interpreted by the members of the seminary. In this way, training is given in filling out schedules, classifying data, drawing up tables, analyzing results, and interpreting material as a whole. The group of students may cooperate to produce a study which it is hoped will prove a contribution to our knowledge of social or industrial conditions. Students not taking a seminary in which field practice is required will be expected to carry on a mid-winter practicum in this seminary (see pages 83 and 84). Previous graduate study or acceptable experience in social or in industrial work is required for admission to this seminary.

Seminary in Statistics: Dr. Kingsbury. Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1930-31)

The work of the seminary is divided into three sections and considers: first, the principles of statistical measurement—frequency distributions, averages, index numbers, measures of association, correlation and partial correlation, theories of probability and probable error; second, standard and model forms of schedules and the methods of tabulation and analysis of data, together with criticisms of the methods employed in some of the best social investigations which have been carried on; third, a study of the application of statistics to the analysis of social problems, including a review of the outstanding contributions in the subject, and a criticism of selected statistical reports. Important correlations already established between socially significant variables will be reviewed, and their application in connection with further research indicated.

Seminary in Administration of Social Agencies: Dr. Kingsbury.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1931-32)

This course studies the sources of financial support of social agencies, the education of the community, cooperation in larger social programmes, the relationships between public and private agencies, the organization and supervision of a staff and the development and installation of methods to secure high standards of work. Opportunities for field work and research are arranged according to the needs of the student. This seminary is open to advanced students with the approval of the instructor.

Seminary in Social Relationships: Dr. Hart.*

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Principles of social relationships are worked out inductively through the study of actual group life. Applications of these principles are developed through analysis of relationships within the family, relationships between delinquents and society, and between races and peoples. Collections of case studies in these fields are analyzed and projects involving original research in this and allied fields are undertaken.

Seminary in Social Change: Dr. Hart.* Two hours a week throughout the year

(Given in each year)

Problems related to the nature of social progress and the methods whereby it can be achieved are studied by members of the seminary. The course begins with a review of prehistoric cultural evolution and of modern primitive cultures, including visits to ethnological and archaeological exhibits in Philadelphia, New York, or Washington. The natural laws of invention and of diffusion of culture are studied inductively by analyzing the history of various culture elements in primitive and civilized societies. The applicability of these laws to the origin and spread of social movements and agencies is worked out in specific instances. Various prognoses as to the future of our civilization are reviewed in relation to the foregoing material, and principles essential to sound social reform are developed.

Seminary in Research in Sociology: Dr. Hart.*

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Seminary in Community Organization and Administration: Dr. Hart.*

Three hours a week throughout the year.

Laboratory and Field Work.

Seven hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

The technique of integration of purpose as applied to social work with groups, through such agencies as settlements, playgrounds, social centers, Y. W. C. A.'s, councils of social agencies, community chests, civic organizations, legislative commissions, and research and propaganda agencies, forms the subject-matter of the course. In connection with the discussion of these topics by the instructor, a series of representative community organization workers are invited to meet with the class to answer questions from their experience in the problems which have arisen in the course of the students' work. Special attention is given to the practical problems involved in introducing new social movements into communities, in organizing and conducting clubs and classes, in work with committees and boards, in publicity work, and in financial and legislative campaigns.

The Practicum in Community Organization and Administration combines practical work in social and community education with reports and discussions. In addition to reports and conferences, seven hours a week are devoted to active work in a social center or settlement by which the student gains vital illustration of the principles and organization of community work.

The practicum is under the direction of Dr. Kingsbury and the director of the particular agency or department and is so arranged as to give to the student training during the academic year and the midwinter and summer practica (see pages 83 and 84) in some one or more of the following activities:

(1) Direction and teaching of clubs and classes as observers, visitors, helpers and assistants.

(2) Regular daily management as assistants and later as directors.

(3) General administrative assistance in office work, including record-keeping, in library work, in activities to secure publicity, in preparation of newspaper articles, reports, posters, exhibits, parades, dramatics, plays, festivals, demonstrations, concerts, and lectures, in public speaking and writing, and in conducting financial campaigns and special studies.

(4) Teaching in night schools of classes in civics and elementary subjects, and conducting games, dramatics, gymnastics, playgrounds and kindergarten activities.

(5) Co-operation with civic movements, community campaigns and emergency activities, school programmes and publicity.

The fields from which the subject for the practicum may be chosen are community, civic and social centers, settlements, playgrounds, and health and recreation centers, and have included the Bryn Mawr Community Center, The Philadelphia College Settlement, The Young Women's Christian Association, and work in smaller neighboring communities.

Seminary in Labour Organization: Dr. Fairchild.

Two hours a week throughout the year

(Given in each year)

Some of the forces found in modern industry, the inequality of distribution, and the gradual development of democratic ideas that lead to labour organization are reviewed

* Granted leave of absence for the year 1930-31. The seminars announced by Dr. Hart will be conducted by Dr. Mary P. Smith.

as an introduction to trade union history and the development of labour organization in America is compared with that in Europe and especially in England. The methods used by labour are studied in detail—the strike, boycott, sabotage, picketing and various aspects of labour warfare—as well as the attempts of the employer to suppress unionism. The bearing of the law and the courts on the labour struggle and the use of the injunction are considered critically. The significance of social legislation, welfare work, and the intervention of the state are discussed with a view to understanding the probable future of labour organization. The changing philosophy of labour as it is embodied in experiments in various countries, England, France and Russia, is given particular attention. As a part of the seminary, students attend trade union meetings and conferences, visit factories, and various state and private organizations which are concerned with employment, vocational guidance, and legislative reform.

Seminary in Industrial Relations: Dr. Fairchild.

Three hours a week throughout the year.

Laboratory and Field Work.

Seven hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

The aim of this seminary is to secure an understanding of actual conditions, methods and relations in industry in the United States. A brief introduction to the evolution of the modern industrial system is followed by an analysis of large scale productive units and monopolistic control of industry. A study is then made of production problems in certain basic industries with particular stress on planning systems and process analysis. The procedure of the personnel office, hiring of labour, rating, training, promotion, discharge and methods of wage payments are considered in detail. On the basis of critical comparisons of methods, fundamental principles are brought to light. A comparison of retail trade with factory production brings out significant phases of industrial relations. Special lectures on psychology in industry, labour exchanges, government agencies, scientific management, industrial poisons, and other topics are included in the course. Actual cases are studied and observation trips give the student first hand information regarding present day conditions and methods.

The field work in the factories and stores, which is a part of the work of this seminary, is accompanied in alternate weeks by a two-hour discussion period on the practical problems which the student must meet.

This seminary must be accompanied by the Seminary in Labour Organization.

Seminary in Research in Labour Organization or Industrial Relations:
Dr. Fairchild.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Each student pursues a separate research problem of her own choice, conferring with the instructor individually as her work progresses, and reporting periodically to joint meetings of the students in the seminary. The course is open to advanced students with the consent of the instructor.

Seminary in Social Case Work: Miss Dawley.

Three hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Laboratory and Field Work.

Seven hours a week throughout the year.

The object of this course is to understand the basis of each human being's failure in self-maintenance, to interpret his reactions and behavior in terms of his life experiences and relationships, and to utilize this evaluation in the carrying out of treatment. Emphasis is placed on the various processes of case work, the evaluation of case material, case recording, the community resources essential for treatment and the case worker's relationship to these resources.

The Practicum in Social Case Work during the past year has consisted of field work carried on 10 hours per week and a mid-winter and a summer practicum (see pages 83 and 84) with the following agencies: The Family Society of Philadelphia, the Children's Aid Society and the White-Williams Foundation. The field work with these agencies is under the supervision of Miss Dawley and the supervisor of the particular agency or department.

The following courses in the University of Pennsylvania are open to graduate students by special arrangement:

Criminal Law.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

By special arrangement with the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania students in this department may pursue the course in Criminal Law offered by Dean Mikell at the Law School, Thirty-fourth and Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia.

This course may accompany the seminary in Social Case Work.

Criminal Procedure.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

By special arrangement with the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania students in this department may pursue the course in Criminal Procedure offered by Dean Mikell, at the Law School, Thirty-fourth and Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia.

This course must be preceded by the course in Criminal Law.

Social Statistics: Dr. Kingsbury.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

The subjects considered are those required for an understanding of statistical studies in social economy, for use in conducting inquiries into social and economic conditions, and for analysis of data secured from Federal or State reports and from records of social and industrial organizations and institutions. Included in the course are the following topics: schedule making, accumulation of data, making of tables, the use of computing and filing devices, the array, frequency distributions, averages, index numbers, measures of association and variation, the theory of probability and of error and linear correlation.

No knowledge of mathematics beyond the usual college entrance requirements is presupposed. This course is required of all graduate students in the department who have not had a satisfactory introductory course.

General Course in Articulation and Voice Production: Mr. King.

One-half hour a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

The object of this course is to train speakers in accurate and distinct articulation and to eliminate the faults of bad production. Speech is resolved into its phonetic elements which are made the basis of practical exercises so arranged as to be progressive in their difficulties.

Journal
Club

Social Economy Journal Club: Dr. Kingsbury, Dr. Hart* and Dr. Fairchild.

Two hours once a fortnight throughout the year.

Current articles are reviewed, recent reports, surveys and investigations are criticised, and the results of important research are presented for discussion.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Free
Elective
Courses

Elements of Statistics: Dr. Kingsbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

This course deals with the elementary principles of statistics. Among the topics are the array, frequency distributions, graphic methods, averages, measures of variation, theory of sampling, index numbers, theory of probability, and linear correlation. It also attempts briefly to acquaint the student with the principles and methods of record keeping and filing which are applicable to municipal, state, and federal offices, to business organizations and to social organizations.

The course is recommended to students of social economy, of economics and of education. No knowledge of mathematics beyond the requirements for matriculation is presupposed.

* Granted leave of absence for the year 1930-31. The seminars announced by Dr. Hart will be given by Dr. Mary P. Smith.

Applied Sociology: Dr. Hart.Credit: One-half unit.(Given in each year)*

Relationships between personalities, the causes of social conflicts, and the methods, whereby maximum stimulation, release, facilitation and integration of the purposes and possibilities of all members of society may be attained, constitute the problems of the course. Specific applications to social relations in the family, in industry, between races, and the like, are worked out. By means of laboratory experiments and objective observation of social phenomena, outstanding sociological theories are tested by attempting to apply them to concrete data. A course in some social science is prerequisite for this course.

Social Anthropology: Dr. Hart.Credit: One unit.(Given in each year)*

An anthropological approach to the problems of human progress. An objective definition of progress is developed. Data relating to prehistoric, primitive, ancient and modern cultural and racial development, bearing on the amount and the direction of change in human intelligence, technology, and social relations, are examined. The desirability of various possible future directions of social change is explored. Methods of innovation in mechanical invention, medicine, science, social work, and other fields, are studied in terms of instances, with a view to developing the fundamental principles of the technique and dynamics of social progress. A course in some social science is prerequisite for this course.

Labour Problems: Dr. Fairchild.Credit: One unit.(Given in each year)

The present day problems of labour considered with special reference to the history of the labour movement form the subject matter of this course. A study of critical episodes in labour's struggle for organization is made in order to forecast tendencies in trade unionism and to appraise efforts for industrial peace. Some of the topics considered are the strike, the lockout, working conditions, industrial accidents, scientific management and labour, compensation, social insurance, welfare work, and the radical experiments of labour. The significance of workers' education and of the various labour colleges and schools is stressed with special reference to the Bryn Mawr Summer School for Women Workers in Industry.

The following seminars offered in other departments are recommended to graduate students of Social Economy and Social Research:

PROFESSOR: JOSEPH E. GILLET, Ph.D.

INSTRUCTOR: MARY S. SWEENEY, M.A.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

Two to four hours a week of seminary work or graduate courses are offered each year to graduate students of Spanish accompanied by the direction of private reading and original research.

The graduate seminars in Spanish are varied from year to year in order that they may be pursued by a student for consecutive years. Students electing Spanish as a major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy are required to offer French philology as an associated minor.

Seminary in Spanish: Dr. Gillet.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

1930-31: Cervantes, the Novelas exemplares and the Entremeses.

1931-32: Literary Criticism in Spain.

Dr. Gillet offers in each year, if his time permits, the following graduate courses:

Spanish Philology.

One hour a week throughout the year.

Old Spanish Readings.

One hour a week throughout the year.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Advanced Courses

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. Graduate students will usually find it advisable to elect these courses.

Lectures on Spanish Literature of the Sixteenth Century and the Golden Age.

Credit: One unit.

The course includes collateral reading and reports.

Advanced and Free Spanish Composition: Dr. Gillet.

Credit: One-half unit.

Fellowships and Graduate Scholarships

Application for resident fellowships or scholarships should be made as early as possible to the Dean of the Graduate School, and must be made not later than the fifteenth of February preceding the academic year for which the fellowship or scholarship is desired. Blank forms of application will be forwarded to the applicants. A definite answer will be given within a few weeks from the latest date set for receiving applications. Any original papers, printed or in manuscript, which have been prepared by the applicant and sent in support of her application, will be returned when stamps for that purpose are enclosed or specific directions for return by express are given. Letters or testimonials from professors and instructors will be filed for reference.

German university and is offered annually to a graduate student who has completed at least one year of graduate study at Bryn Mawr College but is not necessarily still in residence when making application for the fellowship. The fellowship will be awarded to the candidate who shows such proficiency in her studies or in independent work as to furnish reason to believe that she will be able to conduct independent investigations in the field of Teutonic Philology or German. The choice of a university may be determined by the holder's own preference subject to the approval of the Faculty.

*Fanny
Bullock
Workman Fellowship*

The Fanny Bullock Workman Fellowship of the value of $1,500, to be held during a year of study or research abroad, is offered annually to a graduate student studying at Bryn Mawr College. The holder of the fellowship must be a student of proved ability who is working for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy and who could not have the advantages of such a year without assistance. At the discretion of the Faculty the fellowship for any one year may be divided between two students or the same student may hold the fellowship for more than one year.

Resident or Traveling Fellowship

*Helene and Foundation

Fellowship*

The Helene and Cecil Rubel Foundation Fellowship of the value of $1,500 was founded in 1920 by Miss Helene Rubel of New York City, to be awarded in each year by the Faculty of Bryn Mawr College with the approval of the donor. The fellowship may be awarded to any woman who has at any time studied in the graduate school of Bryn Mawr College long enough to have shown her ability irrespective of whether her work is planned to lead to a degree or not, and may be used by the holder, with the approval of the Faculty, in whatever way may best advance the purpose she has in mind. The fellowship may be held at any centre of education that may be selected by the student and approved by the Faculty as best suited to her individual needs, or may, in special cases, be used as a traveling fellowship to give opportunity for the study of conditions in which the student may be interested in different parts of the world. The fellowship shall be awarded to the best student but if she can afford to carry out her plans with her own income she shall return the amount of the fellowship to the college to be used by another student in the same year.

Resident Fellowships

*Helen
Schaeffer
Huff
Memorial
Research Fellowship*

The Helen Schaeffer Huff Memorial Research Fellowship founded in 1913 of the value of $1,200, is offered annually to a student desiring to carry on research in either Physics or Chemistry, to be held during one year's work at Bryn Mawr College.

Applicants for this fellowship must be students who have done advanced graduate work at some college or university of recognized standing and have shown capacity for research. The award of the fellowship will depend primarily upon the applicant's record as a research student. Where equally good candidates are considered, preference will be given to a student working on problems which may be considered to lie along the borderline between Chemistry and Physics. The fellowship may under exceptional circumstances be awarded in consecutive years to the same student or the fellowship may be given to a graduate student studying at Bryn Mawr College to be held during one year's work at some other American college or university if in the opinion of the Committee it is imperative for that student to go elsewhere in order to complete an important piece of investigation.

Twenty-three resident fellowships, of the value of $810 each are offered annually in Greek, Latin, English, Romance Languages (two fellowships), German, Biblical Literature, History, Philosophy, Psychology, Education, Archaeology, History of Art, Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry, Geology, and Biology, the Justus C. Strawbridge Fellowship in Economics and Politics, two Carola Woerishoffer Memorial Fellowship in Social Economy and Social Research, and two Grace H. Dodge Memorial Fellowships in Industrial Relations and Personnel Administration. They are open for competition to graduates of any college of good standing and will be awarded only to candidates who have completed at least one year of graduate work after obtaining their first degree.*

*Department
Fellowships*

Fellows who continue their studies at the college after the expiration of the fellowship, may, by a vote of the Directors, receive the rank of Fellows by courtesy.

DUTIES OF RESIDENT FELLOWS

Fellows are expected to attend all college functions, to wear academic dress, to assist in the conduct of examinations, and to give about an hour a week to the care of special libraries in the seminaries; they are not permitted while holding the fellowship to teach, or to undertake any other duties in addition to their college work. They are expected to uphold the college standards of scholarship and conduct and to conform to the Self-Government regulations. They are required to reside in the Graduate Hall and are assigned rooms by the Secretary and Registrar of the College. They are charged the usual fee of seven hundred and sixty dollars for tuition, board, room rent, infirmary fee and athletic fee.

*Duties of Resident
Fellows*

The holder of a fellowship is expected to devote at least one-half her time to the department in which the fellowship is awarded and to show by the presentation of a thesis or in some other manner that her studies have not been without result.

Resident Graduate Scholarships

Twenty Graduate Scholarships, of the value of $350 each, may be awarded to candidates next in merit to the successful candidates for the fellowships; they are also open for competition to graduates of any college of good standing. Scholars may undertake while holding a scholarship only a very limited amount of teaching or other paid work approved in advance by the Dean of the Graduate School.

*Resident
Scholarships*

* Any student who has received the M.A. degree from a college or university of recognized standing shall be eligible for a resident fellowship

Robert G.
Valentine
Memorial
Scholarship

The Robert G. Valentine Memorial Scholarship in Social Economy of the value of $350 is offered annually by Mrs. Frank W. Hallowell of Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts, to be awarded by the President and Faculty of Bryn Mawr College on the recommendation of the Director of the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department of Social Economy and Social Research to a candidate approved by the donor. It is open to graduates of any college of good standing.

Grace H.
Dodge
Scholarships

Two Grace H. Dodge Scholarships in Social Economy for work in Industrial Relations of the value of $350 each, are offered annually and are open for competition to graduates of any college of good standing.

Opportunity is offered by the College Settlement of Philadelphia for two graduate students to reside at the settlement, paying a minimum rate of board, to take at least six hours of practice work at the Settlement, and to pursue courses in the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department.

Scholarship in Music

A Scholarship in Music, available for graduate or undergraduate students in need of financial aid is offered each year by the "Music Fund" of Boston, Massachusetts, to students training themselves to become teachers of music in public or private schools or colleges. The value of the scholarship is $350 to $500 and it is awarded on the recommendation of Mr. Thomas Whitney Surette, Chairman of the Music Fund, and Mr. Horacé Alwyne, Director of the Department of Music. Undergraduates must satisfy the requirements in ear training and pianoforte playing; graduates must be qualified in sight-singing, musical dictation, pianoforte playing and sight reading, harmony, history and appreciation of music (a two-year course).

Graduate Prize

Susan B.
Anthony
Memorial
Prize

The Susan B. Anthony Memorial Prize of the value of $500 commemorates the great work for women of Susan B. Anthony. It was founded in 1910 by her friend Anna Howard Shaw and her niece Lucy E. Anthony.

From 1910 to 1928 the Memorial of Susan B. Anthony was a graduate scholarship in social economy or politics of the value of $250 awarded annually to the student who agreed to complete for publication a study on some phase of the woman question. With the consent of the surviving donor, Miss Lucy E. Anthony, the form of the memorial has been changed to a prize.

Scholarships for Foreign Women

Beginning in June, 1930, it will be awarded every two years to a graduate student of Bryn Mawr College who has published (or submitted in final form for publication approved by the Committee) the best study dealing with the industrial, social, economic, or political position of women in the past, present or future.

The award will be made by the President of the College, acting as chairman, and four members of the teaching staff appointed by her, two from the department under which, or in which the study has been written, and two from allied or associated departments.

*Scholarships for Foreign Women

Five graduate scholarships, of the value of one thousand dollars each, are offered annually to women students outside the United States and Canada. They are open for competition to women whose academic work has reached a standard equivalent to that denoted by the Bachelor's degree of an American college or university of acknowledged standing, that is, a three or four years' university course.† It is essential that applicants should be able to speak and understand English. Application for these scholarships should be made before April first. Renewal of the scholarships for a second year will not be granted except in very exceptional cases. Holders of the scholarships are required to be in continuous residence at the college and to follow regular approved courses of study.

The cost of board, residence and tuition for the academic year is $760, and an additional charge of $15 a week is made for students who remain at the college during the three weeks of the Christmas and Easter vacations. The value of the scholarship, $1000, therefore covers more than the fixed college expenses, and the remainder may be applied toward the other expenses which must be met by the student, i. e., traveling expenses to and from Europe, books, laundry, and all incidental personal expenses.

DUTIES OF RESIDENT SCHOLARS

Scholars are expected to reside in the Graduate Hall, to attend all college functions, to wear academic dress and to assist in the conduct of examinations. It is understood that they will uphold the college standards of scholarship and conduct and conform to the Self-Government regulations.

*Duties of Resident
Scholars*

* Applications for the scholarships for foreign women should be accompanied by full particulars of the candidate's academic work, by diplomas or certificates, and by letters of recommendation from professors, and should be addressed to the office of the Dean of the Graduate School, Bryn Mawr College, Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, U. S. A. Through coöperation with the Institute of International Education, 2 West 45th Street, New York City, applications from nationals of the countries with which the Institute maintains international student exchange relations, should be addressed to the Institute representatives in those countries:—Austria: Dr. Paul Dengler, Austro-American Institute of Education, I Elizabethstrasse 9, Vienna; Czechoslovakia: Dr. F. Spisek, Ministry of Education, Nostic Palace, Prague III; France: Monsieur A. V. Desclos, Office National des Universités et Écoles Françaises, 96 Boulevard Raspail, Paris; Germany: Dr. A. Morsbach, Akademischer Austauschdienst, Schloss Portal III, Berlin C 2; Hungary: Dr. Dennis Jánossy, Ministry of Education, V. Bathory-utca 12, Budapest; Italy: Dr. Piero Parini, Ministero Degli Affari Esteri, II Direttore Generale Delle Scuole Italiane All' Estero, Rome; Switzerland: Dr. Arthur Rohn, Eidgenössische Technische Hochschule, Zurich.

† For British women the degree of Bachelor of Arts, for French women the Licence, for Norwegian and Swedish women the Cand. Philol., or their equivalents are desired.

Students' Loan Fund

Students' Loan Fund

The Students' Loan Fund of the Alumnae Association of Bryn Mawr College was founded by the Class of 1890 for the use of students who need to borrow money in order to continue their college work, and for the purpose of receiving contributions, no matter how small, from those who are interested in helping students to obtain an education. The Fund is managed by a committee consisting of the President of the College and the Alumnae Scholarships and Loan Fund Committee.

The Committee in administering this money follow a definite policy, designed to serve the best interests of the students concerned. Loans may be used for any purpose approved by the Committee, who strongly recommend the borrowing of small sums to relieve undue financial pressure, or to meet special emergencies. As a rule, money is not loaned to Freshmen. The terms under which money is loaned are as liberal as is consistent with business-like principles. Interest, which begins with the date of graduation, is at the rate of four per cent. Payment of the loan must be made in five years according to the following system: ten per cent in each of the first two years; fifteen per cent each in the third and fourth years; fifty per cent in the fifth year. At the discretion of the Committee, exceptions are made in special cases, for example that of a student working for a higher degree, to both the five-year limit and the date of the first interest charge.

Contributions may be sent to the chairman of the Scholarships and Loan Fund Committee, Alumnae Office, Taylor Hall, Bryn Mawr, Pa. Application blanks may be obtained from the Alumnae Office on the third floor of Taylor Hall by students who wish to borrow from the Loan Fund.

THE BUREAU OF RECOMMENDATIONS

The college conducts a Bureau of Recommendations which assists students, alumnae and former undergraduate and graduate students by securing recommendations from their professors and forwarding these to individuals or agencies to whom they may apply for positions. It is not primarily a bureau of employment or appointments, although it is often instrumental in putting individuals directly in touch with positions. The bureau also helps graduate and undergraduate students to find summer work. A series of vocational lectures and conferences is conducted each year. The services of the bureau are given free of charge to students, alumnae and former students of Bryn Mawr College.

BEQUEST FORM

The Trustees of Bryn Mawr College will welcome any gift, bequest, or award which is to be devoted to scholarships, fellowships, or the endowment of professors' chairs in accordance with the wishes of the donor. Such funds may constitute memorials to the donor or to any person he may name. The sum of $9,000 yields sufficient income at present to provide tuition for one undergraduate or two graduate students at Bryn Mawr College.

Form of Bequest

I give and bequeath to The Trustees of Bryn Mawr College, a corporation established by law in the State of Pennsylvania, the sum of.....
.....to be invested and preserved inviolably for the endowment of Bryn Mawr College, located at Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania.

LIBRARY

The Bryn Mawr College Library is designed to be as far as possible a library for special study. There are at present on its shelves about 128,000 bound volumes and 10,000 dissertations and pamphlets. Of special interest is the classical library of the late Professor Sauppe of Göttingen, the Semitic library of the late Professor Amiaud of Paris, the mathematical library of Professor Charlotte Angus Scott and the Germanic library of the late Professor Karl Detlev Jessen.

The library is open daily except Sundays from 8 A. M. to 10 P. M. and on Sunday from 2 P. M. to 10 P. M. Books may be taken out by the students unless specially reserved for library reference use.

The sum of over twelve thousand dollars is expended yearly for books under the direction of the heads of the several collegiate departments, and, in addition to many gifts of single books, about thirty thousand dollars has been presented to the library during the past twenty years for expenditure in special departments.

Students may enjoy also the privileges of Haverford College Library, and the following:

The Library Company of Philadelphia, which contains about 260,000 volumes, divided between the Locust Street Building and the Ridgway Branch. Its valuable collection of pamphlets is not included in the number of volumes as given above. The Library is open from 9 A. M. to 5.30 P. M., and is open to students for consultation freely during these hours. To take books from the building a deposit must be made or subscriptions will be received as follows: $12.00 for one year, $6.00 for six months, $4.00 for three months.

The Mercantile Library, which contains about 215,000 volumes. Private subscription, $6.00 a year for two separate works at a time.

The Library of the Academy of Natural Sciences, which contains about 90,000 volumes. The Council of the Academy has generously conceded the use of its library and of its museum to the students of Bryn Mawr College.

The Library of the University of Pennsylvania, which contains about 550,000 volumes and 50,000 pamphlets. The custodians of this library have always been liberal in extending to the College inter-library loan courtesies.

The Free Library of Philadelphia, which contains over 625,000 volumes and 415,000 pamphlets and unbound documents, and is at all times open to the students for consultation.

The American Philosophical Society Library, which contains about 70,000 volumes, admission by card from a member.

The Historical Society of Pennsylvania Library, which contains over 150,000 bound volumes, and 250,000 pamphlets, is for reference only. The collection of manuscripts is one of the best in the country, comprising 7,000 volumes containing over 1,000,000 items. Every courtesy is extended to members of the college, and students and members of the Faculty are specially invited to all lectures delivered at the Library.

Over six hundred publications and reviews in the English, Greek, French, Italian, Spanish, German, and Swedish languages, are received by the library, as follows:

ADDRESS BOOK
LIVING ALUMNAE AND FORMER STUDENTS
OF
1930

Published by the
DEPARTMENT OF PUBLICATION
BRYN MAWR COLLEGE
Volume XXIII. Number 4. December, 1930

Entered as second class matter, March 23rd, 1908, at the post-office, Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, under Act of July 16th, 1894.

THE ADDRESS BOOK OF ALUMNÆ AND FORMER STUDENTS contains the names of all living alumnæ. At the request of the Executive Board of the Alumnæ Association the information is given under the married name with a cross reference of the unmarried name. Only degrees conferred by Bryn Mawr College are carried and these follow the name. The letter h stands for hearers, the letter u stands for undergraduate students and the letter g for graduate students at Bryn Mawr College. Where two addresses are given the first is the permanent address and the second the winter address for 1930-31. The geographical distribution by married names is arranged according to the place of occupation or the winter address. Every effort has been made to secure the latest address from reliable sources when the questionnaire has not been returned, but in all such cases an asterisk has been used to indicate that the information has not been received from the questionnaire. When an alumna who is married but who uses her maiden name exclusively has requested it the married name has been omitted. In all cases where two communications sent to the latest known address have been returned by the Post Office the alumna has been listed as having an unknown address. This list is a long one and the Alumnæ Secretary, Taylor Hall, will be glad to receive the latest addresses of these alumnæ or any other changes of address.

The Editor will appreciate receiving any corrections on the text other than addresses.

CAROLINE MORROW CHADWICK-COLLINS, A B.
Editor.

BRYN MAWR COLLEGE

THE CAROLA WOERISHOFFER GRADUATE DEPARTMENT OF SOCIAL ECONOMY AND SOCIAL RESEARCH

The Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department of Social Economy and Social Research was opened in the autumn of 1915 in order to afford women an opportunity to obtain an advanced scientific education in Social Economy which, it is hoped, will compare favorably with the best preparation in any profession. It is known as the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department in order that the name of Carola Woerishoffer, who devoted her life to social service and industrial relations, may be associated in a fitting and lasting way with Bryn Mawr College which she so generously endowed.

The programmes offered in the Department fall into four groups: I. Programme in social case work in the family, in child welfare, and in social guardianship; II. Programme in community organization; III. Programme in industrial relations; IV. Programme in social and industrial research. The principles upon which the programmes are based are those which have been tested in the older professional schools:

(1) The work is distinctly and entirely postgraduate.

(2) Knowledge of the fundamental principles underlying the social and industrial structure is regarded as prerequisite to the graduate courses; namely, preparation in elementary economic theory, elementary psychology, and elementary sociology.

(3) The instruction includes on the one hand seminars embodying the theories of social relations and of industrial relations; and on the other hand seminars giving the technique of social case work, of community organization and leadership, of labor adjustments, of social and industrial research, and of administration of social agencies, accompanied in each case by field practice, called a practicum.

(4) All observation, field practice, and non-resident experience is carefully and closely supervised by an instructor well grounded in theory and familiar with and experienced in technique.

The programmes on pages 25-30 are presented in order to afford the student a panoramic view of the work which is open to her (see the successive programmes), the agencies which carry on work in each field (see the last column of each programme), and the types of positions open in the various agencies (see next to the last column of each programme).

It will be noted that the same types of positions and problems are found in several fields of work. In the first column of each programme are placed, therefore, those subjects which provide the foundation for all types of positions. These subjects are selected from the group courses given in economics, politics, psychology, education, philosophy, biology, and history in Bryn Mawr College. In the second and third columns are given only those subjects which bear directly on the special field of work under consideration. The elementary and advanced undergraduate courses are cultural and not professional, but are recommended as courses of the greatest value for the student who wishes to direct some part of her college studies toward this specialized field. The courses given under "graduate courses" are essential to adequate preparation for the field of work indicated. The courses scheduled in the charts are not in every case described in this pamphlet but may be found in the Bryn Mawr College Graduate Calendar, from which the description of courses given below (pages 31 to 40) is reprinted.

The wide range of choice in fields of work and in agencies, necessitates careful thought on the part of the student as to her natural fitness for any particular work, and the amount of time she can give to training herself for it. The student may write for advice and suggestion, or may wait until after arrival at Bryn Mawr for conference with the Director and Instructors before selecting the field in which she may work. The descriptions of the various programmes, together with the charts which follow, are presented in an endeavor to assist the student to wise specialization although the fields will necessarily supplement one another and overlap as, for example, industrial relations and community work or industrial research, and seminaries may be so chosen as to combine work in two fields. The purpose of the outline is to suggest the content of an adequate preparation for the types of work considered and the range of opportunities in each field as they now exist.

I. Social Case Work.

Social case work is a rapidly developing professional field dealing with individuals or families who need assistance in meeting the every-day problems of human existence. This need may show itself in a variety of ways; through inability to earn a living, through chronic illness, through the necessity of placing out one's children, through the behavior or personality difficulties in a family group and through many other situations which keep human beings from attaining a happy and independent way of life. As social case work becomes more professional it is evident that the differences between the various kinds of agencies are largely administrative, and that there is a common basic foundation in the understanding of human nature which is essential to all case work. The case worker's real task is to understand the family fabric with which she is dealing and to get at the network of tangled and intricate human relationships, out of which a variety of end results present themselves. She is concerned with assisting those individuals to become as mature and self-sustaining as it is possible for them to be.

Case work is carried on in a variety of agencies, such as family organizations, children's organizations, mental hygiene clinics, the social service departments of schools and of hospitals, the probation and parole departments of courts and of reformatory institutions and a number of other types of public and private agencies. It is necessary, therefore, for every case worker to have a body of knowledge covering the specialized functions of various agencies, the inter-relationships between agencies, certain laws and their operation, and other community resources to be utilized in treatment. It is the aim of social case work, as presented in the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department, to emphasize the common basis of understanding, analysis and treatment in all these fields and to recognize the close relationship between the technique of social case work and the theory and practice in other fields of social work.

Skill in the art of case work requires certain personal qualities on the part of the case worker. She must try to understand herself and the basis of her reactions to certain situations. She must be aware of her prejudices and her own emotional needs so that she can fit them into the whole scheme of treatment. She must recognize that in the profession of social case work there are two constantly reacting elements, herself and the individuals who have come to her for help. If students are considering training for case work, they might find it helpful to discuss the requirements for success in the case work field with the instructors of the Carola Woerishoffer Department, with college and other vocational bureaus, or with the American Association of Social Workers.

In addition to the seminary in Case Work, to which it is presupposed the student will devote one-third of her time, she will take a seminary in Social Relationships, or a seminary in Social Origins, and a third seminary in a related subject such as Social or Applied Psychology, Child Psychology, or Education. For students desiring technical courses in Criminal Law arrangements are made with the University of Pennsylvania Law School. (See Programmes I, II, III, pages 25 to 27.)

II. Community Organization.

Community Organization activities, ordinarily designated as Community Organization, fall into four principal groups: (1) the organization and federation of clubs for adults and children; (2) the mobilization of community interest and support for particular activities or programmes such as those carried on by the Young Women's Christian Association, American Red Cross, and other groups; (3) the development of councils of social agencies and financial federations; (4) the creation of self-consciousness and channels of expression and activity in all communities, especially in those which are undeveloped.

Under the latter heading fall such activities as those of Community Centers, neighborhood associations, and the social settlements. This form of community organization presupposes that the citizens of the community really want to band themselves together for some form of cooperative undertaking.

It involves the creation of some kind of machinery, and seems to point to the need for: (1) executives; (2) adults' workers; (3) girls' workers; (4) boys' workers; and (5) children's workers.

All of these workers and activities cannot be secured in the early development of any community association. It is, therefore, necessary for community workers to be prepared to direct several community activities and to be expert in at least one special activity. A large amount of volunteer service should be utilized and the director must be able to supervise the work of volunteers. The student preparing for these positions should have a thorough course in the theory of community organization, a knowledge of the technical requirements of all phases of work and special technical training in one or more community activities.

The courses recommended for the first year include a Seminary in Community Organization; a Seminary in Social Education; a Seminary in Social Psychology; and a Seminary in Social Origins or in Social Relationships, or other seminaries noted in Programme IV, page 28.

During the second year the student is recommended to elect from the following seminaries: Seminary in Social and Industrial Research; Seminary in Municipal Government; Seminary in Labour Organization.

III. Industrial Relations.

The Grace H. Dodge fellowships and scholarships were first awarded in 1918 in order to prepare women to aid in the adjustment of human relations in industry. They were the direct outcome of the work undertaken by the War Work Council of the National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association and by the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department, by which training in industrial relations was inaugurated. The endowment of a chair of instruction in the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department by Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and the efforts of a committee to secure endowment for fellowships and scholarships, have provided for the continuation of these opportunities.

The programme in Industrial Relations (see Programme V, page 29) is planned to prepare the student for positions which deal with human relations in industry. Recognizing that the development of the individual and of industry are inextricably bound together the courses afford a study of education and advancement of workers on the one hand and of industrial organization on the other.

As the department which directs the human relations of an industrial enterprise is the vantage point from which we may view the economy of labour and the distribution of well-being, the student spends her first semester of practical work in a well-organized employment department of an industrial or commercial establishment in or near Philadelphia, and gives especial attention to questions of industrial organization. For the second semester she may be placed in direct contact with workers in industry or in the trade union movement, or may be associated with centralized employment agencies, or may devote herself to factory inspection or to work with industrial groups in the community.

Preparation for all these lines of work follows practically the same programme. The work of the first year includes the seminary in Labour Organization, the seminary in Industrial Relations, and a third seminary in Social Relationships, Economics, Psychology, or Education to be elected by the student with the consent of the Director of the Department. In the second year the student may elect the advanced seminars but will devote a considerable part of her time to special labour investigations.

IV. Social and Industrial Research.

Every phase of social work demands investigators prepared to gather data, analyze them, make interpretations and present the findings with constructive conclusions and recommendations. Every social organization also is feeling increasingly the necessity of having on its staff experts capable of planning and maintaining systems of records and especially fitted to analyze and interpret the material acquired by the organization, not only in order to outline reports of its accomplishment, but also in order to formulate social programmes which may result in social betterment through social legislation and social education.

Federal and state departments and commissions, as well as private foundations have properly assumed the responsibility of studying the social and industrial conditions of the country, and from these boards and organizations comes the constant demand for expert statisticians, investigators, and research directors and assistants. And these workers must possess wide knowledge of social conditions, social organizations and processes for organized social betterment.

Industries are also demanding experts who may be able to determine through surveys the special needs of industrial groups or of definite plants in relation to labour supply and labour efficiency. Labour Unions are carrying on research work, calling on experts to investigate problems of production and to prepare legislation and even briefs for legal cases. Communities are seeking workers trained to make surveys through which the resources and special needs of the community may be discovered, deleterious conditions removed, and the forces of the community organized for the attainment of higher community standards.

Students wishing to devote themselves primarily to social and industrial research will find it necessary to pursue a two or three year course. Not only must they master the technique of schedule making, tabulation, interpretation, and exhibitions, but this technical training must be based on a broad knowledge of social, industrial, and economic questions. The following arrangement of studies is recommended to students: in the first year of the course special preparation in Statistics, the seminary in Labour Organization, a seminary in Social Theory, and a third seminary in Psychology, Education, Economics or Philosophy; in the second year, the seminary in Social and Industrial Research, and two seminaries in advanced social theory, chosen from those suggested in Programme VI, page 30. In the third year may be completed a piece of research undertaken in the seminary in Social and Industrial Research during the second year, which may become the material for the Doctor's thesis. Other electives will depend upon the choice by the student of the associated and independent minors leading to the Doctor's degree. Students entering Bryn Mawr after one year of graduate work at another institution, may enter the second year of the programme in Social and Industrial Research.

In these four groups the instruction is aimed primarily to prepare students, who have had but little experience, for positions in the respective fields. But opportunity is especially offered for more mature students who have had considerable experience in social work and who wish further preparation for executive and administrative positions. In addition to advanced work in the appropriate branch of social work the student may pursue the course in Administration of Social Agencies, and may elect seminars related to her special interest.

General Statement.

The graduate courses in Social Economy and Social Research are intended for graduate students who present a diploma from some college of acknowledged standing, and no undergraduate students are admitted. Pre-requisites.

Students of this department must offer for admission to their graduate work a preliminary course in economics, in psychology and in sociology,* and in addition more advanced courses equivalent to the Bryn Mawr College major course in one of the following subjects: economics and politics, sociology, history, psychology, or philosophy (that is altogether at least two and one-half units in one of these subjects).†

The courses are planned on the principle that about two-thirds of the student's time shall be given to the study of theory and the remaining one-third to a seminary including field or laboratory work.

In the first year the student will probably pursue a seminary in the theory and technique applied to her chosen field, as for example: Social Case Work, or Community Organization, or Industrial Relations, in which she will give 7 to 10 hours a week during the term time and full time in vacation practica to practice or field work with a social agency or in a business firm

* Students not having had these courses may be expected to supplement their preparation by taking work at a university summer school of recognized standing.

† The "unit" represents one-quarter of the student's time for one year, or approximately ten hours of work a week, including class meetings.

chosen in relation to her selected field; she will take the seminary in theory most closely related to her special interests; unless already qualified she will take the course in statistics, and she will elect a third seminary. In addition all students attend the Journal Club. Each seminary requires about 14 hours of work each week, including hours of discussion, preparation, field work and conference. Full graduate work involves about 44 hours of work per week.

Practice or Field Work

Practice work required in each field consists of two types: (1) field work consisting of 7 to 10 hours each week; (2) non-resident experience with social institutions, agencies, or business firms obtained during four weeks in December and January and eight weeks during the summer following the eight months of work in Bryn Mawr College. By courtesy of the settlements in Philadelphia, which is the equivalent of a stipend, students may reside in a settlement at an expense for room and board of approximately one dollar a day during the mid-winter practicum after college closes, and during the eight weeks of the summer practicum. Frequently settlements in New York and Boston offer residence on varied terms by special arrangements.

For those students who are taking a seminary including laboratory or field work, the programme will be, in 1930-31, as follows: (1) work at Bryn Mawr College, September 30th to December 7th, during which period at least one day a week is given to field work; (2) a mid-winter practicum in which the student gives full service to a social organization or business establishment or to research from December 8th to January 3rd in New York, Boston, Philadelphia or elsewhere; (3) January 4th to January 30th, during which period the student gives her entire time to classes and study at Bryn Mawr College; (4) February 3rd to June 3rd, during which time the student gives one day a week to field practice work, with the exception of the Spring vacation; (5) the summer practicum from June 8th to August 1st, during which time the student gives all of her time to practical work with a social organization or a mercantile or manufacturing establishment. The field work during the time of residence at the College, and during the mid-winter and summer practica is under the careful supervision of an instructor of the Department. After one year of work in this department one-half year may be given to a practicum in residence in a social service institution, in connection with a social welfare or community organization, in a federal or state department of labour and industry, in a federal or state employment office, or in a manufacturing or mercantile establishment in Philadelphia, New York, New England, or elsewhere, during which time the practical work and special reading and research will be supervised by the instructor in charge of the practicum and by the head of the institution, department, or business firm.

Students entering the Department are expected to pursue the work throughout one year. Unless the student has had graduate courses providing a foundation for professional social work, or acceptable experience in social work, at least two years are necessary for satisfactory preparation. A certificate will be given upon the completion of one or of two years' study. The candidate for a certificate must offer a seminary which requires practice or laboratory work, or field work in social and industrial research, including the vacation practica.

Degrees.*

Graduates of Bryn Mawr College, and graduates of other colleges who shall have satisfied the Academic Council that the course of study for which they have received a degree is equivalent to that for which the degree of Bachelor of Arts is given by Bryn Mawr College, or who shall have attended such additional courses of lectures as may be prescribed, may apply to the Academic Council to be enrolled as candidates for the degrees of Master of Arts or of Doctor of Philosophy; admission to the graduate school does not in itself qualify a student to become a candidate for these degrees.

Candidates for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Social Economy and Social Research may select the associated or independent minor from the graduate seminaries and courses outlined in this announcement or from other graduate seminaries or courses, subject to the approval of the Graduate Committee. According to the regulations of the Academic Council of Bryn Mawr College, candidates for this degree in other departments may elect seminaries in Social Economy for the associated or the independent minor, with the approval of the Director of the Department.

Any applicant expecting to become a candidate for the degree of Master of Arts should write in advance to the office of the Secretary and Registrar for a Calendar of Graduate Courses and note the requirements for the degree.*

The appointment Bureau of Bryn Mawr College is under the direct supervision of the Dean of the College and the Carola Woerishoffer Department coöperates with it in recommending for positions women trained in this department.

Fellowships and Scholarships.

The most distinguished place among graduate students is held by the fellows and graduate scholars, who must reside in the college during the academic year. Fellowships and scholarships available in the Department of Social Economy are as follows:

*Resident
Graduate Fellowships
and
Scholarships*

The Mary Elizabeth Garrett European Fellowship of the value of $1,000 was founded by Miss Mary Elizabeth Garrett of Baltimore and is awarded annually on the ground of excellence in scholarship to a student in any department who has completed at least three semesters of graduate studies at Bryn Mawr College. The fellowship is to be applied toward the expenses of one year's study and residence at some foreign university, English or Continental. The choice of a university may be determined by the holder's own preference, subject to the approval of the Faculty. The fellowship is awarded to assist candidates for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy of Bryn Mawr College to complete their preparation. It is therefore understood that the holders of the Mary Elizabeth Garrett Fellowship will not present themselves as candidates for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy elsewhere than at Bryn Mawr College.

The Helene and Cecil Rubel Foundation Fellowship of the value of $1,500 was founded in 1920 by Miss Helen Rubel, of New York City, to be awarded in each year by the Faculty of Bryn Mawr College with the approval of the donor. The fellowship may be awarded to any woman who has at any time studied in the graduate school of Bryn Mawr College long enough to have shown her ability irrespective of whether her work was planned to lead to a degree or not. The fellowship may be held at any centre of education that may be selected by the student and approved by the Faculty as best suited to her individual needs, or may, in special cases, be used as a travelling fellowship to give opportunity for the study of conditions in which the student may be interested in different parts of the world. The fellowship shall not necessarily be offered as an aid to study for a higher degree, but may be used by the holder, with the approval of the Faculty, in whatever way may best advance the purpose she has in mind. The fellowship shall be awarded to the best student, but if she can afford to carry out her plans with her own income she shall return the amount of the fellowship to the College to be used by another student in the same year.

Two Carola Woerishoffer Memorial Fellowships in Social Economy and Social Research of the value of $860 are awarded annually for study at Bryn Mawr College on the ground of excellence in scholarship to candidates who have completed at least one year of graduate work at some college of good standing after obtaining their first degree.

Several Grace H. Dodge Memorial Fellowships in Social Economy for work in Industrial Relations of the value of $860 may be awarded annually on the ground of excellence in scholarship to candidates who have completed at least one year of graduate work at some college of good standing after obtaining their first degree.

Two Carola Woerishoffer Memorial Scholarships in Social Economy, of the value of $400 each, are awarded annually to candidates next in merit to the successful candidates for the fellowships; they are also open for competition to graduates of any college of good standing.

Several Grace H. Dodge Scholarships in Social Economy for work in Industrial Relations, of the value of $400 each, may be awarded annually and are open for competition to graduates of Bryn Mawr College or of any other college of good standing.

The Robert G. Valentine Memorial Scholarship in Social Economy of the value of $400 is offered annually by Mrs. Frank W. Hallowell of Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts, to be awarded by the President and Faculty of Bryn Mawr College on the recommendation of the Director of the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department of Social Economy and Social Research to a candidate approved by the donor. It is open to graduates of any college of good standing.

Opportunity is offered by the College Settlement of Philadelphia for two graduate students to reside at the settlement, paying a minimum rate of board, to take at least six hours of practice work at the settlement, and to pursue courses in the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department.

Five graduate scholarships for foreign women of the value of $1,000 each are offered annually for women outside the United States and Canada desiring to study in any department of Bryn Mawr College. They are open for competition to women whose academic work has reached a standard equivalent to that denoted by the Bachelor's degree of an American college or university of acknowledged standing. Renewal of these scholarships for a second year will be granted only in exceptional cases. The holders are required to be in continuous residence at the college and to follow regular approved courses of study. The scholars are not permitted to accept any paid position except as arranged by the College. A furnished single room in Radnor Hall is assigned to each scholar, but this is not available in the Christmas and Easter vacations when scholars who remain at the college have to pay the expenses of board and residence.*

The fellowships and scholarships are intended as an honour, and are awarded in recognition of previous attainments; generally speaking, they will be awarded to the candidates that have studied longest or to those whose work gives most promise of future success. Fellows who continue their studies at the college after the expiration of the fellowship, may, by a vote of the directors, receive the rank of Fellows by Courtesy.

Fellows are expected to attend all college functions, including commencement exercises, to wear academic dress, to assist in the conduct of examinations, and to give about two hours a week to the care of special libraries and in the seminars; they are not permitted while holding the fellowship to teach, or to undertake any other duties in addition to their collegiate work. They are expected to uphold the college standards of scholarship and conduct and to give loyal support to the Students' Association for Self-Government. They are required to reside in the college and are assigned rooms by the Secretary of the College. They are charged the usual fee of seven hundred and eighty-eight dollars and fifty cents for tuition, board, room-rent, laboratory, certificate, athletic and infirmary fees.

*Duties of
Fellows.*

The holder of a fellowship is expected to devote at least one-half her time to the department in which the fellowship is awarded, and to show by the presentation of a thesis or in some other manner that her studies have not been without result.

Scholars are expected to reside in the college, to attend all college functions, including commencement exercises, to wear academic dress and to assist in the conduct of examinations. It is understood that they will uphold the college standards of scholarship and conduct and give loyal support to the Students' Association for Self-Government.

*Duties of
Scholars.*

Application for resident fellowships and scholarships should be made to the President, Bryn Mawr College, Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, as early as possible, and not later than the first of February preceding the academic year for which the fellowship or scholarship is desired. Application blanks will be sent on request. A definite answer will be given within three weeks from the latest date set for receiving applications. Any original papers, printed or in manuscript, which have been prepared by the applicant and sent in support of her application will be returned when stamps for that purpose are enclosed, or specific directions for return by express are given. Letters or testimonials will be filed for reference.

*Applications for Resident Fellowships
and Scholarships.*

Prize

The Susan B. Anthony Memorial Prize of the value of $500 commemorates the great work for women of Susan B. Anthony. It was founded in 1910 by her friend Anna Howard Shaw and her niece Lucy E. Anthony.* Beginning in June 1930, it will be awarded every two years to a graduate student of Bryn Mawr College who has published (or submitted in final form for publication approved by the Committee) the best study dealing with the industrial, social, economic, or political position of women in the past, present or future.

* From 1910 to 1928 the Memorial of Susan B. Anthony has been a graduate scholarship in social economy or politics awarded annually to the student who agreed to complete for publication a study on some phase of the woman question. The form of the memorial has been changed to a prize with the consent of the surviving donor, Miss Lucy E. Anthony.

The award will be made by the President of the College, acting as chairman, and four members of the teaching staff appointed by her, two from the department under which, or in which the study has been written, and two from allied or associated departments.

EXPENSES

Expenses of Graduate Students

In cases where a full time registration is not made, fees for graduate students are as follows:

*Tuition for Graduate
Students.*

For one graduate seminary or for any graduate course meeting two hours a week.....	$100.00
For any graduate course meeting one hour a week.....	50.00
For any undergraduate course*.....	125.00
Room-rent for the academic year, payable on registration.....	100.00
Board for the semester, payable on registration.....	200.00
Summary of total expenses for the academic year:
Tuition fee, for six or more hours a week of lectures.....	250.00
Room-rent.....	100.00
Board.....	400.00
Infirmary fee†.....	10.00
Certificate fee.....	5.00
Laboratory fees for the academic year.....	20.00
Athletic fee.....	3.50

Total for tuition, residence, laboratory, certificate, athletics, and infirmary care for the academic year..... $788.50

The tuition fee for the semester becomes due as soon as the student is registered in the College office. No reduction of this fee will be made on account of absence, dismissal during the currency of the semester, term, or year covered by the fee in question or for any other reason whatsoever. If a graduate student is admitted to residence or to attendance on lectures after the beginning of a semester a proportionate reduction is made in the charges for board and room-rent and for tuition. Every student who enters the College must register immediately at the Comptroller's office, and must register her courses at the President's office within two weeks after entrance under penalty of exclusion from the College. Any change made later in the courses registered must be reported immediately to the President's office, or the courses will not be permitted to count, and a charge of one dollar will be made for each change made in the course after it has been definitely registered.

All graduate students, including Fellows and Scholars, taking two courses or a course which requires field or laboratory work in the Department of Social Economy and Social Research are charged a laboratory fee of $10 a semester, and may also be required to provide themselves with two 50-trip tickets between Bryn Mawr and Philadelphia costing $9.18 each, and to meet their traveling and incidental expenses while working in the field during the semesters and vacations. An allowance not exceeding thirty-five dollars will be made to each Fellow and Scholar in the Department who takes a field seminary towards the field expenses during the semesters. The fee for the certificate is $5, and all Fellows and Scholars are expected to complete work for a certificate and are charged the $5 certificate fee.

*Laboratory
Fees.*

The fee for laboratory courses in Applied Psychology, Education, and Educational Psychology for graduate students is $6 a semester.

* A special charge of $100 is made to candidates for the degree of Master of Arts for the advanced undergraduate work that may be offered in partial fulfillment of the requirements for that degree.

† This fee entitles the student to two days (not necessarily consecutive) resident care in the Infirmary provided her illness is not infectious and to consultations with the College Physician during her office hours.

Students whose fees are not paid before November first in the first semester and before March first in the second semester are not permitted to continue in residence or in attendance on their classes.

*Residence for Graduate
Students.*

Residence in the college buildings is optional except for holders of resident fellowships and scholarships. Those who do not reside in the College buildings are expected to make arrangements which are satisfactory to the College. A list of suitable places in the neighborhood where board may be obtained is available upon application to the College. No student may live in the Halls of Residence who does not register for a course or research work amounting to at least a two-hour lecture or seminary course, but those who wish to take five hours a week of lectures or less may live in the College halls on the understanding that they must give up their rooms if needed for students who are taking the full amount of graduate work and paying the regular tuition fee. Former students returning to write a dissertation or to do research work are required to register and to pay the minimum fee of eighteen dollars a semester if they wish to make use of the library and seminary rooms.

Radnor Hall has been set aside as a hall of residence for graduate students. Every student has a separate bedroom. Room-rent includes all expenses of furnishing, service, heating and light.

The demand for graduate rooms is very great, and since reserving a room unnecessarily may prevent some other student from entering the College, a deposit of fifteen dollars is required in order that the application may be registered. In case the applicant enters the College in the year for which the room is reserved, the amount of the deposit is deducted from the first College bill. If she changes the date of her application or files formal notice of withdrawal at the Office of the Secretary and Registrar before August first of the year for which the application is made, the deposit will be refunded. If, for any reason whatever, the change or withdrawal be made later than August first, the deposit will be forfeited to the College.

The College reserves the right to exclude at any time and to cancel the fellowships or scholarships held by students whose conduct or academic standing renders them undesirable members of the College community, and in such cases the fees due or which may have been paid in advance to the College will not be refunded or remitted in whole or in part.

Courses Offered in the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department.

The instruction in this department is under the direction of Dr. Susan Myra Kingsbury, Carola Woerishoffer Professor of Social Economy and Director of the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department of Social Economy and Social Research; Dr. Hornell Hart,* Professor of Social Economy; Dr. Mildred Fairchild, Associate in Social Economy; Miss Almena Dawley, Non-resident Lecturer in Social Economy; Dr. Mary Phlegar Smith, Lecturer in Social Economy; Dr. Alice Hamilton, Special Lecturer in Industrial Poisons; Mrs. Eva Whiting White, Special Lecturer in Community Organization; and a special lecturer in Social Hygiene.

The departments of Economics and Politics, Psychology, Education, and Philosophy offer seminars strongly recommended to students of Social Economy. These seminars are given by Dr. Marion Parris Smith, Professor of Economics; Dr. Charles Ghequiere Fenwick, Professor of Political Science; Dr. Roger Hewes Wells, Associate Professor in Economics and Politics; Dr. James H. Leuba, Professor of Psychology; Dr. Harry Helson, Associate Professor of Experimental Psychology; Dr. Agnes Low Rogers, Professor of Education and Psychology; Dr. Ilse Forest, Associate Professor in Education, Mr. Milton Charles Nahm, Lecturer in Philosophy and Mr. Samuel Arthur King, Non-Resident Lecturer in English Diction.

Graduate Courses.

The following graduate seminars and courses may be elected subject to the approval of the Director of the Department by students working for the first and second year certificates as well as by candidates for the degree of Master of Arts or of Doctor of Philosophy in Social Economy and Social Research, or may be offered, with the approval of the Director of the Department, towards the degree of Doctor of Philosophy as the associated or independent minor, when the major is taken in certain other departments according to the regulations of the Academic Council.

* Granted leave of absence for the year 1930-31. The courses announced by Professor Hart are being given by Dr. Mary Phlegar Smith.

Seminary in Social and Industrial Research: Dr. Kingsbury.

(Given in each year)Three hours a week throughout the year

Research in Social Economy involves two distinct types of studies. First, that which uses manuscripts or printed documents as sources of information, and second, that which secures data concerning human relations and social conditions from individuals, groups, organizations, or institutions. Both phases of social research necessitate an ability to discover cause and effect, to see the relations and interpret the interaction of social forces, to recognize and evaluate the factors conditioning or controlling social situations, and to establish facts concerning social phenomena.

Consequently, training in the acquisition, arrangement, analysis, and interpretation of data is essential for students undertaking either phase of social research. As other seminars in the Department and allied departments deal primarily with the first type of studies, this seminary is devoted exclusively to the second type. A subject is selected and arrangements made which will require students to secure social data by work in the field. The material is then organized, analyzed, and interpreted by the members of the seminary. In this way, training is given in filling out schedules, classifying data, drawing up tables, analyzing results, and interpreting material as a whole. The group of students may cooperate to produce a study which it is hoped will prove a contribution to our knowledge of social or industrial conditions. Students not taking a seminary in which field practice is required will be expected to carry on a mid-winter practicum in this seminary (see page 17). Previous graduate study or acceptable experience in social or in industrial work is required for admission to this seminary.

Seminary in Administration of Social Agencies: Dr. Kingsbury.

(Given in 1929-30 and again in 1931-32)Two hours a week throughout the year.

This course studies the sources of financial support of social agencies, the education of the community, cooperation in larger social programmes, the relationships between public and private agencies, the organization and supervision of a staff and the development and installation of methods to secure high standards of work. Opportunities for field work and research are arranged according to the needs of the student. This seminary is open to advanced students with the approval of the instructor.

Seminary in Statistics: Dr. Kingsbury. Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in 1930-31 and again in 1932-33)

The work of the seminary is divided into three sections and considers: first, the principles of statistical measurement—frequency distributions, averages, index numbers, measures of association, correlation and partial correlation, theories of probability and probable error; second, standard and model forms of schedules and the methods of tabulation and analysis of data, together with criticisms of the methods employed in some of the best social investigations which have been carried on; third, a study of the application of statistics to the analysis of social problems, including a review of the outstanding contributions in the subject, and a criticism of selected statistical reports. Important correlations already established between socially significant variables will be reviewed, and their application in connection with further research indicated.

Seminary in The Family: Dr. Hart.* Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in 1931-32 and again in 1933-34)

The evolution of the family as a social institution will be reviewed briefly. The course will deal chiefly with the social problems involved in relations between men and women, parents and children, young people and their parents, the family and society, and the like. Problems related to social attitudes, agencies and legislation dealing with the family will be taken up by the project method.

* Granted leave of absence for the year 1930-31. See footnote, page 31.

Seminary in Social Change: Dr. Hart.* Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1932-33)

Problems related to the nature of social progress and the methods whereby it can be achieved will be studied by members of the seminary. The course will begin with a review of prehistoric cultural evolution and of modern primitive cultures, including visits to ethnological and archaeological exhibits in Philadelphia, New York, or Washington. The natural laws of invention and of diffusion of culture will be studied inductively by analyzing the history of various culture elements in primitive and civilized societies. The applicability of these laws to the origin and spread of social movements and agencies will be worked out in specific instances. Various prognoses as to the future of our civilization will be reviewed in relation to the foregoing material, and principles essential to sound social reform will be developed.

Seminary in Research in Sociology: Dr. Hart.*

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1931-32 and each year thereafter)

Seminary in Community Organization and Administration: Dr. Hart.*

Two hours a week throughout the year.

Laboratory and Field Work.

Seven hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

The technique of integration of purpose as applied to social work with groups, through such agencies as settlements, playgrounds, social centers, Y. W. C. A.'s, councils of social agencies, community chests, civic organizations, legislative commissions, and research and propaganda agencies, forms the subject-matter of the course. Special attention is given to the practical problems involved in introducing new social movements into communities, in organizing and conducting clubs and classes, in work with committees and boards, in publicity work, and in financial and legislative campaigns.

The Practicum in Community Organization and Administration combines practical work in social and community education with reports and discussions. In addition to reports and conferences, seven hours a week are devoted to active work in a social center or settlement by which the student gains vital illustration of the principles and organization of community work.

The practicum is under the direction of Dr. Hart and the director of the particular agency or department and is so arranged as to give the student training during the academic year and the midwinter and summer practica (see pages 15-16) in some one or more of the following activities:

(1) Direction and teaching of clubs and classes as observers, visitors, helpers and assistants.

(2) Regular daily management as assistants and later as directors.

(3) General administrative assistance in office work, including record-keeping, in library work, in activities to secure publicity, in preparation of newspaper articles, reports, posters, exhibits, parades, dramatics, plays, festivals, demonstrations, concerts, and lectures, in public speaking and writing, and in conducting financial campaigns and special studies.

(4) Teaching in night schools of classes in civics and elementary subjects, and conducting games, dramatics, gymnastics, playgrounds and kindergarten activities.

(5) Co-operation with civic movements, community campaigns and emergency activities, school programmes and publicity.

The fields from which the subject for the practicum may be chosen are community, civic and social centers, settlements, playgrounds, and health and recreation centers, and have included the Bryn Mawr Community Center, The Philadelphia College Settlement, The Young Women's Christian Association, and work in smaller neighboring communities.

* Granted leave of absence for the year 1930-31. See footnote, page 31.

Seminary in Labour Organization: Dr. Fairchild.

Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in each year)

Some of the forces found in modern industry, the inequality of distribution, and the gradual development of democratic ideas that lead to labour organization are reviewed as an introduction to trade union history and the development of labour organization in America is compared with that in Europe and especially in England. The methods used by labour are studied in detail—the strike, boycott, sabotage, picketing and various aspects of labour warfare—as well as the attempts of the employer to suppress unionism. The bearing of the law and the courts on the labour struggle and the use of the injunction are considered critically. The significance of social legislation, welfare work, and the intervention of the state are discussed with a view to understanding the probable future of labour organization. The changing philosophy of labour as it is embodied in experiments in various countries, England, Germany, France and Russia, is given particular attention. As a part of the seminary, students attend trade union meetings and conferences, visit factories, and various state and private organizations which are concerned with employment, vocational guidance, and legislative reform.

Seminary in Industrial Relations: Dr. Fairchild.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

Laboratory and Field Work.

Seven hours a week throughout the year.(Given in each year)

The aim of this seminary is to secure an understanding of actual conditions, methods and problems connected with relations between employer and employee in Industry in the United States. A brief study of the system of industrial organization as it has developed in this country is followed by an analysis of the procedure and problems of the personnel office, employment, rating, training, promotion, discharge, and methods of wage payment. On the basis of critical comparison of methods, fundamental principles are brought to light. Special lectures on psychology in industry, labour exchanges, government agencies, scientific management, industrial poisons and other topics are included in the course. Actual cases are studied and observation trips give the student first hand information regarding present day conditions and methods. The practicum consists of seven hours work in factories each week during the academic year, four weeks midwinter work in department stores, and eight weeks midsummer work in factories.

This seminary must be accompanied by the seminary in Labour Organization.

Seminary in Research in Labour Organization or Industrial Organization:
Dr. Fairchild.Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in each year)

Each student pursues a separate research problem of her own choice, conferring with the instructor individually as her work progresses, and reporting periodically to weekly meetings of the students in the seminary. The course is open to advanced students with the consent of the instructor.

Seminary in Social Case Work: Miss Dawley.

Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in each year)

Laboratory and Field Work.

Ten hours a week throughout the year.

The object of this course is to understand the basis of each human being's failure in self-maintenance, to interpret his reactions and behavior in terms of his life experiences and relationships, and to utilize this evaluation in the carrying out of treatment. Emphasis is placed on the various processes of case work, the evaluation of case material, case recording, the community resources essential for treatment and the case worker's relationship to these resources.

The Practicum in Social Case Work during the past year has consisted of field work carried on 7 to 10 hours per week and a mid-winter and a summer practicum (see pages 15 and 16) with the following agencies: The Family Society of Philadelphia, the Children's Aid Society and the White-Williams Foundation. The field work with these agencies is under the supervision of Miss Dawley and the supervisor of the particular agency or department.

Social Statistics: Dr. Kingsbury. Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in each year)

The subjects considered are those required for an understanding of statistical studies in social economy, for use in conducting inquiries into social and economic conditions, and for analysis of data secured from Federal or State reports and from records of social and industrial organizations and institutions. Included in the course are the following topics: schedule making, accumulation of data, making of tables, the use of computing and filing devices, the array, frequency distributions, averages, index numbers, measures of association and variation, the theory of probability and of error and linear correlation.

No knowledge of mathematics beyond the usual college entrance requirements is presupposed. This course is required of all graduate students in the Department who have not had a satisfactory introductory course.

General Course in Articulation and Voice Production: Mr. King. One-half hour a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1929-30)

The object of this course is to train speakers in accurate and distinct articulation and to eliminate the faults of bad production. Speech is resolved into its phonetic elements which are made the basis of practical exercises so arranged as to be progressive in their difficulties.

The following courses in Criminal Law and Criminal Procedure at the University of Pennsylvania are open to graduate students by special arrangement:

Criminal Law. Two hours a week throughout the year.

By special arrangement with the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania students in this department may pursue the course in Criminal Law offered by Dean Mikell at the Law School, Thirty-fourth and Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia.

This course may accompany the seminary in Social Case Work.

Criminal Procedure. Two hours a week throughout the year.

By special arrangement with the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania students in this department may pursue the course in Criminal Procedure offered by Dean Mikell, at the Law School, Thirty-fourth and Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia.

This course must be preceded by the course in Criminal Law.

Social Economy Journal Club: Dr. Kingsbury, Dr. Fairchild, and Dr. Hart.* Two hours once a fortnight throughout the year.

Current articles are reviewed, recent reports, surveys and investigations are criticised, and the results of important research are presented for discussion.

The following seminaries offered in other departments are recommended to graduate students of Social Economy and Social Research:

* See footnote, page 31.

Seminary in Economics: Dr. Marion Parris Smith.

Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in 1930-31)

The object of the seminary is to train students in the methods of research and in the organization of material. Through short reports and longer papers, members of the seminary are given practice in using original sources and in critical study of secondary sources. The seminary discussion is supplemented by occasional lectures. Each student receives individual direction according to her particular needs and interests. The graduate studies pursued in the seminary are designed to assist in fulfilling the requirements for the higher degrees, in qualifying the student for teaching or further research in economics, and in preparing for various government civil service examinations.

1930-31: Present Problems in Distribution.

The subject of the seminary is the distribution of wealth in the modern industrial state. This includes such topics as the study of statistics of income, wage problems, limitation of profits and profit sharing, income and excess profit taxation, land reforms, projects for controlling monopolies, etc.

1931-32: The Industrial Revolution in Great Britain and Europe.

1932-33: Economic Institutions in the United States (including finance and banking, agriculture, manufacturing, and commerce).

1933-34: Economic Thought in the Nineteenth Century.

Seminary in Politics: Dr. Fenwick.

Two hours a week throughout the year.(Not given in 1930-31)

The methods of the seminary are designed to guide advanced students in special research work along the lines indicated by the titles of the courses. Some lectures are given but the main attention is devoted to the presentation and criticism of the results of studies made by the students themselves.

1931-32: Constitutional Questions Involved in Modern Economic and Social Problems.

1932-33: International Law.

1933-34: The Constitutional Law of the United States.

Seminary in Politics: Dr. Wells.

Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in each year)

1930-31: The History of Political Thought.

The purpose of this seminary is twofold: first, to familiarize the student with the writings of the principal political thinkers from Plato to the present time; and second, to enable the student to grasp clearly the main problems which political theory is called upon to explain and to solve. The work of the seminary includes lectures, general reading, student reports, and general class discussions.

1931-32: Comparative Municipal Government and Administration.

1932-33: American and Foreign Political Parties and Electoral Problems.

Psychological Seminary: Dr. Leuba.

Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in 1930-31)

As the foundation of the work of the seminary one or two of the following subjects is chosen each year: the psychology of mental and moral deficiencies with reference to the social problems they present, including case studies and research work in problems of delinquency; social psychology; chapters in abnormal psychology and the Freudian psychology; the fundamental principles of psychology; the psychology of religion and ethics.

Seminary in Social Psychology: Dr. Leuba.

Two hours a week during the second semester.(Given in 1930-31)

Abnormal Psychology, chiefly Mental and Moral Deficiencies, and their Social Implications; or Personality and Character.

This half-seminary together with another half-seminary given in the first semester, may be counted as a seminary by students in the Department of Social Economy and Social Research.

Seminary in Experimental and Systematic Psychology: Dr. Helson.

Three hours a week throughout the year.(Given in 1931-32)

This seminary is intended, primarily, to give a systematic presentation of the literature of experimental psychology. Due consideration, however, is given to all points of systematic importance. The work is grouped about the following topics: sensation, the simpler sense complexes, perception and ideas, feeling and the affective processes, attention, action, and the intellectual processes (memory, association, imagination, etc.).

Seminary in Clinical Methods in Child Guidance: Dr. Rogers.

Three hours a week throughout the year.

This seminary gives training in the diagnosis of educational difficulties at all levels and also practical experience in giving remedial treatment as well as a critical study of the diagnosis and remedial methods now in use. The seminary is recommended to students preparing for work in child guidance clinics, for child welfare work and as visiting teachers and school counsellors.

Seminary in Advanced Mental Measurements: Dr. Rogers.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

This seminary is devoted to the critical investigation of specific problems in the field of mental measurement and to training in research in applied psychology.

Seminary in Advanced Educational Psychology: Dr. Rogers.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

The main problems of educational psychology, and especially the psychology of elementary and high school subjects are studied from a theoretical and experimental point of view.

Seminary in Social Education: Dr. Forest.

Two hours a week during the first semester.

Seminary in Theory of Education: Dr. Forest.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

This seminary is devoted to the study of modern educational theory, and to a consideration of the issues involved in actual and proposed solutions of present educational problems. Practical problems of curriculum, method, and school administration directly in line with the interests of individual students will be discussed in the seminary, and will in so far as possible determine the content of the theoretical readings in the philosophy of education.

The following advanced undergraduate courses are offered by the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department:

Elements of Statistics: Dr. Kingsbury.

One-half unit.(Given in each year)

This course deals with the elementary principles of statistics. Among the topics are the array, frequency distributions, averages, graphic methods, measures of variation, theory of sampling, index numbers, theory of probability and linear correlation. It also attempts briefly to acquaint the student with the principles and methods of record keeping and filing which are applicable to municipal, state, and federal offices, to business organizations, and to social organizations.

The course is recommended to students of social economy, of economics and of education. No knowledge of mathematics beyond the requirements for matriculation is presupposed.

Applied Sociology: Dr. Hart.*

One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Relationships between personalities, the causes of social conflicts, and the methods, whereby maximum stimulation, release, facilitation and integration of the purposes and possibilities of all members of society may be attained, constitute the problems of the course. Specific applications to social relations in the family, in industry, between races, and the like, are worked out. By means of laboratory experiments and objective observation of social phenomena, outstanding sociological theories are tested by attempting to apply them to concrete data. A course in some social science is prerequisite for this course.

Social Anthropology: Dr. Hart.*

One unit.

(Given in each year)

An anthropological approach to the problems of human progress. An objective definition of progress is developed. Data relating to prehistoric, primitive, ancient and modern cultural and racial development, bearing in the amount and the direction of change in human intelligence, technology, and social relations, are examined. The desirability of various possible future directions of social change is explored. Methods of innovation in mechanical invention, medicine, science, social work, and other fields, are studied in terms of instances, with a view to developing the fundamental principles of the technique and dynamics of social progress. A course in some social science is prerequisite for this course.

Labour Movements: Dr. Fairchild.

One unit.

(Given in each year)

Present day problems of Labour considered with special reference to the history of the labour movement form the subject matter of this course. A study of the trade union and working class movements in various countries is followed by a critical analysis of present trade union problems and their methods of solution.

Significant episodes in the effort of labour to organize for effective control in this country and in other countries, and the policies of various trade unions at the present time, are analysed in order to foresee present and future tendencies in the labour movement. The strike and the lockout, picketing, boycotting, the injunction, management and coöperation, the company union, industrial democracy, trade agreements, and the relation of the internationals and of the International Labour Office to the various labour movements, are studied in some detail. The significance of workers' education and of the various labour colleges and schools is stressed, with special reference to the Bryn Mawr Summer School for Women Workers in Industry.

The following advanced undergraduate courses offered in other departments are recommended to graduate students of Social Economy and Social Research:

History of Economic Thought and Recent Economic Problems: Dr. M. P. Smith.

One unit.

(This course may be taken only by students who have completed the first year course in economics.)

The object of the course is to trace the history of western thought on such subjects as the just distribution of wealth, property and slavery, capital and usury, the wages of labour, and value and price; and to familiarize the students with modern economic theory. The latter part of the course is devoted to a study of selected problems of the modern economic world.

* Granted leave of absence for the year 1930-31. See footnote, page 31.

History of Political Thought and Present Political Problems: Dr. Fenwick and Dr. Wells. One unit.

(This course may be taken only by students who have completed the first year course in politics.)

The first semester of the course is devoted to the history of western political thought and the writings of some of the more important political thinkers are studied in detail. During the second semester, the vital problems of modern government, both theoretical and practical, are examined. The course inquires into the authority of the state and the legal and moral basis upon which it rests. It analyzes the constitutional foundations of modern democracy and the newer forms of organization which are replacing the older governmental machinery. In particular, attention is given to the new fields into which government is extending its control, and the limitations in this respect imposed by the Constitution of the United States.

American Economic and Social Problems: Dr. M. P. Smith. One unit.

(Given in 1930-31)

(This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year courses in economics.)

The object of the course is to give advanced students training in the use of source material for economic and social studies and in the methods of research requisite for graduate or professional studies. A few introductory lectures trace the history of certain social and economic events in the United States from 1865 to the present time; but the main work of the course consists in studies made by the students and presented to the class for discussion. Among the subjects included are Changes in Urban and Rural Population, Development of City Life, Problems of Country Life, Immigration and Race Problems, Food Distribution and Marketing, Standards of Living, Newer Phases of the Unemployment Problem.

Municipal Institutions: Dr. Wells. One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

Elements of Law: Dr. Fenwick. One-half unit.

(Given in 1930-31)

(This course may be elected only by students who have completed the first course in politics or in economics or in history.)

The object of this course is to familiarize the student with the principles and technical terms of those branches of private law with which the ordinary citizen is brought into contact. The topics covered include Persons and Domestic Relations, Contracts, Torts, Real and Personal Property, and the chief forms of procedure. The lectures are supplemented by a study and discussion of court cases bearing on the subject.

1st Semester.

Experimental Psychology; One and one-half units.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Helson and Mr. Newman.

The lectures take up certain topics in systematic psychology. The historical, critical and theoretical features of the subjects covered are discussed and the experimental features demonstrated. Special stress is laid on the comparative study of methods. The laboratory work consists of individual practice in selected topics. This course may be taken as a free elective with a credit of one-half unit by students who have completed the required course in psychology.

2nd Semester.

The Psychology of Action, Including Instinct, Emotion and Animal Behaviour: Dr. Leuba.

The analysis of learning and of behaviour in man and animals is of special interest to students of education. This course may be taken as a free elective with a credit of one-half unit by students who have completed the required course in psychology.

Elementary Ethics: Mr. Nahm.Philosophical Problems: Dr. Grace de Laguna.One unit.*

Elementary Ethics is given during the first semester: The classical theories of the subject, such as Stoicism and Epicureanism, are briefly treated, emphasis being laid less upon the abstract issues involved than upon the rival "ways of life." The modern evolutionary theory of morals is studied at greater length.

Philosophical Problems is given during the second semester. This is primarily a discussion-course. The student is introduced to certain of the classic philosophical problems and typical solutions which are offered for them. The problems selected for discussion are those which are living issues, and an attempt is made to show their bearing on scientific and social movements of the present time. For example, the problem of free-will and determination is considered in its bearing upon the question of social responsibility and the punishment of criminals; the problem of the nature of mind and its connection with the body is related to the recent psychological controversy over behaviorism.

Elementary Aesthetics: Mr. Nahm.One-half unit.

The subject is approached primarily from the anthropological side. The origins of art and its relations to other forms of culture, especially magic, religion, industry, and war, are studied, as well as the development and diffusion of æsthetic standards. Briefer consideration is given to the psychological phenomena involved in æsthetic appreciation.

1st Semester:Social Psychology: The Psychology of Group Life and of Some Social Institutions: Dr. Leuba.One and one-half units.

This course is open to students who have taken the course in Psychology of Action. Experimental Psychology is not a prerequisite. If taken in combination with Psychology of Action the credit is one and one-half units.

*2nd Semester:Mental Tests and Measurements;*Laboratory Work: Dr. Rogers.

This course provides a foundation for the theory and practice of mental tests and the measurement of school achievements. It prepares the student for more specialized work in the application of tests to education, vocational guidance, business, etc. The laboratory work includes practice in giving tests of general intelligence, of special abilities (mechanical, intellectual, artistic, etc.), and of achievements.

This course is open to students who have taken the second year course in Experimental Psychology. If taken in combination with the course in Experimental Psychology the credit is one and one-half units.

These semesters may be elected separately each with a credit of one-half unit.

Child Psychology: Dr. Forest.One unit.

This course deals with the psychological aspect of child development. A study is made of the mental and emotional characteristics of growing children, with special reference to the problems of training and guidance arising at various age levels.

Principles of Education: Dr. Forest.One unit.

This course treats of the principles basic to educational procedure. The origin and significance of present controversies in education is presented during the first semester through a study of the rise and development of educational institutions. During the second semester special emphasis is placed upon the philosophy and the practice of modern progressive schools.

BRYN MAWR COLLEGE

BRYN MAWR COLLEGE was founded by Dr. Joseph Taylor of Burlington, New Jersey. During his life time the site of the college at Bryn Mawr, five miles west of Philadelphia, was purchased and the buildings were begun. At his death in January, 1880, he left the greater part of his estate for the foundation and maintenance of an institution of higher education for women. In 1880 the college was incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania and was invested with the power to confer degrees; in 1883 the trustees issued a circular of information; in 1884 a President, Dr. James E. Rhoads, and a Dean of Faculty, Miss M. Carey Thomas, were elected, plans were matured, and academic appointments were made. In the spring of 1885 the first catalogue was issued and in the autumn of the same year the college began its first academic year.

On the death of President Rhoads in 1893, Dean Thomas was elected to the presidency, which office she held until she reached the age of retirement in 1922. President Marion Edwards Park was elected to the presidency in 1922.

Bryn Mawr College has believed always in the value of small classes and limits the total enrollment of undergraduates to about four hundred, and resident graduates to less than one hundred. From the first it has been the policy of the trustees to organize no department in which they could not provide for graduate as well as undergraduate study offered by the same faculty.

Bryn Mawr College confers the degrees of Bachelor of Arts, Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy.

The departments of the college are:

Biblical Literature	History
Biology	History of Art
Chemistry	Italian
Classical Archaeology	Latin
Comparative Philology and Linguistics	Mathematics
Economics and Politics	Music
Education	Philosophy
English	Physics
French	Psychology
Geology	Social Economy
German	Spanish
Greek

THE UNDERGRADUATE SCHOOL

THE UNDERGRADUATE SCHOOL

The undergraduate school offers courses in ancient and modern languages and literature, the social sciences, philosophy and psychology, mathematics and the natural sciences, music, art and education. The full course of study covers four years and leads to the Bachelor of Arts degree.

1. Admission to Bryn Mawr College is based upon the candidate's record in the competitive entrance examinations and upon the evidence, secured by the College, in regard to her health, character and general ability. All candidates are asked to make an appointment, if possible, for a personal interview with the President or the Dean. If the number qualifying for admission in a given year is greater than the number of rooms available for first-year students, the college reserves the right to determine which of the candidates shall form the admitted group.

*Admission of Under-
Students*

2. All candidates must pass without qualification certain of the matriculation examinations conducted by the College Entrance Examination Board in accordance with the Board's Plan A. Plan B is not accepted.

*Admission
by Examination
Room
Application*

3. Application for rooms, accompanied by the fee of fifteen dollars payable to Bryn Mawr College, should be made as soon as the year of entrance is definitely known by the candidate. In case of doubt it is well to make application for two consecutive years by sending a fee of thirty dollars. The filing of a room application does not insure admission to the College.

4. Candidates for admission to Bryn Mawr College upon honourable dismissal from a college or university whose graduates are eligible for national membership in the American Association of University Women must present credits equal to the Bryn Mawr College requirements for matriculation. They must, moreover, present a certificate of honourable dismissal and an official statement that they have studied in regular college classes for one college year, that they have passed examinations covering at least one year of academic work in a regular college course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts, that they are in good standing in said College and that they would be able to take their degree there in due course. They must be re-examined, before graduation from Bryn Mawr College, on all work done elsewhere which they wish to submit as credit toward the Bryn Mawr degree.

*Honourable
Dismissal*

For some years, however, precedence in admission has been given to candidates who have taken the regular examination for matriculation.

Students of other colleges who have outstanding conditions or have otherwise failed to meet prescribed standards of academic work or have been put on probation, have been suspended or excluded, will under no circumstances be admitted to Bryn Mawr College. Such students may not cancel their college work elsewhere, offer the Bryn Mawr College requirements for matriculation and enter Bryn Mawr as Freshmen.

Students presenting certificates of honorable dismissal from any college or university not eligible for national membership in the American Association of University Women must take the regular examination for matriculation required by Bryn Mawr. Unless such students inform the Secretary and Registrar of the College at the time of filing their application for examination that they have studied at another college, they will not receive permanent credit.

Hearers

5. Women over twenty-five years of age are admitted as "hearers" without matriculation examination, but they must furnish proof that they have at some time pursued the studies required for matriculation. Hearers are clearly distinguished from regularly matriculated students and must obtain permission from each instructor to attend recitations, examinations and laboratory exercises; they must satisfy their various professors that they can profit by their elected courses. Hearers are not, strictly speaking, recognized by the college; they are not eligible for degrees, and may receive only such certificates of collegiate study as their various instructors see fit to give.

Matriculation Examinations

The subjects chosen by the College for matriculation examination are counted as 15 points. Candidates may take such examinations in one or in two "divisions." A division consists of one or more examinations taken in a single examination period. If two divisions are taken they must not be separated by more than one calendar year. Distribution of the required examinations between the two divisions is left to the convenience of the candidate.

Permanent Credit

"Permanent Credit" is given to candidates who, having offered for examination all the required subjects in one or two divisions, have received a grade of "Passed" (60 per cent or over) in at least 12 of the required 15 points. "Permanent Credit" enables candidates to remove conditions at any time before entering the College by passing the corresponding examinations given by the College Entrance Examination Board.

Candidates not receiving "Permanent Credit" after having offered all fifteen points are considered to have cancelled the first division and therefore must be examined again in all of the points of the cancelled division.

The autumn examinations of the College Entrance Examination Board are held at Bryn Mawr College beginning on the third Monday of September solely for the purpose of removing conditions. Application for these examinations, accompanied by a fee of five dollars for each condition examination, must be made to the Secretary and Registrar of the College before September 1.

APPLICATION FOR COLLEGE ENTRANCE BOARD EXAMINATIONS

*Examination of June 20-25, 1932Application for College Entrance
Board
Examinations*

Application blanks for the examinations should be obtained from the Secretary of the College Entrance Examination Board, 431 West 117th Street, New York City, N. Y.

A standard fee of ten dollars, remitted by postal order, express order, or draft on New York, should accompany each application.

In order to facilitate the holding of examinations in the various centers, all applications should be filed at the earliest possible date. Applications for examination must reach the Secretary of the Board:

For examination east of or on the Mississippi River: on or before Monday, May 30, 1932. For examination elsewhere in the United States or Canada: on or before Monday, May 23, 1932.

For examination outside the United States and Canada except Asia: on or before Monday, May 9, 1932.

For examination in China or elsewhere in the Orient: on or before Monday, April 25, 1932.

If a candidate fails to obtain the regular application blank, the usual examination fee arriving before the specified date will be accepted provided that it is accompanied by a memorandum containing the name and address of the candidate, the exact examination center selected and a complete list of the subjects in which she expects to be examined.

Applications for examination received later than the dates specified will be accepted when it is possible to arrange for the examination of the candidate, but only upon the payment of an additional fee of five dollars.

The designation of the center to which the candidate will go for examination is regarded as an essential part of her application. Requests that examinations be held at particular points should be sent to the Secretary of the Board not later than February 1. A list of examination centers will be published about March 1.

Candidates should report for a morning examination at 8.45 and for an afternoon examination at 1.45, Standard or Daylight Saving Time, according to the usage in the local schools. Under no circumstances will a candidate be admitted to the Scholastic Aptitude Test later than 9.00 A. M.

Detailed definitions of the requirements in all examination subjects are given in a circular of information published by the College Entrance Board annually about December 1. Every candidate is advised to become familiar with these requirements. Upon request a single copy will be sent to any teacher free of charge; in general a charge of twenty-five cents, which may be remitted in postage, will be made.

Candidates wishing to enter Bryn Mawr must state their intention on their application for examination to the College Entrance Board. Since the College recognizes only examinations definitely offered in a first or second division, those who take the examination for practice purposes only, before the regular first and second divisions, are asked not to state to the College Entrance Board their intention to enter Bryn Mawr College. When application for examination in a regular first or second division is made the section of the application blank (School recommendation—Form E), should be sent promptly to the Secretary and Registrar of the College so that any necessary correction may be made. All candidates for admission to Bryn Mawr College, on receipt of their reports of examination from the College Entrance Examination Board, must forward them to the Secretary and Registrar; failing the receipt of the report from the candidate herself the College will take no action upon her application for admission.

EXAMINATIONS FOR ADVANCED STANDING

Candidates who wish to enter the college with advanced standing may, in addition to the fifteen points required for matriculation, offer the following subjects: the First Year Course in Latin, counting as one unit; Trigonometry and Solid Geometry, counting as one-half unit; elementary Greek, counting as one and one-half units, or French or German, counting as one unit each, provided it was not included in the fifteen points required for matriculation.

*Advanced
Standing*

The first year course in Latin may be offered for examination by candidates for matriculation who desire to enter the College with advanced standing and, at their discretion, by matriculated students without attendance on the college classes provided it is offered not later than the beginning of the student's junior year. The credit for the course will be one unit.

The following is the list of reading on which the examination will be based:

Plautus, Mostellaria; Livy, Book I; Catullus, Select Poems (all the poems in F. P. Simpson's Select Poems of Catullus, Macmillan, New York); Horace, Odes I, except 13, 15, 25, 28, 33, 36; II, except 2, 4, 5, 8, 12, 15; III, except 6, 10, 11, 15, 16, 19, 20, 24, 27; IV, except 4-6, 10-13; Carmen Saeculare; Epodes 2 and 16 only (Shorey-Laing edition of Horace's Odes and Epodes, B. H. Sanborn); Vergil, the Eclogues; Reading of the chapters on Plautus, Livy, Horace, Vergil in Duff's Literary History of Rome.

The examinations in Latin, Trigonometry and Solid Geometry are held in the first three weeks of the college year and may be taken by a student in her freshman, sophomore or junior year. Examinations in Elementary Greek, French or German may be taken in the College Entrance Examinations in the spring or, by special arrangement with the Secretary and Registrar, in the autumn. They may not be offered later than the autumn of the junior year.

† The Teacher's Laboratory Certificate, furnished to the candidate by the College Entrance Examination Board, should be forwarded to the office of the Secretary and Registrar not later than the day for which the science examination is scheduled. Laboratory notebooks should not be submitted to the College.

‡ The College strongly urges that ancient history be offered as the requirement for entrance in history. Knowledge of the civilization of the ancient world is essential both for an appreciation of the Greek and Latin literature as studied in preparatory school and college and for the introductory course in college history, which begins with the downfall of the Roman Empire.

In case the curriculum of the school in which the candidate has received her preparation makes it difficult for the candidate to offer ancient history, American history may be offered instead. If this alternative is adopted and, if the candidate should in college wish to enter the course in minor history, she will be expected to give evidence of familiarity with ancient history. Such evidence should be either a certificate from her preparatory school that she completed within reasonable time before entering college an adequate course in ancient history and attained in it a satisfactory grade or that she has done suitable private reading in the subject. The private reading will be tested by a brief oral examination.

§ If Greek and Latin are chosen under the heading "Ancient Language," French or German must be offered. Attention is called to the advantage of offering Greek or German as an extra subject for advanced standing.

Students who have passed examinations for advanced standing are credited with the equivalent number of units of college courses and are so enabled to enter at once the more advanced courses to which these are preliminary; they thus secure a larger choice of elective courses or may, at some time in their college course, with the consent of the Dean, substitute this credit for that obtained by attendance at college classes. Students may also secure credit for elective courses in Modern Languages by passing certain examinations in French, German, Italian and Spanish which may be taken only in the first three weeks after entering the College. In no case, however, is it possible by passing examinations for advanced standing to shorten the required four years of study necessary for the bachelor's degree.

GENERAL REGULATIONS

Residence in the college buildings is required of all undergraduate students except those who live with their families in Philadelphia or the vicinity. Residence

Every student enrolled is required to register with the Comptroller. Freshmen and graduate students are required to register also with the Secretary and Registrar. This registration must be completed before 8.45 A.M. on the first day of lectures. The Dean of the College is academic advisor to all undergraduate students and every undergraduate student consults the Dean of the College in regard to the planning of her academic work and registers her chosen courses with the Dean of the College before entering upon college work. Registration

The members of the entering class are asked to come into residence four days before the college is opened to returning students. They are received by the Wardens of the various halls and a Reception Committee of upper classmen. Appointments with the President of the College, who wishes to interview all new students, should be made promptly at the office of the Secretary and Registrar and appointments with the Dean should also be made. These interviews with the President and the Dean begin immediately and registration of courses is concluded before the college year officially opens. The new students are made familiar with the intricacies of the library, take their tests, their medical and physical examinations and become at home in the college before the stress of the first days of academic work. Freshman Week

The Student's Association for Self-Government, organized in 1892, controls the conduct of the students in all matters except those which are purely academic or which affect the living arrangements of the student body. All undergraduate students of Bryn Mawr College are members of this association. Conduct

The college reserves the right to exclude at any time students whose conduct or academic standing it regards as undesirable; in such cases the fees due or already paid to the college will be neither refunded nor remitted in whole or in part. College Regulations

In case of emergency the college assumes the right to take all responsibility.

Regular attendance at classes is expected of all undergraduates; an unreasonable number of unexcused absences will be penalized. Attendance

The absolute integrity of all work is demanded of every student. No student shall give or receive any assistance in an examination or written quiz or hold any communication with another student. The rules governing written work are published for each freshman and are publicly announced at the beginning of each semester and before each examination period. Any infraction of the rules, regardless of motive, or any action contrary to their spirit, constitutes an offense. Examination Regulations

Schedule

While the required studies leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts are not prescribed for any special year in the college course, students are advised to plan their work carefully with reference to the lecture schedule so that a conflict of hours will not prevent them from electing the advanced courses they wish. Students electing a scientific group, such as chemistry and biology, should arrange their work to avoid possible conflict in laboratory hours.

REQUIREMENTS FOR DEGREE OF BACHELOR OF ARTS

The full course of undergraduate study leads to the degree of Bachelor of Arts. The basis of credit is the "unit," which represents one-quarter of the student's time for one year, or approximately ten hours of work a week, including class meetings.

Degree of Bachelor of Arts

Every candidate for the degree of Bachelor of Arts must have attended college classes in Bryn Mawr College for a period of four years;* must have passed examinations on work amounting to fifteen units and must have obtained a grade of 70 or above on half of these fifteen units. In her major subject she must receive grades of 70 or above in all her courses for the first two years.† She must have a reading knowledge of French and German and must also have fulfilled the requirements of the department of Physical Education.

STUDIES LEADING TO THE DEGREE OF BACHELOR OF ARTS

The following course of study must be pursued by every candidate for the degree of Bachelor of Arts:

English Composition, one unit. In connection with this course students are required to attend a course in English diction, one-half hour a week throughout the year.

*Required
Studies*

Science, one unit.§

Greek, Latin, or English Literature, one unit.‡

Philosophy, one unit.

Major Subject with Allied Subjects, six and one-half units. All students must take at least three and one-half units in the major subject: one unit in the first year, one and one-half or two units in the second year and one unit in advanced work. This represents the minimum work in the major subject. Most students are urged to take more than one unit of advanced work and students who, in the opinion of the department, show special promise will be recommended for honours work.

*Major
Courses*

Free Elective Courses, four and one-half units, to be chosen by the student. The only limitation is that imposed by the prerequisites of the courses selected and any courses open to the individual student as free

*Free
Elective
Courses*

* By permission of the Curriculum Committee of the Faculty, work done at some other college of high standing may in special cases be submitted for one of the four years of required attendance at classes. See pages 33 and 34.

† A student who has received grades of 80 or above in a part of this work and grades below 70 in a corresponding part will be regarded as having met this condition.

§ A student majoring in Science must substitute for the science requirement a unit of Psychology, or Economics, or Politics, or History, or History of Art or Archaeology.

‡ A student majoring in Greek must offer for the third unit of required work either First Year Latin or First Year English. A student majoring in Latin must offer First Year Greek or Elementary Greek or First Year English. A student majoring in English must offer First Year Greek or Elementary Greek or First Year Latin.

 A student majoring in Philosophy must offer a unit of Psychology for the fourth unit of required work.

electives may be taken without the remainder of the courses of which they may form a part.

Visitors

Students who wish to attend a course regularly without being formally registered must obtain permission from the Dean. The Dean is expected to limit the number of courses a student may visit and any instructor may notify the Dean that his courses are not open to such students.

Physical Education and Hygiene

All students are required to take part in work organized by the department of Physical Education during their first two years in college. Students who do not satisfactorily meet the requirements of the department must continue this work during the later years of their college course.

A course in Hygiene of one hour a week for one year is required of all students in their second year of college but does not count as a part of the fifteen units.

Reading Knowledge of French and German

A Reading Knowledge of French and German is required of all students. The language which the student offers at entrance is known as the First Foreign Language and the other as the Second Foreign Language. The First Foreign Language must be offered for examination in the autumn or spring of the junior year. Students failing to pass must present themselves for re-examination on the first or second Saturday of their senior year. Any student who at that time receives a grade below 50 will be prevented from receiving her degree at the end of her senior year. She will not be allowed to present herself for a third examination before the autumn of the following year, but may present herself for any subsequent examination. Any student receiving a grade between 50 and 60 must register for work under the direction of the department. She may then take a third examination in the spring of her senior year. The Second Foreign Language may be taken in any autumn or spring after entrance up to the end of the junior year. A student who receives a grade below 60 may not offer herself for re-examination until the following autumn. Examinations in the Second Foreign Language for those students who have not fulfilled the requirement by the end of their junior year are the same as for the First Foreign Language.*

Extra-curriculum Courses

Extra-curriculum supervised reading in French and in German, conducted by regular members of the respective departments without charge to the students, may be taken if desired by students in either French or German.

Tabular Statement of Required Studies

The studies required for a degree may be tabulated as follows:

1	2	3	4	5	6
English Composition.	Science: Physics or Chemistry, Geology, or Biology.	Greek, Latin, or English Literature.	Philosophy. One unit	Major and Allied Subjects. Six and one-half units	Elective Courses. Four and one-half units
One unit	One unit	One unit

* A student who offers Latin and Greek at entrance may count both French and German as Second Foreign Language.

In order to give more time for advanced studies and to lighten the college course, students are permitted to take examinations in certain subjects included in the course without attending the college classes in these subjects. Trigonometry, solid geometry and elementary Greek, French, German, Italian or Spanish, and first year Latin may be taken in this way if offered not later than the beginning of the junior year. A student who can furnish proof that she has acquired advanced knowledge of French or German is permitted to take examinations for advanced standing in reading and composition in these languages, but only in the first three weeks after entering college.

Advanced Standing

Students not wishing to study for a degree are permitted to elect any of the undergraduate studies for which they have been fitted by previous training. If at any time a degree should be desired, such students will be given full credit for all courses leading to the degree.

Numerical grades on the basis of 100 are given on all work which is to be counted for the A. B. degree. The A. B. degree is awarded cum laude, magna cum laude, or summa cum laude to students whose numerical average is 80-85, 85-90, or 90 or over, respectively. The degree with distinction in the subject is given to students who have satisfactorily completed the honours work in a given department.

Scholarship Grades

CURRICULUM

There are offered each year to undergraduates major courses in the following subjects: Biology, Chemistry, Classical Archaeology, Economics and Politics, English, French, Geology, German, Greek, History of Art, Italian, Latin, Mathematics, Modern History, Philosophy, Physics, Psychology and Spanish and elective courses in the above and in Biblical Literature, Social Economy, Education and Music.

Major Courses

In each fully organized department there is the following course: one unit of first year work, one and one-half or two units of second year work and advanced work according to the needs of the department. Every candidate for a degree is required to take three years of work in her major subject and at least two units of allied subjects. The object of this system is to enable the student to acquire the foundations of a specialist's knowledge and the required courses, namely, English, Philosophy, Literature and Science are intended to insure a more liberal training than could be obtained if every student combined elective studies without restriction.

Required Courses

The required course in English Composition is designed primarily to teach students in their first year in college how to express themselves clearly and correctly. A special effort is made to train them to use a variety of reading matter and to gather and present the material for reports and papers in preparation for their more advanced work in their major subject. The required course in Literature gives to each student a broader view of one field of literature with which she has already gained familiarity in her school work and thus serves as a background for further work in literature in college. The required course in Science gives, for one year at least, to the student of history and literature the same kind of instruction and discipline as is received by the scientific student. The course in Philosophy forms a general introduction to the study of ideas and the history of thought.

Free Elective Courses

All first-year courses may be elected by any student and special free elective courses of one unit and one-half unit are offered in many departments.

Advanced Courses

Advanced courses are open only to students who have completed the first and second-year major work in the subject.

Honours

Honours work at Bryn Mawr College has been organized by departments individually and the arrangements for it are described in detail under those departments. It is, by definition, work of a more advanced character than that done in the regular courses, requiring greater initiative and power of organization on the part of the student than is usually the case in undergraduate work. A broad background in the subject is assumed before the student starts on honours work and in many departments students are expected to devote part of their time to preparation for a comprehensive examination to test their knowledge of the whole field. One or two long reports or papers giving to the student the opportunity to develop and test her powers in the selection and interpretation of source material are usually required.

Students planning to do honours work should wherever possible complete the first and second year courses in their major subjects by the end of their sophomore year. Only students who have shown outstanding ability in those courses will be admitted to honours work. Such students should also complete in their first two years in college the courses in allied subjects which are fundamental to the thorough understanding of the major subject. In some cases it may be advisable to carry on work in allied subjects for one year to the exclusion of the major subject, but in no case may a student be admitted to honours work unless she has completed all of the first and second year work in her major subject by the end of her junior year.

In the senior year honours students are expected to register for at least two units of work (one-half of their time) with the major department. A part of this time may be devoted to the lectures and reading of an advanced course, but at the discretion of the department honours students may be released from quizzes, reports, or examinations in connection with course work in order to devote more of their time to the special topics assigned them and in order to prepare for the honours examinations. Two units of work with the major department, to be undertaken after the completion of the first and second year courses in the major subject, represent a minimum requirement for honours students. It is expected that in most cases honours students will carry additional advanced or honours work either in the junior year or in the senior year.

Students who have successfully completed the honours work as outlined for them by the department will be awarded the A. B. degree with distinction in the subject.

COURSES OF STUDY

1931-32

Biblical Literature

PROFESSOR:

HENRY JOEL CADBURY, Ph.D.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department includes three units of free elective courses.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Free Elective Courses

The Literary History of the Bible: Dr. Cadbury. Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

A general course on the contents of the English Bible (including apocryphal writings) studied from the viewpoint of literary forms and origins and aiming to enable the student to recognize the influence of the Bible on art, literature and other aspects of civilization.

Rapid Reading in the Greek New Testament: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One-half unit

(Given in each year)

This course is open to students who have passed the matriculation examination in Greek or attended the elementary course in Greek. It is intended to give a knowledge of Biblical Greek and facility in reading. The course is varied so that it may be pursued through several semesters.

1st Semester.

The Religion of Israel: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

The course includes a survey of the development of religious ideas and practices among the Hebrews during the early monarchy, under the influence of the prophets and in the beginning of Judaism.

2nd Semester.

The Life and Teaching of Jesus: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

The course is a discussion of the principal problems presented by the gospels for a recovery of an understanding of the career and character of Jesus of Nazareth.

These courses may be elected separately each with one-half unit of credit.

Elementary Hebrew: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given when requested)

GRADUATE WORK

Graduate work is offered in this department. Further information will be found in The Calendar of Graduate Courses.

Biology

PROFESSOR:	DAVID HILT TENNENT, Ph.D.
ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR:	MARY SUMMERFIELD GARDINER, Ph.D.
ASSOCIATES:	*DOROTHEA EGLESTON SMITH, Ph.D. ERNEST WESLEY BLANCHARD, Ph.D.
INSTRUCTOR:	J. GORDON CARLSON, A.B.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department includes one unit of first year work and one and one-half units of second year work. Advanced work is offered in Embryology of the Vertebrates, Cytology, Biochemistry and Physiology, with a minimum of one unit of credit and a maximum of two units for each course. One unit is offered in the Biology of Bacteria and Protozoa and one-half unit in Theoretical Biology, to which students may be admitted after completion of the first year's course.

At the end of the second year of work a student may be recommended for Honours in Biology. Honours work may be done in Embryology, Cytology, Biochemistry or Physiology, and the satisfactory completion of at least two units of honours work entitles the student to receive her degree with Distinction in Biology.

The work of the first year course forms a general introduction to the subject through a broad comparative study of living things (general biology). In the second year the foundation of a more minute knowledge of animal morphology and physiology is laid. The third-year work is devoted to a study of more advanced subjects and to the practical investigation of simple problems. A knowledge of the elements of physics and chemistry is desirable for students entering any course in biology.

Allied Subjects:

Chemistry

Physics

Other subjects will be accepted in special cases.

FIRST YEAR

Credit: One unit

Lectures and Laboratory Work in General Biology.

Major
Course1st Semester.*

Lectures: Dr. Gardiner

Laboratory: Dr. Gardiner and Mr. Carlson.

2nd Semester.

Lectures: Dr. Tennent and Dr. Blanchard.

Laboratory: Dr. Tennent, Dr. Blanchard and Mr. Carlson.

The object of this course is to give the student clear conceptions of the fundamental principles of morphology and physiology and of the relations of the biological sciences to one another and to other branches of science. The laboratory practice is designed to enable the student, as far as possible, to examine for herself the facts discussed in the lectures, to encourage the habit of exact observation and to impart a knowledge of the methods of practical work.

* Granted leave of absence for the year 1931-32.

The general subject is treated in two courses which supplement each other and must be taken together. The work is designed not simply to teach the elements of zoölogy and botany, as commonly understood, but in addition to treat plants and animals with constant reference to one another, both as to structure and as to mode of action. Emphasis is therefore laid on the essential facts of comparative morphology and physiology (general biology) as illustrated by a thorough study of a few types, rather than on the minutiae of classification.

During the first semester, the student studies a number of animals and plants, so arranged as to form a natural progressive introduction to the general principles of biology. The student makes a detailed examination of unicellular organisms and from these proceeds gradually to the complex conditions of structure and function in higher animals and plants. During the second semester attention is given mainly to the biology of higher animals. Two-thirds of the semester is devoted to a study of the morphology and physiology of vertebrates; the remainder of the semester to a study of the embryology of the frog and in greater detail to that of the chick.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: One and one-half units

Lectures and Laboratory Work in Invertebrate Zoölogy and Vertebrate Anatomy and Physiology.

1st Semester.

Lectures on Zoölogy of Invertebrates: Mr. Carlson.

Laboratory Work: Mr. Carlson.

This course extends the work of the first year so as to include a survey of the morphology and taxonomy of the main groups of invertebrate animals.

2nd Semester.

Lectures on Elementary Physiology: Dr. Gardiner.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Gardiner and Mr. Carlson.

The aim of this course is to present the facts of animal physiology. Digestion, respiration, circulation, nervous and muscular activity are studied from the point of view of the processes themselves rather than that of the physical and chemical principles underlying them. The laboratory time is devoted to a study of the anatomy of the cat, both from dissection and from histological preparations and, very briefly, to methods and practice of physiological experimentation, especially of muscle and nerve. A previous knowledge of chemistry is not required.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Advanced Courses

The advanced courses are designed to extend the work of the first two years and to offer the student the opportunity for specialization in chosen fields. By special arrangement any of the advanced courses may be extended to one and one-half or two units of credit.

Embryology of Vertebrates: Dr. Tennent.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

This course consists of lectures, assigned reading and laboratory work on the embryology of vertebrates. The lectures deal with the development of specific forms and with theoretical questions of embryological interest. The department has material for the study of the development of Amphioxus, Ascidian, Amia, Lepidosteus, Squalus, Ctenolabrus, Necturus, Rana, Chrysemys, Chick and Pig. At least six hours of laboratory work are required.

The course is divided as follows: Early stages of Development is the subject of the first semester and Organogeny is the subject of the second semester.

Cytology: Dr. Tennent.Credit: One unit.(Given in 1932-33)

This course consists of a study of the structure of protoplasm, the structure of the cell, the phenomena of cell division, maturation and fertilization. Both plant and animal cells are studied and instruction is given in methods of preparing cytological material for microscopical examination. At least six hours of laboratory work are required.

Biochemistry: Dr. Blanchard.Credit: One unit.(Given in 1931-32)

This course deals with the simpler aspects of the chemistry of living organisms. The properties and reactions of the substances of biological importance are studied. Under ordinary circumstances it is expected that a student will have had organic chemistry. There are two lectures and six hours of laboratory work per week.

Advanced Physiology: Dr. Blanchard.Credit: One unit.(Given in 1932-33)

A study of the vital functions of living organisms from the chemical and physical as well as from the biological standpoint. During the second semester the stress is placed upon mammalian physiology. The laboratory work is planned to develop a knowledge of the technique of physiological experimentation as well as to present the facts in a form in which they may be easily grasped by the student. It is expected, except in special instances, that the student will have had the equivalent of two years of chemistry. There are two hours of lecture and a minimum of six hours of laboratory work per week. Students may, with the permission of the instructor, perform a certain amount of independent investigation.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSETheoretical Biology: Dr. Tennent.Credit: One-half unit.(Given in 1931-32)Free
Elective
Course*

This course deals with the development of theories of biology. It is open to students who have completed the first year course in biology. It will not be given for less than five students.

HONOURS WORK

Honours work in any of the advanced fields is offered to qualified students.

*HonoursGRADUATE WORK

Graduate work is offered in this department. Seminars are arranged in a three-year cycle. Further information will be found in The Calendar of Graduate Courses.

ChemistryPROFESSOR:

ASSOCIATE:

NELSON KELLOGG RICHTMYER, Ph.D.

INSTRUCTOR:

EDITH HAMILTON LANMAN, M.A.

DEMONSTRATOR:

LOUISE FROST HODGES CRENSHAW, A.B.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department covers five and one-half units of work; it includes two and one-half units of undergraduate first and second year work and three units of advanced courses and honours work open only to graduates and to undergraduates who have completed the major course in chemistry.

The first year's work is a general introduction to the subject. Lectures are given in inorganic chemistry and qualitative analysis.

In the second year the lectures are on physical and organic chemistry.

The advanced undergraduate courses are intended to prepare students for independent work, particular attention being paid to laboratory methods.

Allied Subjects:

Biology
Geology
Mathematics
Physics

FIRST YEAR

Credit: One unit

*Major
Course*

1st Semester.

Introduction to General Chemistry: Dr. Crenshaw.

Laboratory Work: Miss Lanman and Mrs. Crenshaw.

The course does not presuppose any knowledge of chemistry. In the class-room the nature of chemical action is taught by lectures that are illustrated by a series of experiments in which the more important substances are made and transformed, the time being spent largely on the non-metals. Throughout the semester the lectures and the laboratory work are complementary.

2nd Semester.

The Chemistry of the Metals: Dr. Richtmyer.

Laboratory Work: Miss Lanman and Mrs. Crenshaw.

This course deals with the properties of the more important metallic elements and their compounds. The methods of separation employed in the laboratory are discussed, and the fundamental principles upon which these methods of separation are based are emphasized. The lectures are supplemented by required private reading.

The laboratory work consists of qualitative analyses. The students are first taught to identify the basic and acidic constituents of solutions; later they are required to carry out analyses of a few alloys and salts.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: One and one-half units

1st Semester.

Organic Chemistry: Dr. Richtmyer.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Richtmyer.

The methods of preparation and the behaviour of the various classes of organic compounds are studied. Emphasis is laid on the processes of reasoning by which the constitution of organic compounds is established.

The laboratory work is devoted to organic preparations. Simple representatives of the more important classes of organic compounds are first prepared and their typical reactions studied. After a familiarity with the methods of dealing with organic substances has been gained, syntheses of a few of the more complex organic compounds are carried out.

2nd Semester.

Lectures on Elementary Physical Chemistry: Dr. Crenshaw.

Laboratory Work: Miss Lanman.

In this course chemical facts are considered from the point of view of common and exact relations and from these relations the laws and theories of chemistry are developed. Special attention is paid to the atomic theory, the laws of gases, the theory of solutions and electro-chemistry. Private reading and outside preparation amounting to at least three and a half hours are required.

The laboratory work consists of quantitative analyses. Each exercise is important in itself and illustrates some principle or involves some manipulation of general application in analytical work.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to select some of these courses.

*Advanced
Courses*

Physical Chemistry: Dr. Crenshaw.

Credit: One and one-half units.

(Given in each year)

The aim of the lectures is to extend the student's knowledge of physical chemistry and to lay a foundation for independent work in this subject. The lectures are supplemented by assigned reading and reports and are intended to give a general outline of the subject. The solution of a large number of problems is required.

The laboratory work is designed to prepare the students for physio-chemical research. By special arrangement this course may count for more than one and one-half units of credit.

Advanced Organic Chemistry: Dr. Richtmyer.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

The course consists of lectures and assigned reading with occasional reports and laboratory work. During the past year the following subjects received particular emphasis: quaternary ammonium compounds, simple types of unsaturation, the ketenes, conjugated systems, non-benzenoid cyclic hydrocarbons, the properties of aromatic compounds, heterocyclic systems, the carbohydrates, stereochemistry. The laboratory work includes a study of the more important synthetical reactions of organic chemistry.

By special arrangement this course may count for more than one unit of credit.

Inorganic Chemistry: Miss Lanman.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

Selected topics in inorganic chemistry are discussed in detail, and parallel reading is required. The laboratory work consists of advanced quantitative analyses. By special arrangement this course may count for more than one unit of credit.

HONOURS WORK

Students specially recommended by the department may register for honours work in any one of the three advanced courses. A minimum of one and one-half units of work must be taken in the particular advanced course chosen.

Undergraduate courses of three and one-half units are offered affording an introduction to the various branches of classical archæology. They are fully illustrated with lantern slides and photographs are available for review and comparison.

Allied Subjects:

Ancient History

Greek

History of Art

Latin

FIRST YEAR

*Credit: One unitMajor
Course1st Semester.*

Greek Sculpture: Dr. Swindler.

A critical study of the rise, perfection and ultimate developments of sculpture in Greece. The course is intended as a general introduction to the principles and appreciation of sculpture.

2nd Semester.

Ancient Painting: Dr. Swindler.

The course traces the development of ancient painting. The material studied includes Egyptian and Cretan frescoes, Greek vases, Pompeian wall paintings and the paintings from Etruscan sites.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: One and one-half units

Ancient Architecture: Dr. Müller.

Credit: One unit.

The introductory lectures deal with Egyptian, Babylonian, Assyrian, Persian and Ægean building. The remainder of the semester is devoted to a detailed study of the principles and practice of Greek architecture until late Hellenistic times. Emphasis is laid on architectural evolution and its connection with the civilization of the period.

During the second semester the Architecture of Rome and the Roman Empire down to the late Imperial times are studied.

Ancient Athens and Ancient Rome: Dr. Swindler and Dr. Müller.

Credit: One-half unit.

During the first semester the monuments and the life of ancient Athens and other Greek towns are studied. During the second semester the course deals with the art and material civilization of Rome through Republican and Imperial times. The work begins with a study of Etruscan civilization. The course is intended as an introduction to Roman art, especially sculpture and painting.

* Granted leave of absence to fill the post of Director of the American School of Classical Studies in Athens.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSE

1st Semester.

Egyptian and Mesopotamian Archæology: Dr. Müller.

Credit: One-half unit.(Given in each year)

A study of the arts of Egypt, Mesopotamia, Persia and the smaller intermediate cultures of Eastern Asia Minor, Syria (Hittite art), Phœnicia and Palestine. Architecture, sculpture, relief work and minor arts are dealt with, their principles and evolution from prehistoric times until the end of the ancient world.

Advanced Course

2nd Semester.

Ægean Archæology, Crete, Mycenæ and the Islands from 3000 to 1100 B. C.: Dr. Swindler.

HONOURS WORK

Honours work is offered by the department for students who have completed two years of work in the department with distinction.

Honours

The work is conducted by means of reports, reading assigned in various fields and discussion of topics.

1st Semester.

Greek Vase-Painting: Dr. Swindler.

Credit: One unit.

In 1931-32 the work deals with Greek Vases. Various styles and masters are studied and some of the problems connected with Greek Vases, such as Kalos names, Etruscan trade relations and their significance and the importance of Greek Vases for certain aspects of Greek life, e.g. of the vases dealing with the theatre and with religious subjects.

2nd Semester.

Archaic Greek Sculpture: Dr. Müller.

Credit: One unit.

The course starts with the beginning of Greek sculpture (1000 B. C.), its relation to the earlier art in Greece itself and the oriental influence, then follows the constitution of the specific Greek style and its evolution in the various centers until the end of the archaic period.

Economics and Politics

PROFESSORS:

MARION PARRIS SMITH, Ph.D.

CHARLES GHEQUIERE FENWICK, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR:

ROGER HEWES WELLS, Ph.D.

LECTURER:

ELEANOR LANSING DULLES, Ph.D.

READER:

MARY BETTINA LINN, M.A.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department includes four units of first and second year work; one-half unit of free elective work and two or more units of advanced work. The object of the undergraduate courses in economics and politics is three-fold: first, to describe the development of economic and political institutions; second, to trace the history of economic and political thought and third, to consider the practical economic and political questions of the day. Instruction is given by lectures, individual and group conferences, assigned readings, oral and written quizzes, written reports and such special class-room exercises and field trips as the different subjects require.

Allied Subjects:

Psychology

FIRST YEAR

Credit: Two units

*Major
Course*

The Economic World: Dr. Wells and Miss Linn.

Credit: One unit.

(This course may be taken as a free elective.)

The object of the course is to familiarize students with the economic world in which they live. Among the topics studied are the following: Economic Geography and Natural Resources of the United States; Population and Immigration; Manufacturing; Labor Problems; Transportation; Marketing; Money and Banking; International Trade and Public Finance.

The course is not only intended as a foundation for the students who wish to specialize in economics, but also for the students whose interests lie in other fields and yet who desire a survey of the more important problems of economic life.

Modern Governments: Dr. Fenwick and Dr. Wells.

Credit: One unit.

(This course may be taken as a free elective.)

The course is designed to present the structure and functions of federal, state and municipal government in the United States, together with an examination of the party system and its effects upon the actual operations of government. It is followed by a comparative study of the leading European governments, chiefly those of Great Britain, France, and Germany.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: Two units

Economic Theory and Problems in the Nineteenth and Twentieth Centuries. Dr. M. P. Smith.

Credit: One unit.

(This course may be taken only by students who have completed the first year course in economics.)

The object of the course is to trace the history of western thought on such subjects as the just distribution of wealth, property and slavery, capital and usury, the wages of labor and value and price and to familiarize the students with modern economic theory. The latter part of the course is devoted to a study of selected problems of the modern economic world.

History of Political Thought and Present Political Problems: Dr. Fenwick and Dr. Wells.

Credit: One unit.

(This course may be taken only by students who have completed the first year course in politics.)

The first semester of the course is devoted to the history of western political thought and the writings of some of the more important political thinkers are studied in detail. During the second semester, the vital problems of modern government, both theoretical and practical, are examined. The course inquires into the authority of the state and the legal and moral basis upon which it rests. It analyzes the constitutional foundations of modern democracy and the newer forms of organization which are replacing the older governmental machinery. In particular, attention is given to the new fields into which government is extending its control and the limitations in this respect imposed by the Constitution of the United States.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate courses and graduate work. Since the amount of time given to undergraduate courses varies in different colleges, graduate students often find it advisable to elect some of these courses.

*Advanced
Courses*

American Economic and Social Problems: Dr. M. P. Smith.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

(This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year courses in economics.)

International Law: Dr. Fenwick.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1932-33)

(This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year courses in politics.)

The object of the course is to examine the existing rules of international law in order to determine their origin, their general observance and their applicability to the changed conditions of modern life. Special stress is laid upon the interpretation of international law by the United States and upon the organization and administration of the League of Nations.

American Constitutional Law: Dr. Fenwick.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1933-34)

(This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year courses in politics.)

This is a strictly legal course devoted to an analysis and criticism of the leading decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States. The method followed consists in the assignment of individual cases for oral report and discussion, together with longer written reports covering a group of related cases.

2nd Semester.

Money and Banking: Dr. Dulles.

Credit: One-half unit

(Given in 1931-32)

(The course is open only to students who have completed the first year courses in economics.)

Political Parties and Public Opinion: Dr. Wells.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

(This course is open to students who have completed the first and second year courses in politics.)

The course begins with a study of various theories as to the nature and functions of political parties. The organization, methods, finance and legal regulation of American and foreign parties are next examined. Attention is then devoted to the nature and rôle of public opinion in modern politics and to the various agencies through which such opinion is expressed.

Municipal Institutions: Dr. Wells.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1932-33)

FREE ELECTIVE COURSE

Elements of Law: Dr. Fenwick.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

(This course may be elected only by students who have completed the first year course in politics or in economics or in history.)

The object of this course is to familiarize the student with the principles and technical terms of those branches of private law with which the ordinary citizen is brought into contact. The topics covered include Persons and Domestic Relations, Contracts, Torts, Real and Personal Property and the chief forms of procedure. The lectures are supplemented by a study and discussion of court cases bearing on the subject.

Education

This Department is organized in part from the Phebe Anna Thorne Endowment

PROFESSOR: AGNES LOW ROGERS, Ph.D.
 ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR: ILSE FOREST, Ph.D.
 INSTRUCTOR: E. LOUISE HAMILTON, Ph.D.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department includes three and one-half units of free elective work.

The Department of Education maintains a clinic for the mental and educational examination of school children. It offers psychological service to the schools of the vicinity.

The clinic is housed in a building behind Cartref where rooms have been equipped for the individual examination of pupils and for remedial work with pupils. There is a laboratory for the statistical work involved in school service carried on by the department. In addition to intensive studies of individual children who are failing with school work, testing programs have been carried through in schools, and complete psychological service has been supplied to one large school. The clinic is prepared to extend this service to other schools. In the clinic there is a collection of tests for these purposes together with measurement devices of all types and it is equipped also with remedial materials.

Free
Elective
Courses

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Mental and Educational Measurement; Credit: One unit.
 Laboratory Work: Dr. Rogers.

(Given in each year)

A broad survey of the aims, methods and results of mental measurement in education at various levels.

Major Topics: significance of the testing movement. Available tests and scales, critical evaluation of tests; technique of administering tests, methods of scoring and interpreting results, use of results in classification of pupils and other problems.

It prepares the student for more specialized practical work in the application of tests in educational problems, vocational guidance, etc. This course is open to students who have taken the course in Mental Tests and Measurements or its equivalent. (See page 88.)

Child Psychology: Dr. Forest. Credit: One unit.
(Given in each year)

This course deals with the psychological aspect of child development. A study is made of the mental and emotional characteristics of growing children, with special reference to the problems of training and guidance arising at various age levels.

Principles of Education: Dr. Forest. Credit: One unit.
(Given in each year)

This course treats of the principles basic to educational procedure. The origin and significance of present controversies in education is presented during the first semester through a study of the rise and development of educational institutions. During the second semester special emphasis is placed upon the philosophy and the practice of modern progressive schools.

MARGARET DENT DAUDON, A.B.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department covers six units of lectures and recitations a week; it includes two and one-half units of undergraduate first and second year work; two and one-half units of advanced courses, open only to graduates and to undergraduates who have completed the major course in French and one unit of free elective. All the courses in French except the elective course and the seminars in Old French are conducted in the French language.

ADVANCED STANDING

An advanced standing examination in French, that is an examination taken without attendance on the college classes, may be taken by students in the first three weeks after entering the college. Students who are successful in this examination will receive credit for one-half unit of elective work in French and, if they enter the first year French course, will be allowed to substitute additional work in literature for the language work of that course.

UNDERGRADUATE STUDY IN FRANCE

Students who have chosen French as their major subject and who have at the end of their Sophomore year completed the major course, may by a joint recommendation of the Dean of the College and the Department of French be allowed to spend their Junior year in France according to the "Delaware Foreign Study Plan."

This plan provides for one year's supervised undergraduate study. The year is divided into two periods, a three-month preliminary period, from the last week in July to the last week in October and the regular French academic session of eight months, November 1 to June 30. The preliminary period is spent at the University of Nancy. The regular session is spent in Paris, at the University of Paris and the Ecole Libre des Sciences Politiques.

The list of subjects available includes literature, history, history of art and economics. The formal lecture system of the French universities is supplemented by tutorial system classes arranged for the Foreign Study group. Private lessons in composition and diction are given throughout the year.

The students live in French families where they speak the language and gain some knowledge of French life. They also have the advantage of a carefully arranged programme of "extra-curriculum activities," which includes operas and plays, as well as excursions in France and adjacent countries.

Only those students will be recommended who have shown a natural aptitude for the French language, have a high average in their college work and seem in the opinion of the Dean and the Department of French well qualified to represent the college.

Geology

ASSOCIATES:

EDWARD H. WATSON, Ph.D.

A. LINCOLN DRYDEN, JR., Ph.D.

DEMONSTRATORS:

DOROTHY WYCKOFF, M.A.

MARJORIE STARR BEST, A.B.

Undergraduate work in this department includes two and one-half units in first and second year work, three units of advanced work and two units of elective work open to students who have completed the first year course.

To major in geology an undergraduate must take a total of six and one-half units in geology and allied subjects. At least three and one-half units must be in the department of geology and include the following courses: general geology (one unit), introductory paleontology and determinative mineralogy (one and one-half units) and one unit of optional work in geology. One unit should be in either physics, chemistry, or biology.

Any student wishing to major in geology is advised to take the first year course not later than her sophomore year.

Allied Subjects:

Biology

Chemistry

Physics

FIRST YEAR

General Geology.

*Credit: One unitMajor
Course1st Semester.*

Physical Geology: Dr. Watson.

Field Work and Laboratory Work: Dr. Watson.

The lectures deal primarily with the processes that alter the form of the surface of the earth. The effects of the wind, rivers, glaciers, oceans, volcanoes and mountain building forces are considered. During October and November a field excursion is taken once a week to localities of geologic interest. These trips illustrate the composition, origin, folding and erosion of rock masses. In the laboratory, which is held during December and January on Monday and Tuesday afternoons from two to four, an elementary study of minerals, rocks and land forms as illustrated by topographic maps is undertaken.

2nd Semester.

Historical Geology: Dr. Dryden.

Field Work and Laboratory Work: Dr. Dryden.

The history of the earth and its inhabitants as read from the record of the rocks. Laboratory work includes a study of characteristic fossils and geological folios of the United States Geological Survey. In the spring field trips may be substituted for laboratory work.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: One and one-half units

1st Semester.

Introductory Paleontology: Dr. Dryden.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Dryden.

The lectures stress the morphology of the different groups of fossils, with particular emphasis on their biology and ecology. Applications to stratigraphic geology are considered throughout the course.

2nd Semester.

Determinative Mineralogy: Dr. Watson.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Watson.

A systematic study of minerals is made. The various tests are used: physical properties, crystallography, blow-pipe analysis and chemical tests. The various mineral groups are then studied: native elements, sulphides, silicates, etc. In the spring some field trips to near-by localities may replace laboratory work. (Students majoring in the Department of Chemistry may take this course without having had any of the first or second year geology courses.)

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Advanced Courses

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work.

Optical Mineralogy and Descriptive Petrography: Dr. Watson.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Watson.

Credit: One and one-half units.

(Given in each year)

Optical Mineralogy is given during the first semester. The course deals with the principles of optical mineralogy and a full training is given in the immersion method of mineral identification. This course is essential for all courses in petrography and petrology.

Descriptive Petrography is given during the second semester. The course deals with the mineralogy, texture, chemistry, origin, and geographic distribution of igneous rocks.

Prerequisites: general geology, determinative mineralogy and optical mineralogy.

Stratigraphy: Dr. Dryden:

Laboratory Work: Dr. Dryden.

Credit: One and one-half units.

(Given in each year)

The course is essentially a study of regional geology with particular emphasis on physiography and environment. Recent advances in stratigraphic research, particularly those in sedimentation, are stressed.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Free Elective Courses

The elective courses in the Department of Geology will be given as the occasion arises.

1st Semester.

Vertebrate Paleontology: Dr. Dryden.

Credit: One-half unit.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Dryden.

A study of the general biology and detailed osteology of the great groups of the vertebrate fossils. Evolutionary trends in several groups will be given special attention.

2nd Semester.

History of Geology: Dr. Dryden.

Credit: One-half unit.

A lecture and reading course designed to impart a knowledge of the contributions of the outstanding workers in geology and to follow the development of the major geologic theories.

1st Semester.

Crystallography: Dr. Watson.

Credit: One-half unit.

Geometrical, physical and chemical crystallography will be discussed in the classroom. In the laboratory the study and determination of crystal models are undertaken and direction given in crystal measurement with the two-circle goniometer, in crystal projection and crystal drawing.

2nd Semester.

Introductory Economic Geology: Dr. Watson.

Credit: One-half unit.

The occurrence and origin of metallic and non-metallic mineral deposits. Reading with formal reports will be made on certain specific deposits. Elementary geology, historical geology and determinative mineralogy are prerequisites to this course.

Elementary CoursesElementary German.Credit: One unit.*

A class for beginners, conducted in ten sections.

The purpose of this course is to lay the foundation for a reading knowledge of German. Students are expected to complete this reading knowledge before coming up for the general language examination in German, either by private reading during the summer or, during the following year, under the direction of the German Department in the extra-curriculum course in Supervised Reading.

Students of exceptional ability (85 or over) are given an opportunity to complete the development of their reading knowledge during the second semester of the course by devoting all their time to reading, meeting the instructor once a week for conference instead of attending classes.

Elementary German Reading.Credit: One-half unit.

The course is designed to develop the student's reading knowledge of German, preparatory to the German language examination.

Open to freshmen who have had two years of German in high school and to seniors who have failed to pass the general language examination. Seniors will not receive credit for this course.

Supervised German Reading.No credit.

The course is designed to develop the student's reading knowledge of German. A review of grammar and weekly reading assignments. Weekly conferences.

Open to students who have passed Elementary German.

MAJOR COURSEMajor Course

The major course in German is open to students who have passed the matriculation examination in this subject (Cp. 3) or the Bryn Mawr general reading examination in German or who have passed the course in Elementary German with the grade of 85 or over.

FIRST YEAR*Credit: One unitThe Age of Goethe: Dr. and Mrs. M. M. Diez.

The course includes lectures on the history of German Literature in the Classical and Romantic Periods; collateral reading of the principal works of Goethe, Lessing, Schiller, Kleist, Grillparzer and the Romanticists; intensive study in class of Goethe's shorter poems and Faust. There are exercises in German Composition with private conferences.

SECOND YEAR*Credit: One and one-half unitsGerman Literature: Dr. Diez.

The course includes lectures on the History of German Literature from the beginning to the present time. The first semester is devoted largely to the literature of the Hohenstaufen period, the second semester covers the period from Goethe's death to the present time.

Reading and Composition: Mrs. Jessen.

The course consists of studies in German Style and Composition, based on an intensive study of the Nibelungenlied and the history of the Nibelungen legend in the first semester; "Kulturkunde" and "Heimatkunst" in the second semester.

PROFESSORS:

HENRY NEVILL SANDERS, Ph.D.

WILMER CAVE WRIGHT, Ph.D.

INSTRUCTOR:

RUTH FAIRMAN, M.A.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department includes two and one-half units of first and second year work and two units of advanced undergraduate work open to graduates and to undergraduates who have completed the major course in Greek. Honours work is offered by this department. Elementary Course

An elementary course with credit of one and one-half units is provided for those students who wish to begin the study of Greek. Grammar and composition are studied. Xenophon's Anabasis and selections from Homer are read. This course is given by Miss Fairman under the direction of Dr. Wright. Either the elementary course in Greek or the first year course in Latin is required of all candidates for the degree of Bachelor of Arts who have not passed the matriculation examination in Greek.

The Greek courses may not be offered for examination for advanced standing without class attendance.

ASSOCIATE:

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department comprises nine and one-half units; it includes five units of undergraduate first and second year work in modern history and ancient history; one and one-half units of free elective and two units a week of advanced undergraduate courses, open only to graduates and undergraduates who have completed the major course in history and one unit of honours work.

Undergraduate instruction offered in history comprises a general course in the history of Europe followed by several somewhat specialized courses. The first is a prerequisite to any of the others except the courses in ancient history. Students not majoring in history may elect the general course and afterward any of the second year courses. Of the specialized courses two are devoted to civilization of the middle ages and the renaissance, two to continental Europe from the sixteenth to the nineteenth century, three to the history of England and the British Empire and two to the history of the United States. Somewhat more advanced is a course in Europe since 1870. Concurrent with these is study preparatory for honours.

Whether the courses are general or specialized an attempt is made to teach history as a record of the development of man in his political, economic and social relations. The courses are, therefore, supplementary to other college study of a linguistic, literary, archaeological or artistic nature. Lectures are supplemented by reading of a varied character with little use of summary texts. To develop the student's initiative and independence of judgment, emphasis is put, after the first year, on the preparation of reports and upon the discussion of subjects studied.

For students who have shown marked ability in the first two years of their historical study provision is made for honours work. At the end of the senior year a general examination in history is offered and the satisfactory passing of this examination will entitle the student to receive her degree with Distinction in History.

*Major
Course*

Mediaeval and Modern Europe: Dr. Gray, Dr. W. R. Smith, Dr. David and Dr. Robbins.

This course is designed not to give a summary view of European history but to select and enlarge upon such aspects of it as are essential to the understanding of the modern world. In consequence, more attention is devoted to the period beginning with the French Revolution than to the preceding centuries. Among the topics considered during the first semester are the ideal of a united Christendom as embodied in the Holy Roman Empire and the Catholic Church, the causes and effects of the Crusades, the rise of national states, the Reformation and the Counter Reformation, the maintenance of a European balance of power, the progress of colonization, the rise of Prussia and of Russia. During the second semester the political and social transformation of Europe which was initiated by the French Revolution is studied. The outcome of the Revolution, the career of Napoleon, the absolutist reaction of the early Nineteenth Century, the successive revolts against this, the formation of modern constitutional governments, the creation of the German Empire and the Kingdom of Italy, the extension of European influence to Asia and Africa, the causes and progress of the World War and the treatment of social problems of today are among the topics considered. The instruction is given by means of lectures, required reading and discussion.

SECOND YEAR

The second year work in history is arranged in semester courses and the credit for each is one-half unit. The student majoring in history must select as a minimum four of these semester courses and for them she will receive two units of credit.

1st Semester.

History of the Renaissance: Dr. Gray.

Credit: One-half unit.

An endeavor is made to indicate in what ways mediæval life and thought were transformed into those of modern Europe. Political, economic, literary, artistic and scientific changes, therefore, are studied. Since Italians were prominent in the new movements, most attention is given to Italian history, but the innovations of the North, especially those connected with the new Burgundian State, are not neglected. The period extends in a general way from 1250 to 1527.

History of England to 1485: Dr. David.

Credit: One-half unit.

This course deals with English history in all its more important aspects from earliest times to the establishment of the Tudor monarchy. The following topics are among those considered: the civilization and institutions of the Anglo-Saxon period, the Norman Conquest and the development of the Anglo-Norman empire, the feudal régime and the national state, English relations with the church, Magna Charta, the origin and growth of Parliament, the rise of the towns and commerce, the Hundred Years' War and the Wars of the Roses, the social, economic and religious aspects of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries.

Continental History from the Sixteenth to the Eighteenth Centuries: Dr. Robbins.

Credit: One-half unit.

This period provides opportunity for study of selected topics on the history of European institutions and cultural development in the Baroque Age. The influence of scientific discovery on thought and its relation to the religious, educational and economic controversies of the period: the part played by the Jesuits in contemporary politics: the growth of Spain and France: the decline of the Empire and the rise of Prussia: the spread of French culture in Germany: Italian society and politics during the "stagnant years": the reign of Solymán in Turkey: the duel of Russia under Peter and Catharine II with the Ottomans will be amongst the subjects read about and discussed in class.

As far as possible the course will supplement the narrative given in the first year history course and diplomatic history will, to a large extent, be omitted except in so far as it is necessary to explain changes on government, etc., under consideration.

American History to 1789: Dr. W. R. Smith.

Credit: One-half unit.

This course deals primarily with the English colonization of America, but some attention is also paid to the early history of Spanish, Portuguese, Dutch and French imperial expansion. The latter part of the semester is devoted to the American Revolution and the period of transition from 1783 to 1789.

2nd Semester.

Mediæval Civilization: Dr. David.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Not given in 1931-32)

Building upon the brief treatment of the first year course, this course is designed to give a broader and deeper knowledge of the Middle Ages through a study of selected topics, among which the following may be mentioned: the transformation of ancient culture and of Christianity in their transition from antiquity to the early Middle Ages, the effects of the Germanic invasions, the political, economic and social changes of the ninth and tenth centuries, the Carolingian revival of learning, Byzantine and Moslem civilizations and their influence upon the culture of western Europe, the Vikings and the Sagas, the revival of commerce and the rise of cities, the culmination of mediæval civilization in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries.

History of England since 1485: Dr. Robbins.

Credit: One-half unit.

Attention is given to the rise and character of Tudor and Stuart absolutism, parliamentary and local government, dynastic ambitions, foreign trade, the prosperity of the towns and the yeomen, the progress of the Reformation and the complications of the affairs arising from religious changes.

British Imperialism: Dr. W. R. Smith.

Credit: One-half unit.

This course deals with the external history of the English people: the sea-rovers of the Sixteenth Century; the beginnings of American colonization; the contrast between the old colonial system and the new; the history of Canada, Australasia, South Africa, India, Egypt and other colonies and dependencies; the new imperialism of Beaconsfield and Chamberlain; the present position of England as a world power.

History of the United States since 1789: Dr. W. R. Smith.Credit: One-half unit.

The aim of this course is to present the historical background necessary to enable students to discuss intelligently the more important social, industrial, political and diplomatic problems of the present day. The chief emphasis is placed upon the period since 1850.

The French Revolution and Napoleon: Dr. David. Credit: One-half unit.

This course treats of the history of France and of Europe from 1789 to 1815. Attention is paid to the broad background of the eighteenth century out of which the French Revolution developed, to the course of the Revolution itself and to the political, economic and social transformation of France and of Europe which resulted from it, to the rise of the military dictatorship under Napoleon and to the course of his long struggle with a hostile Europe, to the influence of Napoleon upon the institutions of France and Europe and finally to the situation created by his overthrow. It should be noted that this course is no longer conducted, as heretofore, as an advanced course. Instruction is by means of lectures, assigned readings and one written report.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSEAdvanced
Course

The advanced course is designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. Since the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect this course.

Europe since 1870: Dr. Gray.Credit: One unit.(Given in each year)

This course is designed for students who wish to know the genesis and setting of contemporary social and political problems. It is of necessity largely concerned with the causes, progress and effects of the World War. The rise of Germany as a unified industrial state, her rivalry with her neighbours, the consequent formation of alliances, the immediate antecedents of the war, the military and industrial conduct of it, the appearances of revolutionary governments in central and eastern Europe, the consequences of the peace of Versailles and the strong position of labour in post-bellum society are among the subjects studied. A reading knowledge of French is required.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSEFree
Elective
Course*Civilization of the Ancient World: Dr. Broughton.Credit: One unit.(Given in 1931-32)*

Special attention is paid to Greece and Rome; but consideration is also given to the subject of pre-history, to the early civilizations of western Asia, Egypt and the Aegean region and to the influence of environment, race and culture upon human development. The evolution of civilization as a whole, from earliest times to the Fourth Century A. D., is presented in a single synthesis.

(This course may be taken as a free elective and if elected must be continued throughout the year.)

HONOURS WORKHonours*Honours Work: Dr. Gray, Dr. W. R. Smith, Dr. David and Dr. Robbins.Credit: One unit.*

Students admitted to this work meet the instructor each week for the discussion of various topics in the general field of history. These are selected to coördinate their knowledge and to prepare them for the general honours examination to be taken at the end of their senior year. Each student also in each semester undertakes for herself independent historical investigation of a single topic under the immediate direction of the instructor.

History of Art

PROFESSOR:	GEORGIANA GODDARD KING, M.A.
ASSOCIATE:	EDWARD S. KING, M.F.A.
LECTURER:	EDWARD M. M. WARBURG, A.B.
INSTRUCTOR:	ELIZABETH H. NORTON, M.A.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department covers six and one-half units. It includes four and one-half units of undergraduate first and second year work and two units of advanced undergraduate work open to graduate students and to undergraduates who have completed the major course in history of art. Honours work is offered by the department.

All the courses are illustrated with lantern slides, a large collection of photographs is used in the course of study and the photographs are available for review and comparison.

The Art Club, a student organization, carried on under the auspices of the department, offers an extra-curriculum course in drawing and painting on Saturday mornings. The students work individually also during the week.

Italian Painting of the Renaissance from the Middle of the Thirteenth to the Middle of the Sixteenth Century: Miss King.

*Major
Course*

During the first semester the Italian primitives are studied, chiefly in the schools of Florence, Siena and Umbria; during the second semester the painters of the High Renaissance, with special attention to those of Venice and the north of Italy, ending with an introduction to Baroque. The course is illustrated with photographs and lantern slides.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: Two units

Painting since the Renaissance.

Credit: One unit.

1st Semester: Miss Norton.

Northern painting. The Flemish primitives and the great masters of Spain and the Low Countries in the Seventeenth Century are studied carefully; some acquaintance with the French and German primitives and with the art of the Eighteenth Century in France and England is also comprehended in the plan.

2nd Semester: Miss King.

Modern Painting. The course deals with the history of painting since 1800 and comes down to the present year. Students are expected to make trips to Philadelphia and the neighbourhood to study pictures as often as may seem necessary.

Mediaeval Architecture: Mr. King.Credit: One unit.(Given throughout the year)

During the first semester the various aspects of Early Christian architecture in the West, in Syria and Asia Minor, the rise of the Byzantine and the evolution of Romanesque architecture in France, Italy, Germany and Spain are studied.

The second semester, continuing the work of the first, carries the subject of mediaeval architecture to its conclusions. The goal is principally French Gothic of the Thirteenth Century but the developments in England and Germany are given relatively ample inquiry; those of Italy and Spain somewhat less. The course terminates with Flamboyant and the end of the middle ages.

Throughout the course the allied arts, such as mosaic, sculpture and stained glass, are studied in some detail. While concerned primarily with architecture the course affords an introduction to the study of mediaeval art generally.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSESAdvanced Courses*Spanish Primitives: Miss King.Credit: One unit.(Not given in 1931-32)*

The work begins with a consideration of the Mozarabic and proto-Mudéjar manuscripts and is occupied with the Catalan and Valencian primitives, their sources and their special qualities, for the greater part of the year. Castilian, Leonese and early Sevillian painting are taken into account and the study stops arbitrarily at 1500.

Spanish Architecture: Miss King.Credit: One unit.(Given in 1932-33)

This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year work in history of art, or an equivalent course. After the Visigothic, Reconquest and Mozarabic churches have been considered, the greater part of the work is devoted to Romanesque and Gothic, with a short study of Mudéjar art in the middle of the year and one later of the special aspects of the Spanish Renaissance.

Renaissance Sculpture: Miss King.Credit: One unit.(Given in 1933-34)

The first semester is devoted to the sculpture of the Italian Renaissance, the second partly to Northern art and in especial to figure sculpture in France and Spain from the finishing of the cathedrals to the close of the Renaissance. The great sculptors of Germany are studied carefully in between. The course is illustrated with photographs and lantern slides.

Oriental Art: Mr. King.Credit: One unit.(Given in 1931-32)

The main object of the course is an interpretation, by means of a careful consideration of the more important historical, esthetic and cultural issues involved, of the principal arts of China, India and Japan. While the treatment is more or less topical the historical sequence of the national arts is adhered to. Chinese painting receives the fullest attention. Chinese sculpture, Japanese sculpture and painting are investigated in considerable detail. The arts of Central and South-Eastern Asia are studied comprehensively. Consideration is given to the demands of students with special interests and qualifications.

Renaissance and Baroque Architecture: Mr. King.Credit: One unit(Not given in 1931-32)

This course covers the main aspects of Renaissance and Baroque architecture in Italy, France, Spain, Germany and England. The principles and development of design are made the integrating feature of the survey, whose object is to show the essential relations between the nature of the age and its architecture. Sculpture and painting are constantly referred to in the interests of interpretation. Drawings or reports are required.

Sculpture in the Renaissance and Since: Mr. Warburg. Credit: One unit.

Taking the sculpture of the Italian Renaissance as point of departure, the work will be devoted, in the first semester, to that, to the late Gothic of the north, and to the Baroque art of Europe; and in the second semester to the tendencies and problems of modern art as exemplified in sculpture. While the material for study will necessarily be sought chiefly in books and photographs, it is hoped that the class will be enabled to study some modern carving and statuary during the academic year, either in term or during the vacations.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Art of the Far East: Mr. King.

Credit: One-half unit

(Given in each year)

A general introduction to the history of art in Asia from the earliest times. The architecture, sculpture and painting of China, India and Japan constitute the main burden of the course. Special problems, such as the interrelations between the arts of the Oriental nations and the esthetic differences between the East and West are considered.

Students majoring in history of art are expected to elect this course before being admitted to advanced work.

Modern Art: Mr. Warburg.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

The intention in this course is to indicate the present situation and tendency of American and European art (chiefly in painting, sculpture and architecture); the causes which gave rise thereto, the canons which have been defined and the distinctions observed; also the chief differences still in dispute. While the main consideration will be aesthetic, the method of the study will be historical and the work will be conducted in constant dependence on actual works of art, by means of photographs and other reproductions and, where possible, inspection of examples, on loan at the college, on exhibition in Philadelphia, or accessible elsewhere.

HONOURS WORK

Honours

Special work is offered to students recommended by the department for honours in history of art, either in Oriental Art, in Mediæval Archaeology, or in Renaissance and Modern Art. It involves a scheme of reading and individual conferences and includes the preparation of reports and special examinations.

INSTRUCTOR:

TO BE APPOINTED.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department includes two and one-half units of undergraduate first and second year work; one unit of free elective work and one and one-half units of advanced undergraduate work.

An advanced standing examination in Italian, that is, an examination in translation and composition taken without attendance on the college classes, may be taken by students in the first three weeks after entering college. Depending on the result of this examination credit will be given for all or part of the first or second year Italian courses. Credit thus received may not be counted as part of the major course if Italian is elected as a major subject; more advanced courses in Italian chosen with the approval of the Department of Italian must be substituted for that part of the first or second year course for which credit has been given in the advanced standing examination by students taking Italian as a major subject.

The advanced courses in mathematics are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to mathematical studies differs in different colleges, graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses. Regular written work is expected from all mathematical students and a reading knowledge of French and German is presupposed.

The advanced courses given are selected from the following, with occasional modifications:

Advanced Calculus: Dr. Pell-Wheeler.

Credit: One unit.

Advanced Geometry: Dr. Lehr.*

Credit: One unit.

Differential Equations and Mechanics: Dr. Hedlund.

Credit: One unit.

The first semester deals with Differential Equations and the second semester with Mechanics. Semesters may be elected separately, each with a credit of one-half unit.

Theory of Functions of a Real Variable: Dr. Pell-Wheeler.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

This course is open to students who have had three and one-half units of mathematics.

Music

PROFESSOR:

HORACE ALWYNE, F.R.M.C.M.

ASSOCIATE:

ERNEST WILLOUGHBY, A.R.C.M.

READER:

LAURA MORSE RICHARDSON, A.B.

The undergraduate instruction offered in theoretical music covers four and one-half units.

The objects of the undergraduate course in music are to permit students to make music an integral part of a liberal education and to enable them, through the courses in Harmony and Counterpoint, to gain a knowledge of the technique of composition by actual experience in using its materials and, through the courses in History and Appreciation of Music, to realize the significance of great music æsthetically, historically and sociologically. In the latter courses a large number of compositions drawn from all forms of music are performed and discussed in the classes.

The "Music Fund" of Boston, Massachusetts, offers a scholarship of the value of $350 to $500 to students, graduate or undergraduate, training to become teachers of music in public or private schools or colleges. This is open to students who have complied with the requirements for admission to Bryn Mawr College.

* Granted leave of absence for the year 1931-32. The courses announced by Dr. Lehr will be given by Dr. Flexner.

The Department of Music usually gives a series of concerts and recitals assisted by well-known artists, which is designed to supplement and amplify the work done in the Courses in History and Appreciation of Music. A lecture is given each week outside college hours and open to all members of the College on the programme to be performed by the Philadelphia Orchestra or by other important musical organizations or artists.

The chapel choir of forty members and the college glee club are organized under the direction of the Department of Music.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

History and Appreciation of Music: Mr. Alwyne and Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One unit.

*Free
Elective
Courses*

(Given in each year)

This course consists of the study of the History of Music up to and including Beethoven and of the masterpieces of music produced during that period. Characteristic examples of Early Church Music, in the form of Plain Chant, Organum, Discant, etc. and of Sixteenth Century vocal polyphony, Reformation Chorales and Bach choral works are illustrated by the College Choir in class. Compositions of the following composers are performed in class: Monteverdi, Corelli, Scarlatti, Rameau, Couperin, Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven. The forms included are folk-song, motet, madrigal, fantasia, toccata, early dance-forms, fugue, suite, rondo, variations, sonata and symphony. All study and analysis is based on the actual hearing of the music itself. The instruction is given by means of lectures, required reading, discussion and by analysis by the students in class. At occasional meetings of the class, members of the Faculty of the Departments of History, Classical Archaeology, History of Art and English discuss social, artistic and literary movements which were of special importance in the history of the evolution of music.

Advanced History and Appreciation of Music: Mr. Alwyne and Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

The course in History and Appreciation of Music is required for admission.

The course consists of the study of the history of music from Schubert to the present day and of the musical masterpieces produced during that period. The instruction follows the same plan as in the preceding course.

Third Year History and Appreciation of Music: Mr. Alwyne and Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the two courses in History and Appreciation of Music.

This course consists of two special courses of one semester each in some particular period or aspect of Music. The subjects are Bach and Wagner, or Symphonic Music and Modern Music. These subjects are dealt with in a more detailed and amplified way than is possible in the two foregoing courses in History and Appreciation of Music. The instruction follows the same plan as in the preceding courses.

Elementary Harmony: Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: knowledge of intervals, scales and keys, ability to sing simple melodies at sight.

This course is the beginning of composition. It does not impose upon the student the mere copying of a model but gives her some intellectual and æsthetic liberty.

Melodic movement and harmonic progression are studied concurrently. The student learns to write simple melodies based on poetic meters and the addition of a second melody to one already given with ornamentation by means of passing notes, neighbouring notes, etc. When some facility in horizontal writing has been obtained melodies are harmonized in four parts using major and minor triads in root positions and their inversions.

The importance of the student being able to hear what she writes is stressed by means of progressive ear training and musical dictation.

Advanced Harmony: Mr. Willoughby.Credit: One-half unit.(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the course in Elementary Harmony; or the student must satisfy the instructor that she is qualified to enter.

This course is the continuation of the course in Elementary Harmony from the Chord of the Dominant Seventh and carries the student through modern harmonic relations. Original melodies are written and harmonized in both close and open score and the use of C clefs is studied when writing for strings. Modern compositions are analyzed. This course gives an opportunity for freedom of expression and calls for more original work on the part of the student.

Elementary Counterpoint: Mr. Willoughby.Credit: One-half unit.(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the two courses in Harmony; or the student must satisfy the examiner that she is qualified to enter.

This course deals with the various modes of counterpoint to which the courses in Harmony have led in so far as it has been possible to bring about "horizontal" writing in those courses. This course consists of Strict Counterpoint in two parts up to and including Fifth Species and three-part Strict Counterpoint up to and including Third Species.

Advanced Counterpoint: Mr. Willoughby.Credit: One-half unit.(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the three preceding courses in Harmony and Counterpoint; or the student must satisfy the instructor that she is qualified to enter.

This course is a continuation of Elementary Counterpoint and carries the student through to Strict and Combined Counterpoint in three and four parts, later dealing with the stated contrapuntal forms. The course requires some originality on the part of the student and some facility in pianoforte playing.

FIRST YEAR

Credit: One unit

History of Philosophic Thought: Dr. Weiss and Mr. Nahm.

Required Course

This course will not attempt to cover the entire history of philosophy. Certain important periods will be selected each semester for special study. In the first semester there will be lectures and readings on Greek philosophy and its relations to the social and scientific developments of the time. Special attention will be paid to Plato and Aristotle and the student will read and discuss selections from their writings. In the second semester, after a brief survey of the intervening periods of the Middle Ages and the Renaissance, the philosophy of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries will be selected for special study. Students will read and discuss selections from such thinkers as Descartes, Spinoza, Locke and Berkeley. In the latter part of the semester some of the more characteristic movements of Nineteenth century thought will be treated more briefly.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: One and one-half units

Any of these courses may be taken as free electives by students who have completed the first year required course.

Major Course

Logic: Dr. Weiss.

(Given throughout the year)Credit: One-half unit.

The first part of the course will be devoted to a study of the traditional Aristotelian logic. In the latter part, the student will be introduced to modern symbolic logic and the problem of scientific method. If this course is elected in the first semester it must be continued in the second.

1st Semester:

Elementary Ethics: Mr. Nahm.

Credit: One-half unit.

Considerable attention is paid to a study of the morality of primitive peoples and the relations of group morality to the principles of historical ethical systems. The theory and problems of various types of ethics—such as hedonism, idealism, utilitarianism, etc.—are examined and compared.

2nd Semester:

Philosophical Problems: Dr. de Laguna.

Credit: One-half unit.

Philosophical Problems is primarily a discussion course. Types of philosophical theory are studied and discussed and the student is introduced to some of the main issues of contemporary thought.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Credit: One and one-half units

These advanced courses are, in general, open only to students who have taken one unit of second year work. Exceptions are made only in the case of students whose advanced work in other departments has especially prepared them for either the Aesthetics or the German Idealism.

Advanced Courses

Elementary Aesthetics: Mr. Nahm.

Credit: One-half unit.(Given throughout the year)

The problem of the origin of art is approached by use of museum material and anthropological data. After this introduction an examination is made of the nature of the aesthetic response and a study of aesthetic types, such as the comic, the tragic, the sublime and the characteristic. The conclusion of the course will involve a close study of the aesthetics of painting, sculpture and poetry. If this course is elected in the first semester it must be continued in the second.

1st Semester:

German Idealism: Dr. de Laguna.

Credit: One-half unit.

About half of the course is devoted to the study of Kant. The systems of the post-Kantian idealists are treated more briefly.

2nd Semester:

Recent Philosophical Tendencies: Dr. Weiss.

Credit: One-half unit.

This course will deal in detail with the philosophies of Bergson, Dewey and Whitehead. There will be collateral reading in Peirce, James, Bradley, Santayana and Russell.

HONOURS WORK

Honours

Honours work may be taken either in conjunction with the advanced courses or after their completion. It consists of independent private reading with frequent written reports and conferences with the instructor. The subjects chosen are not confined to the technical aspects of philosophy but on the contrary, emphasize its connection with general literature, history and politics, or with some special science in which the student is working.

Physics

PROFESSOR:

WILLIAM B. HUFF, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATE:

JANE DEWEY, Ph.D.

INSTRUCTOR:

SUE AVIS BLAKE, M.A.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department includes at least three and one-half units, two and one-half units of undergraduate first and second year work and at least one unit of advanced work, open only to graduates and to undergraduates who have completed the major courses in physics.

The first year of the major course deals principally with the development of physical facts and is accordingly mainly experimental and descriptive in its nature. A wide range of physical phenomena and the elements of physical theories are treated. The course is planned to cover the whole subject from this point of view so as to give those who do not intend to pursue physics further, such a knowledge of its principles as will enable them to follow its recent development and applications and also to provide those electing physics as a major with a good foundation for more advanced work. In the second year the course is intended to serve as an introduction to the theories to which experimental evidence has led. The treatment is accordingly more mathematical than in the first year, but the experimental side of the subject is still emphasized. A knowledge of trigonometry is required and some familiarity with the methods of the calculus will be of assistance.

Allied Subjects:

Chemistry

Mathematics

FIRST YEAR

Credit: One unitMajor Course1st Semester.

Mechanics, Heat, Sound and Properties of Matter: Dr. Huff.
Laboratory Work: Dr. Huff and Miss Blake.

2nd Semester.

Electricity, Magnetism and Light: Dr. Dewey.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Dewey and Miss Blake.

The instruction in this course is given by means of lectures, oral quizzes, occasional written quizzes, regular problem papers and required private reading. Students are expected to use, in connection with the lectures, text-books on the special part of the subject under discussion. The lectures are illustrated throughout by means of the lantern, by demonstrations on the lecture table and by the exhibition of apparatus, etc.

In the laboratory, the students are first instructed in the methods of accurate measurement of the simple quantities, length, time and mass; later, they make a series of determinations, mainly quantitative, on the part of the subject under discussion in the lecture room at the time. A system of laboratory lectures has also been developed to supplement the class-room work, to point out sources of error and their treatment, to demonstrate methods of manipulation and, in general, to give directions for working which are applicable to the class as a whole; they are given at the beginning of each week's laboratory work. The object of the work is to familiarize the students with the instruments and methods used in physical measurements, with special reference to the quantitative laws upon which the science is based. The laboratory is equipped with this object in view and the apparatus is all of the most modern design.

SECOND YEAR

Credit: One and one-half units1st Semester.

Theoretical Mechanics, Theory of Light: Dr. Dewey.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Dewey and Miss Blake.

2nd Semester.

Theory of Heat, Theory of Electricity and Magnetism: Dr. Huff.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Huff and Miss Blake.

The instruction is given by lectures, supplemented by the discussion of problem papers; the text-books mentioned below indicate the character of the ground covered and form the basis of the lectures. An endeavour is made to bring the student into contact with the work of original investigators.

The general text-book used is Watson, Physics; the books used in special subjects are as follows: heat: Maxwell, Theory of Heat, Preston, Theory of Heat; dynamics: selections from Tait and Steele's Dynamics of a Particle, Jean's Theoretical Mechanics and special lectures dealing with the application of dynamics to physical problems; electricity and magnetism: J. J. Thomson, Elements of the Mathematical Theory of Electricity and Magnetism; optics, physical and geometrical: Preston, Theory of Light, Edser, Light.

The laboratory work of the second year is designed to follow and illustrate the subject-methods of physical investigation. A special study is made of the sources and amounts of the errors involved in the different operations and the problems assigned are adapted as far as possible to the requirements and wishes of the individual students.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses. A knowledge of differential and integral calculus is required. These lectures deal not only with the theoretical development of the subject, but great stress is laid on the important experimental work which has been done in it and methods and results are criticised and opportunities for further investigations pointed out. The object of the courses is to prepare

*Advanced
Courses*

students to undertake independent work. The laboratory work is planned with this object in view and is arranged to meet the special needs of each individual student. Graduate students may be permitted to take the lectures without the laboratory work. In addition to the laboratory work which accompanies the lectures a student may take extra laboratory work.

Electricity and Magnetism: Dr. Huff.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

The lectures of this course treat typical mathematical and experimental problems chosen from the various parts of the entire subject. A large number of problems on potential and attraction are assigned.

By special arrangement this course may count for more than one unit.

Properties of Matter: Dr. Huff.

Theory of Sound: Dr. Huff.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1933-34)

Properties of Matter is given during the first semester. The lectures cover the general subject of the properties of matter studied from the point of view of the Molecular Theory. The different theories of matter are discussed and an account of recent investigations concerning the relations of matter and electricity is given. Poynting and Thomson's Properties of Matter is read in connection with the course.

Theory of Sound is given during the second semester. The lectures form an introduction to the theory of modes of vibration of pipes, strings and rods. The theory of music and musical instruments is then studied. Poynting and Thomson's Sound is used during the earlier part of the course and frequent references are made to Helmholtz and Rayleigh.

The semester courses may be elected separately and by special arrangement they may count for more than one unit.

Spectroscopy: Dr. Dewey.

Astrophysics: Dr. Dewey.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1932-33)

Spectroscopy is given during the first semester. The course begins with a complete discussion of the apparatus used in this subject; the results of past and present investigations are then considered and problems for investigation are pointed out. The many important applications of spectroscopy to astronomy and atomic structure are not neglected. The standard books of reference are Kayser's Handbuch der Spectroscopie and Sommerfeld's Atom Structure and Spectral Lines. Detailed reports of laboratory investigations are required.

Astrophysics is given during the second semester. This course consists of lectures on the application of physical principles and methods to the study of the composition, structure and motions of the heavenly bodies. Selected chapters in Moulton's Celestial Mechanics and many papers from the Astrophysical Journal are read and discussed.

General Optics: Dr. Dewey.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1934-35)

These lectures give a general discussion of the theories advanced to explain many phenomena in light. Students are required to have a good knowledge of elementary optics and to be sufficiently familiar with optical apparatus to undertake a detailed study of some special problem. The books on optics by Drude, Wood and Schuster are used for reference.

Physical Basis of Music: Dr. Huff.

In the lectures of this course it is planned to present some of the physical principles illustrated in the construction of musical instruments and underlying the general theory of music. Private reading is assigned. This course was given in 1929-30.

Descriptive Astronomy: Dr. Huff.

This course is elementary. Students use a text-book and star-maps and do some general reading on assigned topics. Lecture-experiments and lantern-slides are used. The course is open to juniors and seniors only, but not to auditors or hearers. This course was given in 1928-29.

The Motivation of Action: Dr. Turner.

Credit: One-half unit.(Given throughout the year)

The course will include a study of Instincts, Emotions and Volition and will make extensive references to Animal Behavior. This course may be taken as a free elective with a credit of one-half unit by students who have taken the first year course.

1st Semester.

Experimental Psychology: Dr. Helson and Dr. Turner.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Helson and Dr. Turner.

Credit: One-half unit.

The lectures take up certain topics in systematic psychology. The historical, critical and theoretical features of the subjects covered are discussed and the experimental features demonstrated. Special stress is laid on the comparative study of methods. The laboratory work consists of individual practice in selected topics. This course may be taken as a free elective with a credit of one-half unit by students who have taken the first year course.

2nd Semester.

Mental Tests and Measurements: Dr. Rogers.

Credit: One-half unit.

This course provides a foundation for the theory and practice of mental tests and measurements. Demonstrations of the application of tests of general and special abilities will be given.

This course is open to students who have taken the second year course in Experimental Psychology.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Credit: Two and one-half units

Students majoring in Psychology are to take advanced courses amounting to at least one unit.

Advanced Experimental Psychology: Dr. Helson and Dr. Turner.

This course is intended for students who wish to be trained in research work. It may be taken by students who have taken the second year course in Experimental Psychology. The course is continued in the second semester. The instructors co-operate with the students in the solution of some original problems.

1st Semester:

Abnormal Psychology: Dr. Leuba.

Credit: One-half unit.

This course is a study of the main forms of mental disorders with clinical demonstrations. The course will include a consideration of Individual Differences, Types of Personality and Mental Hygiene. It may be taken as a free elective by students who have taken the Motivation of Action; Experimental Psychology is not a prerequisite.

2nd Semester:

Social Psychology: Dr. Leuba.

LECTURER:	ALMENA DAWLEY, M.A.
SPECIAL LECTURERS:	EVA WHITING WHITE, A.B. ALICE HAMILTON, M.D.

The Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department of Social Economy and Social Research was opened in the autumn of 1915 in order to afford women an opportunity to obtain an advanced scientific education in Social Economy which, it is hoped, will compare favorably with the best preparation in any profession. It is known as the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department in order that the name of Carola Woerishoffer, who devoted her life to social service and industrial relations, may be associated in a fitting and lasting way with Bryn Mawr College which she so generously endowed.

The undergraduate instruction offered in this department covers three and one-half units of free electives.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Elements of Statistics: Dr. Kingsbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

This course deals with the elementary principles of statistics. Among the topics are the array, frequency distributions, graphic methods, averages, measures of variation, theory of sampling, index numbers, theory of probability and linear correlation. It also attempts briefly to acquaint the student with the principles and methods of record keeping and filing which are applicable to municipal, state and federal offices, to business organizations and to social organizations.

The course is recommended to students of social economy, of economics and of education. No knowledge of mathematics beyond the requirements for matriculation is presupposed.

Applied Sociology: Dr. Hart.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Relationships between personalities, the causes of social conflicts and the methods whereby maximum stimulation, release, facilitation and integration of the purposes and possibilities of all members of society may be attained, constitute the problems of the course. Specific applications to social relations in the family, in industry, between races and the like, are worked out. By means of laboratory experiments and objective observation of social phenomena, outstanding sociological theories are tested by attempting to apply them to concrete data. A course in some social science is prerequisite for this course.

Social Anthropology: Dr. Hart.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

An anthropological approach to the problems of human progress. An objective definition of progress is developed. Data relating to prehistoric, primitive, ancient and modern cultural and racial development, bearing on the amount and the direction of change in human intelligence, technology and social relations, are examined. The desirability of various possible future directions of social change is explored. Methods of innovation in mechanical invention, medicine, science, social work and other fields, are studied in terms of instances, with a view to developing the fundamental principles of the technique and dynamics of social progress. A course in some social science is prerequisite for this course.

*Free

Courses*

Labour Movements: Dr. Fairchild.Credit: One unit.(Given in each year)

The present day problems of labour considered with special reference to the history of the labour movement form the subject matter of this course. A study of critical episodes in labour's struggle for organization is made in order to forecast tendencies in trade unionism and to appraise efforts for industrial peace. Some of the topics considered are the strike, the lockout, working conditions, industrial accidents, scientific management and labour, compensation, social insurance, welfare work and the radical experiments of labour. The significance of workers' education and of the various labour colleges and schools is stressed with special reference to the Bryn Mawr Summer School for Women Workers in Industry.

The instruction offered in this department includes two and one-half units of undergraduate first and second year courses and one and one-half units of advanced undergraduate courses.

An advanced standing examination in Spanish, that is, an examination in translation and composition taken without attendance on the college classes, may be taken by students in the first three weeks after entering the college. Depending on the result of this examination credit is given for all or a part of the first or second year Spanish courses. Credit thus received may not be counted as part of the major course if Spanish is elected as a major subject; more advanced courses in Spanish chosen with the approval of the Department of Spanish must be substituted for that part of the first or second year course for which credit has been given in the advanced standing examination by students taking Spanish as a major subject.

Physical Education

DIRECTOR:

JOSEPHINE PETTS

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR:

MARNA V. BRADY, M.A.

INSTRUCTOR:

JANET SEELEY, A.B.

The Physical Education requirement for Freshmen consists of two hours a week of some one activity or of rest according to the advice of the College Physician and the Director of Physical Education based upon the student's Physical Examination and one hour a week of Body Mechanics for fifteen weeks during the winter.

Freshmen

For Sophomores the Physical Education requirement is the same as for Freshmen except that one hour a week of Hygiene throughout one semester takes the place of the Body Mechanics course.

Sophomores

Physical Education classes are divided into three sections: Autumn (October first to December first), Winter (December first to April first), Spring (April first to the end of college). The required work in each section for two years must be satisfactorily completed for graduation as well as the Freshman Swimming Test, which consists of:

1. Dive—plain front.
2. Sink and come up twice.
3. Float for two minutes.
4. Swim for twenty minutes, using any stroke, floating and treading water included.

In the autumn, Freshmen and Sophomores may elect their required work, with the consent of the College Physician and the Director of Physical Education, from the following list: Hockey, Sun Baths, Fencing, Natural Dancing, Archery, Swimming, Tennis.

Autumn

During the winter, the required work for those students who have not passed the swimming test consists of two periods a week of swimming.

Winter

The only exceptions to this are made by the College Physician. The students who have passed the swimming test may elect their Physical Education classes from the following list: Swimming, Natural Dancing, Basket Ball, Lacrosse, Fencing, Sun Baths.

Spring

The spring program of Physical Education may be chosen from the following list: Lacrosse, Fencing, Tennis, Swimming, Archery.

Upperclassmen

It is expected that the Juniors and Seniors, being aware of the value of play in a busy existence, will take advantage of the opportunities offered them at college to learn well some sport that appeals to them for future use as well as for the purpose of keeping fit while they are at college.

Every provision will be made for the Juniors and Seniors in the way of instruction. All the Freshman and Sophomore required classes in sports are open to them. It is an obviously necessary rule, however, that all upperclassmen taking a required sports course must attend regularly so as not to retard the progress of the class. Special advanced work will be arranged for upperclassmen who are ready for it.

All entering students are required to file at the office of the Dean of the College a report of a recent medical examination filled out and signed by a physician, on a blank to be secured from the College.

Health Certificate

Every entering student must as well file a physician's certificate stating that she has been vaccinated against smallpox during the year preceding her registration at college and that she exhibited a typical or immune reaction to this vaccination. Students who do not certify to vaccination at entrance will be vaccinated by the College Physician, for which a fee of five dollars will be charged. There is no exception to this rule.

Vaccination

Every student must file a certificate stating that her eyes have been examined by an oculist within six months before entrance and before the beginning of her junior year. Failure to comply with the above rule entails an examination by one of the college consultants in ophthalmology for which the students will be charged as private patients by the ophthalmologist who makes the examination. If glasses are prescribed they must be obtained.

Oculist Certificate

Every undergraduate student and hearer is examined each year by the Resident Physician of the College and twice each year by the Director of Physical Education with reference to physical development, strength of heart and lungs and general health. The Physician-in-Chief of the College acts as consultant and is called in all serious cases.

Physical Examination

Any student who, at the time of the examination or at any other time during the year, is not in good health is placed on the health supervision list, is required to follow the special régime prescribed and her extra-curriculum activities may be limited.

Health Supervision

The Director of Physical Education receives the reports of students under medical treatment, keeps records of the health of all students and endeavors, by interviews and advice on personal hygiene, to maintain and improve the health of the students. All students are urged by the Health Department to take some out-of-door exercise in addition to their periods of physical training.

*Physicians
and Nursing*

Eminent specialists practising in Philadelphia have consented to serve as consulting physicians of the college. The Associate Physician is in her office in the college infirmary daily and may be consulted by the students without charge.

Infirmary

The infirmary fee of $20.00 paid by each resident undergraduate student entitles her to be cared for in the infirmary for four days (not necessarily consecutive) during the year and to attendance by the college physicians during this time and to nursing, provided her illness is not infectious. It also entitles her to the services of the nurses employed by the college during other temporary illness, provided one of the regular nurses is free at the time. In the case of an illness of longer duration and also in the case of all diseases of an infectious character the student must meet or, in case of two or more students with the same infectious disease, must share, the expense of a special nurse. She is responsible also for the infirmary fees which are $6.00 a day and for hospital or sanitarium charges should she be removed from the college by order of the Physician-in-Chief.

A special nurse for one student costs approximately $8.30 per day or $58.10 per week, which includes nurse's fee, board and laundry. When a student has not an infectious disease the infirmary fee of $6.00 per day will include the nurse's fee provided it is possible for one of the college nurses to care for the student. The fees of the consulting physicians and surgeons and other specialists recommended by the college will be furnished on request.

All communications concerning the health of the students from parents and guardians, outside physicians and others, should be addressed to the Dean of the College, who will excuse students for absence before and after vacations on account of serious illness and from attendance on academic work during the time that they are in the infirmary or seriously ill at home. Any student who becomes ill when away from the college is asked to notify immediately the Dean of the College.

GENERAL INFORMATION

Plans and descriptions of the academic buildings and the undergraduate halls of residence, Denbigh, Merion Hall, Rockefeller Hall, Pembroke Hall East, Pembroke Hall West and Wyndham, with full information regarding the charges for rooms, are published as Part 3 of the Bryn Mawr College Calendar and may be obtained, by application, from the Secretary and Registrar of the College. A resident warden is in charge of each hall. Each hall has its separate kitchen and dining-room except Pembroke, which has a common dining-room and kitchen for the two wings and for Wyndham. Students from Wyndham take their meals in Pembroke. Each hall provides a separate room for each of the sixty or seventy students, except Wyndham, which has six double bedrooms and five single rooms and provides accommodation for seventeen students. All rooms are furnished with a bed, bureau, table desk, straight chair, desk chair and bookcase, but students are expected to furnish their own rugs, curtains and towels. All necessary service is supplied by the college. Though there are open fire-places in many studies and single rooms, all rooms are adequately heated by steam heat controlled by a thermostat. Because of the danger of infectious diseases personal laundry may be done only by laundries or laundresses recommended by the college.

Halls of Residence

A deposit of fifteen dollars must be made by each resident student to reserve her room for the following academic year. Normally the deposit will be deducted from the rent of the room. It will be refunded only under the following circumstances:

*Room
Reservation*

(a) If a student of the college gives formal notice of the withdrawal of her reservation to the Secretary and Registrar before May 1 preceding the academic year for which reservation was made.

(b) If a candidate for admission in October gives formal notice of the withdrawal of her application to the Secretary and Registrar before August 1 preceding the academic year for which the application was made.

(c) If a former student who has applied for re-admission in February gives formal notice of the withdrawal of her application to the Secretary and Registrar before January 1 preceding the semester for which the application was made.

Otherwise the deposit will be forfeited to the college.

Every applicant reserving a room after September 1 or failing to withdraw her application by that date, not occupying the room or vacating it during the year, prevents another student from admission to college as a resident. Therefore, unless formal notice of withdrawal of an application for the approaching year is received by the Secretary and Registrar by September 1, the applicant is held responsible for the rent of the room reserved, or in case no definite assignment has been made, for the minimum of one hundred and seventy-five dollars. Room rent is subject to remission or deduction only if the college is able to re-rent the room. The applicant is not permitted to dispose of such vacant rooms.

Withdrawal

Non-Resident Students

Accommodation is made for students living with their families in Philadelphia and vicinity. There is a club-room for non-resident students in Goodhart Hall, a coat room in Taylor Hall and one in the library and non-resident students also have the full use of the large Common Room in Goodhart Hall.

Non-resident students are liable in whole or in part for all undergraduate fees except those for residence in the halls and infirmary fees.

Expenses for Undergraduate Students

Fees for Tuition

Though the average cost of teaching each undergraduate student is estimated at about nine hundred and twenty-five dollars, the tuition charge for undergraduate students and for hearers is five hundred dollars a year. The difference between the actual cost and the price of tuition must be met from the small endowment funds of the college and by private gifts. Voluntary contributions from parents able and willing to pay this additional four hundred and twenty-five dollars, in whole or part, will be used for scholarships for students unable to pay the regular tuition fee of five hundred dollars. No reduction of the tuition fee can be made on account of absence, illness, or dismissal during a semester, or for any other reason and no refund will be made in case of advance payment.

Fees for Board and Residence

The charge for board at the college is four hundred dollars a year, payable half-yearly in advance. The total fee for board and residence depends upon the room or rooms occupied by the student. About one-tenth of the rooms in the college rent for seventy-five dollars, making the cost of board, residence and tuition for undergraduate students nine hundred and seventy-five dollars, but students desiring to apply for rooms at seventy-five dollars must file a statement at the office of the Secretary and Registrar that they are unable to afford rooms at a higher price. The rooms have different rentals depending upon the size and location, varying from seventy-five to five hundred and fifty dollars. Room rent is payable yearly in advance.

Reduction of Fees on Account of Illness

In case of prolonged illness and absence from college extending over six weeks or withdrawal from the college for a period of six weeks or more, there will be a special proportionate reduction in the charge for board, provided that written notice be given to the Dean of the College and to the Comptroller at the time of withdrawal, or, in case the student is ill at home, as soon as possible after her illness is known. Verbal notice to wardens or instructors is not sufficient to secure the above allowance.

Residence in Vacations

Students who wish to remain at the college during the Christmas and Easter vacations should apply to the Warden for information in regard to rooms and rates. During the Christmas vacation the halls of residence are closed but accommodation may be obtained near the college campus. During the Easter vacation the halls of residence are in general kept open and undergraduates and graduate students may occupy their rooms at a fixed rate.

Students remaining during any part of the Christmas or Easter vacations in Bryn Mawr, or in the immediate neighborhood, not in their own homes, are required to take advantage of the arrangements made by the college and will be charged according to the length of stay. A student not going to her own home is required to inform the Warden of her hall in advance of her intention to spend the vacation elsewhere and to register her address with her Warden.

For undergraduate students taking one laboratory course of four or more hours a week there is an additional charge of fifteen dollars a semester for materials and apparatus; for students taking two laboratory courses of four or more hours a week a charge of twenty-five dollars a semester and for students taking three laboratory courses of four or more hours a week a charge of thirty dollars a semester. A charge of seven dollars and fifty cents a semester is made for students taking a laboratory course of less than four hours a week.

In courses in Geology each hour of field work is counted as one hour of laboratory work. Not more than one laboratory course is required of candidates for a degree.

For laboratory course of four or more hours a week for the academic year	30.00

In the course in History and Appreciation of Music a charge of one dollar and twenty-five cents a semester is made for the purchase of necessary books and material.

*Incidental
Fees and Charges*

The graduation fee is twenty dollars, payable in the senior year.

Every student who enters the college must register her courses within two weeks after entrance. A charge of one dollar will be made for each change made in the course after it has been definitely registered.

A fee of ten dollars a year is charged to each resident undergraduate and a fee of three dollars and fifty cents a year to each non-resident undergraduate for the up-keep of the athletic fields.

Every student except a member of the freshman class who moves from one hall to another is charged a fee of ten dollars for moving and every student except a member of the freshman class who moves from one room to another in the same hall is charged a fee of five dollars. This fee entitles a student to have five pieces moved free of charge.

The fees are due on the first day of each semester and students whose fees are not paid before November first in the first semester or before March first in the second semester are not permitted to continue in residence or in attendance on their classes.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Entrance Scholarships

Each year the College awards four competitive matriculation scholarships of $100 each. One scholarship is given in each of the following districts: (a) The New England States; (b) New York, New Jersey and Delaware; (c) Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and the states west of the Mississippi River; (d) Pennsylvania and all places not otherwise mentioned. While the candidate's district is determined by the location of the school where she receives her final preparation or, if preparation has been by private tuition, by her place of residence during the preceding year, candidates may present themselves for examination at any examination center. These scholarships, to be held for one year, are awarded for the highest general average obtained in each district. All regular candidates for matriculation who intend to spend at least one year at Bryn Mawr College, who have not cancelled an examination division, who have not received more than a two point condition and whose general average is 75 per cent or above, are eligible and are without formal declaration candidates for these scholarships. When two divisions are taken conditions incurred in the first division and removed in the second are not counted.

Bryn Mawr School Scholarship

Scholarships of $500 each were founded in 1885 by the Board of Managers of the Bryn Mawr School, of Baltimore, Maryland. One of these scholarships is open annually to the graduate of the Bryn Mawr School who has completed the school course with the most distinction.

Undergraduate Scholarships and Prizes Awarded for Distinction in Academic Work

Maria L. Eastman Brooke Hall Memorial Scholarship

The Maria L. Eastman Brooke Hall Memorial Scholarship of the value of $150 was founded in 1901, in memory of Maria L. Eastman, Principal of Brooke Hall School for Girls, Media, Pa., by the Alumnae and former pupils of the school. It is awarded each year on the ground of scholarship, irrespective of the need of financial aid, to the member of the junior class with the highest record, to be held during the senior year. No application for the scholarship is necessary.

Elizabeth Duane Gillespie Scholarship

The Elizabeth Duane Gillespie Scholarship in American History of the value of $60 was founded in 1903 by the Pennsylvania Society of Colonial Dames of America, in memory of Elizabeth Duane Gillespie. It is awarded annually to a member of the sophomore or junior class, on condition that the holder of the scholarship devote to the study of American history at least four hours a week for one year during the last two years of her college course. The candidate is to be selected by the Faculty of Bryn Mawr College on the ground of excellence in scholarship.

Charles S. Hinchman Memorial Scholarship

The Charles S. Hinchman Memorial Scholarship of the value of $500 was founded in 1917 in memory of the late Charles S. Hinchman of Philadelphia by his family. The holder will be nominated to the Faculty by the Undergraduate Scholarships Committee of the Faculty guided in its selection by (1) the student's record in her group subjects, (2) written recommendations from the instructors in these subjects, (3) evidence of the student's ability as shown by written work in her major subject together with a written estimate of the same by the instructor most directly concerned, such work to be submitted not later than March 15th of the year preceding the one in which the scholarship is to be awarded.

George Bates Hopkins Memorial Scholarship

The George Bates Hopkins Memorial Scholarship, consisting of the income of a gift of $10,000 from Mrs. Elizabeth Hopkins Johnson, in memory of her father, is to be awarded each year at the discretion of the President and Faculty of the College to the student in the Department of Music who in their estimation most needs it and is most deserving of it.

Elizabeth S. Shippen Scholarships

The Elizabeth S. Shippen Scholarships were founded in 1917 by the bequest of the late Elizabeth S. Shippen of Philadelphia. Three scholarships are awarded each year, one to the member of the senior class who receives the Bryn Mawr European Fellowship and two to members of the junior class, as follows:

The Shippen Scholarship in Science of the value of $100 is awarded to a member of the junior class, one or both of whose major subjects lie in the Scientific Departments, viz., Physics, Chemistry, Geology, Biology, for excellence of work in one of these departments

The Shippen Scholarship in Foreign Languages of the value of $100 is awarded annually to a member of the junior class, one or both of whose major subjects lie in the Departments of Foreign Languages, viz., Greek, Latin, German, French, Italian, Spanish, for excellence of work in one of these departments. Work in elementary language courses is not counted.

No student shall be considered eligible for the Science or Foreign Language Scholarship who has not completed at least one-half of the second year course in the subject on which the computation is based. The winner of the Charles S. Hinchman Memorial Scholarship will not be eligible for the Shippen Scholarship in Science or in Foreign Languages.

The Sheelah Kilroy Memorial Scholarships in English (the interest on $5000) were founded in 1919 by Dr. and Mrs. Philip Kilroy in memory of their daughter Sheelah. These scholarships are awarded annually on the recommendation of the Department of English as follows: $150 to a student for excellence of work in the Second Year or Advanced English; $75 to a student for excellence of work in the First Year English and $50 to the student in the Required English Composition who does the best written work during the year.

SCHOLARSHIPS AWARDED AT ENTRANCE AND TENABLE FOR FOUR YEARS

Regional Scholarships of $300 to $500 each, administered by local alumnae committees, are awarded at regular intervals in each district of the Alumnae Association of Bryn Mawr College to candidates of exceptional ability who are unable to meet the fees of the college in full. The conditions are:

*Regional
Scholarships*

1. Application on blanks obtainable from the Alumnae Scholarships and Loan Fund Committee, Taylor Hall, Bryn Mawr, Pa., should be made before April 1 of the academic year for which the scholarship is desired.

2. Awards of the scholarships are made as soon as possible after the returns of the College Entrance Board Examinations to candidates who have been admitted to Bryn Mawr College who are judged to be of the highest promise by Local Committees in consultation with the Faculty Committee on Entrance Examinations.

3. Candidates awarded Regional Scholarships and maintaining a high standard of conduct and scholarship may be assured of further scholarships from local Alumnae committees or direct from the college. Further information may be obtained from the chairman of the Alumnae Scholarships and Loan Fund, Taylor Hall, Bryn Mawr, Pa.

*Trustees
Scholarships*

Eight free tuition scholarships, two awarded each year and tenable for four consecutive years, were founded for students prepared in Philadelphia High Schools by the Trustees of Bryn Mawr College on the following terms:

The candidate shall have matriculated for Bryn Mawr College, having received all her preparation for entrance examination at a Philadelphia High School; she shall have been recommended by the Board of Education of Philadelphia subject to the approval of the Directors of Bryn Mawr College. Provided that the conduct and academic standing of the student shall be satisfactory to the college authorities, the scholarship will be renewed annually for three years.

*City
Scholarships*

Eight scholarships of the value of $175 similar to the trustees' scholarships are awarded to graduates of a Philadelphia High School by the Board of Public Education of Philadelphia.

*Lower Merion
Township
Scholarship*

In 1895 one scholarship providing free tuition for a graduate of the Lower Merion High School was founded by the College and presented to the School Board of Education of Lower Merion Township, Montgomery County, Pa. In 1926 the Board of Directors of the College added three similar scholarships, one to be awarded each year to a non-resident student to be held for four consecutive years. The conditions of award are that the candidate having received all of her preparation for examination at the Lower Merion High School shall have matriculated for Bryn Mawr College and shall be recommended by the School Board of Education of Lower Merion Township subject to the approval of the Directors of Bryn Mawr College.

*Norristown
Scholarship*

In 1900 one scholarship providing free tuition for a graduate of Norristown High School was presented to the School Board of Education of Norristown, Pa., on the following terms: The candidate having received all of her preparation at the Norristown High School shall have matriculated for Bryn Mawr College not later than the June preceding her entrance to the College and shall be nominated by the Superintendent of Schools or the Board of Education subject to the approval of the Board of Directors of the College and that the award shall not be made twice to the same person unless the Superintendent of Schools shall file a statement with the President of the college that no other member of the graduating class is eligible for the scholarship.

*Foundation
Scholarship*

One competitive entrance scholarship of free tuition tenable for four years is open annually to members of the Society of Friends who are unable to pay the full charge for tuition and residence. The scholarship is awarded, as far as possible, under the same rules as those governing the competitive entrance scholarships of Bryn Mawr College.

In 1893 the Alumnae Association of the Girls' High and Normal School of Philadelphia founded at Bryn Mawr a scholarship, tenable for four years, of the value of $100, increased in 1924 to $150. This scholarship is awarded every four years to the graduate of the Girls' High School who matriculates for Bryn Mawr College with the highest grade of that year.

*L. C. B. Saul
Scholarship*

Four Frances Marion Simpson Scholarships,* entitling the holder to free tuition, were founded in 1912 by Justice Alexander Simpson, Jr., in memory of Frances Simpson Pfahler, of the class of 1906, one scholarship to be awarded in each October, to a candidate who receives her certificate of examination in the preceding spring matriculation examination period. Competition for these scholarships is open in the first place to residents of Philadelphia and Montgomery counties who have been prepared for Bryn Mawr College in the public schools of the said counties, or at home by their parents and guardians, or in the Phebe Anna Thorne School of the Department of Education of Bryn Mawr College, or in Miss S. Janet Sayward's School at Overbrook, Pennsylvania, so long as she shall be conducting the same; or in default thereof to residents of other counties in Pennsylvania. Only those students who are unable to pay the fees for tuition, or if living at a distance, the fees for tuition and board, in Bryn Mawr College are entitled to compete. In special cases the scholarship may be awarded to a candidate from some other locality, in which case the restriction to preparation in public schools may also be relaxed, or it may be awarded to some one who can pay the charge for her tuition, or for her tuition and board in part.

*Frances

Several Book Shop Scholarships are contributed yearly from the profits of the Bryn Mawr Cooperative Society, to be awarded to students in need of financial assistance.

Scholarship at the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania

The Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania presented to Bryn Mawr College in 1910 the scholarship to be awarded to a graduate of the college recommended by the President and Faculty as in their opinion qualified to take up the study of medicine. The holder is given free tuition for one year at the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania and the scholarship will be renewed for the three remaining years of the medical course if the holder's record prove satisfactory.

Students' Loan Fund

*Students'
Loan Fund*

The Students' Loan Fund of the Alumnae Association of Bryn Mawr College was founded by the Class of 1890 for the use of students who need to borrow money in order to continue their college work and for the purpose of receiving contributions, no matter how small, from those who are interested in helping students to obtain an education. The Fund is managed by a committee consisting of the President of the College and the Alumnae Scholarships and Loan Fund Committee.

These funds are managed by a committee consisting of the President of the College and the Alumnae Scholarships and Loan Fund Committee.

The Committee in administering this money follow a definite policy, designed to serve the best interests of the students concerned. Loans may be used for any purpose approved by the Committee, who strongly recommend the borrowing of small sums to relieve undue financial pressure, or to meet special emergencies. As a rule, money is not loaned to Freshmen. The terms under which money is loaned are as liberal as is consistent with business-like principles. Interest, which begins with the date of graduation, is at the rate of four per cent. Payment of the loan must be made in five years according to the following system: ten per cent in each of the first two years; fifteen per cent each in the third and fourth years; fifty per cent in the fifth year. At the discretion of the Committee, exceptions are made in special cases, for example that of a student working for a higher degree, to both the five-year limit and the date of the first interest charge.

Contributions may be sent to the chairman of the Scholarships and Loan Fund Committee, Alumnæ Office, Taylor Hall, Bryn Mawr, Pa. Application blanks may be obtained from the Alumnæ Office on the third floor of Taylor Hall by students who wish to borrow from the Loan Fund.

Parents' Fund

The Parents' Fund was founded and is supported by the contributions of parents and students who are able and willing to pay the full cost of tuition (approximately $925). It is used in making grants to supplement the scholarship awards and to assist other students in need of financial aid.

THE BUREAU OF RECOMMENDATIONS

The college conducts a Bureau of Recommendations which assists alumnae and former undergraduate and graduate students by securing recommendations from their professors and forwarding these to individuals or agencies to whom they may apply for positions. It is not primarily a bureau of employment or appointments, although it is often instrumental in putting individuals directly in touch with positions. The bureau also helps graduate and undergraduate students to find summer work. A series of vocational lectures and conferences are conducted each year for the benefit of the undergraduate body. The services of the bureau are given free of charge to alumnae and former students of Bryn Mawr College.

BEQUEST FORM

The Trustees of Bryn Mawr College will welcome any gift, bequest or award which is to be devoted to scholarships, fellowships or the endowment of professors' chairs in accordance to the wishes of the donor. Such funds may constitute memorials to the donor or to any person he may name. The sum of $9,000 yields sufficient income to provide the present tuition for one student at Bryn Mawr College.

Form of Bequest

I give and bequeath to The Trustees of Bryn Mawr College, a corporation established by law in the State of Pennsylvania, the sum of.....
.....to be invested and preserved inviolably for the endowment
of Bryn Mawr College, located at Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania.

THE LIBRARY

LIBRARY

The Bryn Mawr College Library is designed to be as far as possible a library for special study. There are at present on its shelves about 128,000 bound volumes and 10,000 dissertations and pamphlets. Of special interest is the classical library of the late Professor Sauppe of Göttingen, the Semitic library of the late Professor Amiaud of Paris, the mathematical library of Professor Charlotte Angus Scott and the Germanic library of the late Professor Karl Detlev Jessen.

The library is open daily except Sundays from 8 A. M. to 10 P. M. and on Sunday from 2 P. M. to 10 P. M. Books may be taken out by the students unless specially reserved for library reference use.

The sum of over twelve thousand dollars is expended yearly for books under the direction of the heads of the several collegiate departments and in addition to many gifts of single books, about thirty thousand dollars has been presented to the library during the past twenty years for expenditure in special departments.

Students may enjoy also the privileges of Haverford College Library and the following:

The Library Company of Philadelphia, which contains about 260,000 volumes, divided between the Locust Street Building and the Ridgway Branch. Its valuable collection of pamphlets is not included in the number of volumes as given above. The Library is open from 9 A. M. to 5.30 P. M. and is open to students for consultation freely during these hours. To take books from the building a deposit must be made or subscriptions will be received as follows: $12.00 for one year, $6.00 for six months, $4.00 for three months.

The Mercantile Library, which contains about 215,000 volumes. Private subscription, $6.00 a year for two separate works at a time.

The Library of the Academy of Natural Sciences, which contains about 90,000 volumes. The Council of the Academy has generously conceded the use of its library and of its museum to the students of Bryn Mawr College.

The Library of the University of Pennsylvania, which contains about 550,000 volumes and 50,000 pamphlets. The custodians of this library have always been liberal in extending to the College inter-library loan courtesies.

The Free Library of Philadelphia, which contains over 625,000 volumes and 415,000 pamphlets and unbound documents and is at all times open to the students for consultation.

The American Philosophical Society Library, which contains about 70,000 volumes, admission by card from a member.

The Historical Society of Pennsylvania Library, which contains over 150,000 bound volumes and 250,000 pamphlets, is for reference only. The collection of manuscripts is one of the best in the country, comprising 7,000 volumes containing over 1,000,000 items. Every courtesy is extended to members of the college and students and members of the Faculty are specially invited to all lectures delivered at the Library.

Over six hundred publications and reviews in the English, Greek, French, Italian, Spanish, German and Swedish languages, are received by the library, as follows:

BRYN MAWR COLLEGE

BRYN MAWR COLLEGE was founded by Dr. Joseph Taylor of Burlington, New Jersey. During his life time the site of the college at Bryn Mawr, five miles west of Philadelphia, was purchased and the buildings were begun. At his death in January, 1880, he left the greater part of his estate for the foundation and maintenance of an institution of higher education for women. In 1880 the college was incorporated under the laws of Pennsylvania and was invested with the power to confer degrees; in 1883 the trustees issued a circular of information; in 1884 a President, Dr. James E. Rhoads and a Dean of Faculty, Miss M. Carey Thomas, were elected, plans were matured and academic appointments were made. In the spring of 1885 the first catalogue was issued and in the autumn of the same year the college began its first academic year.

On the death of President Rhoads in 1893, Dean Thomas was elected to the presidency, which office she held until she reached the age of retirement in 1922. President Marion Edwards Park was elected to the presidency in 1922.

Bryn Mawr College has believed always in the value of small classes and limits the total enrollment of undergraduates to about four hundred, and resident graduates to less than one hundred. From the first it has been the policy of the trustees to organize no department in which they could not provide for graduate as well as undergraduate study offered by the same faculty.

Bryn Mawr College confers the degrees of Bachelor of Arts, Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy.

The departments of the college are:

Biblical Literature	History
Biology	History of Art
Chemistry	Italian
Classical Archæology	Latin
Comparative Philology and Linguistics	Mathematics
Economics and Politics	Musio
Education	Philosophy
English	Physics
French	Psychology
Geology	Social Economy
German	Spanish

THE GRADUATE SCHOOL

The Graduate School of Bryn Mawr College exists to give advanced instruction and to foster research in the fields of ancient and modern languages and literature, the social sciences, philosophy and psychology, mathematics and the natural sciences, music, art and education. Bryn Mawr College offers special opportunities to its graduate students for the working out of research problems in small seminars under the personal direction of the heads of departments. The degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy are conferred and in addition to these degrees first and second year certificates are awarded by the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department of Social Economy and Social Research.

From the first it has been the policy of the Trustees of Bryn Mawr College to organize no department in which they could not provide for graduate as well as undergraduate study. In each department (except the Department of Music) a consecutive series of graduate courses pursued throughout three years provides preparation in the chief or major subject of the examination for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy and certain courses may be pursued for one or two years and offered as one of the two minor or secondary subjects.

Admission

Application for admission to the Graduate School should be made to the Dean of the Graduate School, Bryn Mawr College, Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania. Application

Graduate students must present a diploma from some college of acknowledged standing. They must satisfy the several instructors of their ability to profit by the courses they desire to follow and may be required to pursue certain introductory or auxiliary studies before they are admitted to the advanced or purely graduate courses.

*Graduate
Students*

Graduates of Bryn Mawr College and graduates of other colleges satisfying the Academic Council that the course of study for which they have received the degree of Bachelor of Arts is equivalent to that for which that degree is given at Bryn Mawr, or who have made up any deficiency, may apply to the Academic Council to be enrolled as candidates for the degree of Master of Arts, or Doctor of Philosophy and Master of Arts; admission to the graduate school does not automatically qualify a student to become a candidate for these degrees. Students not studying for these degrees are, however, entitled to personal guidance and supervision from the instructors of the Graduate School.

The most distinguished place in the Graduate School is held by the resident fellows and graduate scholars, who must live in Radnor Hall, the graduate hall of the college, during the academic year. There are offered annually in the Graduate School three fellowships for study in Europe, one special foundation fellowship for study in an American college, twenty-three resident fellowships, twenty-three resident graduate scholarships and five graduate scholarships for foreign women.*

*Fellows
and Scholars*

* For details of these awards, see pages 90-94.

Residence

Residence for Graduate Students

Residence in Radnor Hall, the graduate hall, is optional except for holders of resident fellowships and scholarships. Every student has a separate room. The charge of $100 for room-rent includes all expenses of furnishing, service, heating and light.* Those who do not reside in the graduate hall are expected to make arrangements which are satisfactory to the college.

Plans and descriptions of Radnor Hall are published in Part 3 of the Bryn Mawr College Calendar.

Application for Rooms

Application for rooms must be made as early as possible. The demand for graduate rooms is very great and since unnecessarily reserving a room may prevent some other student from entering the college, a deposit of fifteen dollars is required in order that the application may be registered. In case the applicant enters the college in the year for which the room is reserved, the amount of the deposit is deducted from the first college bill. If she changes the date of her application or files formal notice of withdrawal at the Office of the Secretary and Registrar before August first of the year for which the application is made, the deposit will be refunded. If, for any reason whatever, the change or withdrawal be made later than August first, the deposit will be forfeited to the college. Students making application for a room for the second semester forfeit the deposit if they do not file notice of withdrawal at the Secretary's office before January first of the academic year for which the room is reserved. In order to make application for a room it is necessary to sign a room-contract which will be sent on application and return it with the fee of fifteen dollars to the Secretary and Registrar of the College. A deposit of fifteen dollars must also be made by each student in residence in order to insure the tenure of her room for the following academic year. This sum will be forfeited if formal notice of withdrawal is not filed at the office of the Secretary and Registrar on or before May first of the current year.

With- drawal

Every applicant who reserves a room after the first of September or who fails to withdraw her application by that date and either does not occupy the room at all or vacates it during the college year prevents some other student from obtaining admission as a resident student to the college. Therefore, unless formal notice of withdrawal of application for the ensuing academic year is received by the Secretary and Registrar of the College by the first of September (or in the case of an application for the second semester only, by the first of January) the applicant is responsible for the rent of the room for the whole year. The charge for room-rent is not subject to remission or deduction unless the college is able to re-rent the room. The applicant is not entitled to dispose of the room thus left vacant.

Board

The charge for board is four hundred dollars a year, one half being payable on registration and the other half at the beginning of the second semester.

* Students are expected to provide their own rugs—although upon request they will be supplied—curtains and towels, but in every other respect the rooms are completely furnished. No part is taken by the students in the care of their own rooms.

In case of prolonged illness and absence from the college extending over six weeks or more, there will be a proportionate reduction in charge for board.

Accommodation is provided for graduate students who wish to remain at the college during the Christmas and Easter vacations at fifteen dollars a week. At Christmas the college halls are closed, but accommodation may be obtained near the college campus. At Easter graduate students may occupy their own rooms at the above rate. Any student remaining in Bryn Mawr or nearby and not in the college or in her own home for all or part of the vacation must make arrangements satisfactory to the Dean of the Graduate School.

Accommodation for Vacations

The college reserves the right to exclude at any time and to cancel the fellowships and scholarships of students whose conduct or academic standing renders them undesirable members of the college community. In such cases fees due or paid in advance will not be refunded or remitted in whole or in part.

College Regulations

In case of emergency the college assumes the right to take all responsibility.

Expenses

Tuition

The charge for tuition for graduate students is $250 a year, one-half being payable on registration and the other half at the beginning of the second semester.*

Tuition

In cases where a full time registration is not made, fees for graduate students are as follows:

For one graduate seminary or for any graduate course meeting two hours a week.....	$100
For any graduate course meeting one hour a week.....	$50
For any undergraduate course†.....	$125

Summary of Total Expenses for the Academic Year

Tuition fee*.....	$250
Room-rent.....	100
Board.....	400
Infirmary fee‡.....	20

Total..... $770

The tuition fee for the semester becomes due as soon as the student is registered in the college office. No reduction of this fee will be made on account of absence, dismissal or any reason during a semester, or year covered by the fee in question. If a graduate student is admitted to residence or to attendance on lectures after the beginning of a semester a proportionate reduction is made in the charges for board and room-rent

Tuition Fee

* For Laboratory fees see page 34.

† A special charge of $100 is made to Candidates for the degree of Master of Arts for the advanced undergraduate work that may be offered in partial fulfillment of the requirements for that degree.

‡ This fee entitles the student to four days (not necessarily consecutive) resident care in the Infirmary and to consultations with the College Physician during her office hours.

and for tuition. Every student who enters the college must register immediately at the Comptroller's office and must register her courses at the Office of the Dean of the Graduate School within two weeks after entrance. Permission to make any change in registration must be received from the Dean of the Graduate School.

Students whose fees are not paid before November first in the first semester and before March first in the second semester are not permitted to continue in residence or in attendance on their classes.

*Laboratory
Fees*

Students registered for laboratory work only are charged a fee of $25 a semester for 5 hours or less a week of laboratory work, with an additional charge of $5 an hour for each additional hour.

Students in the departments of Physics, Chemistry, Geology, Biology and Psychology whose laboratory or field work is done in connection with a graduate course or an advanced undergraduate course that may be counted for an advanced degree, shall be charged a laboratory fee of $10 for each course, the maximum fee charged not to exceed $25. The laboratory fee for laboratory work done in connection with a first or second year undergraduate course is $15.

*Carola
Woerishoffer
Certificate
Fee*

All graduate students, including fellows and scholars, taking two courses or a course which requires field work in the Department of Social Economy and Social Research are charged a laboratory fee of $10 a semester, and may also be required to provide themselves with two fifty-trip tickets between Bryn Mawr and Philadelphia costing $9.18 each and to meet their traveling and incidental expenses while working in the field during the semester and vacations. The fee for the certificate is ten dollars and all fellows and scholars are expected to complete work for a certificate and are charged the ten dollars certificate fee.

*Graduation
Fee*

The graduation fee for Doctors of Philosophy and Masters of Arts is twenty dollars.

*Infirmary
Fees*

The infirmary fee is $20.00 for each resident graduate student. Payment of this fee entitles each graduate student to care in the infirmary for four days during the year, not necessarily consecutive, with attendance by the college physicians and, if the illness is not contagious, to nursing. In the event of an illness of longer duration and of all contagious illnesses the student must meet or, in the case of two or more students with the same contagious disease, share the expenses of a special nurse, the infirmary fees and any hospital or sanitarium charges, should removal from the college be ordered by the Physician-in-Chief.

The infirmary fee for the student, exclusive of the four days covered by the stated fee, is $6.00 a day, which includes nursing, provided that one of the college nurses is able to care for her. A special nurse for one student costs approximately $8.30 a day or $58.10 a week, which includes the cost of the nurse's fee, board and laundry. In contagious diseases the fee is $9.30 a day or $65.10 a week.

Any resident graduate student becoming ill while away from college is asked to communicate immediately with the Dean of the Graduate School.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

A Health Committee consisting of the President of the College, the Dean of the College, who is Chairman of the Committee, the Dean of the Graduate School, the Director of Physical Education, the Physicians of the College, the Wardens and the Senior Resident of Radnor Hall has charge of the health of the students.

Health

The department of health requires that every student file with the Chairman a certificate of a recent medical examination signed by the student's physician.

A certificate of vaccination within one year of entering college is also demanded, otherwise students must be vaccinated by one of the college physicians. The fee for such vaccination is five dollars.

All entering resident graduate students are required to have a medical, physical and oculist's examination and to follow the health directions of the physicians of the college which will be given them after the examination; those who are reported by the physicians of the college as suffering from uncorrected eye trouble will be expected to take the necessary measures to correct it.

Eminent specialists practising in Philadelphia have consented to act as consulting physicians to the college; their fees will be furnished upon request. Students may consult the Resident Physician without charge at her office in the college Infirmary during the regular office hours.

Students ill in the graduate hall are required to report their illness immediately to the Senior Resident. Such cases will always be investigated and if the College Physician believes it advisable, the student will be admitted to the Infirmary. Outside physicians will not be permitted to visit students in the graduate hall, unless called in special cases by the College Physician.

Graduate Association

In 1893 the Bryn Mawr Graduate Association was organized by the graduate students then in residence, its object being to further the social life of the graduate students. In 1925 it took over the regulation of matters in regard to the conduct of the graduate students in cases not purely academic or affecting hall management or the student body as a whole. All persons studying in the Graduate School are members of this association.

THE DEGREES OF MASTER OF ARTS AND DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY

The Degree of Master of Arts

The Degree of Master of Arts

The degree of Master of Arts in no case will be conferred by the college as an honorary degree, but only upon the completion of the following requirements:

A graduate student who desires to become a candidate for the M.A. degree should make application, if possible, before May 1st of the year preceding that in which she expects to take the degree. With her application she should submit her complete academic record, including matriculation credits, in order that the Committee on Graduate Students may estimate her work and advise her as to the removal of any deficiencies.

The Committee on Graduate Students has power to grant special consideration to foreign students whose previous training has been of a different character from that required for the A.B. degree in the United States. In such cases, however, the committee may reserve its decision until the student has given satisfactory evidence of her ability in graduate work at Bryn Mawr.

Any deficiency in the preliminary requirements must be made up according to the specifications of the Committee on Graduate Students not later than the last year in which courses are taken for the degree.

PRELIMINARY REQUIREMENTS

Requirements for the Degree of Master of Arts

(a) Admission to courses.

Preliminary training equivalent to two and one-half units* of undergraduate work at Bryn Mawr College in the subject of the course is in general required for admission to a course to be counted for the M.A. degree. In special cases, with the approval of the department concerned, work in related subjects of equivalent value in preparation may be accepted. In all such cases, however, the candidate must have taken in some one subject the equivalent to two and one-half units of undergraduate work at Bryn Mawr College.

(b) Knowledge of Literature, Philosophy, Psychology, Laboratory Sciences, Mathematics.

A candidate is required to present credits for at least eight semester hours (or one Bryn Mawr undergraduate unit) of Literature based on a preparation of three college-entrance units or their equivalent in college work. A candidate is required to present credits for sixteen semester hours

* Counted by semester hours this amounts to approximately 20 semester hours. For admission to graduate seminars in the Department of English, however, approximately thirty-two semester hours are required.

(or two Bryn Mawr undergraduate units) of undergraduate work in two or more of the following subjects: Philosophy, Psychology, Laboratory Science (i. e. Physics, Chemistry, Geology, or Biology, accompanied by laboratory work), or Mathematics. Not more than eight semester hours may be in any one of these subjects and sixteen hours may not be entirely in Philosophy and Psychology. If the candidate has no college or matriculation credit in a laboratory science she will be required by the Committee on Graduate Students to make up her deficiency by taking in Bryn Mawr College, or in another institution approved by the committee, at least six semester hours of laboratory science, which may be counted in the above sixteen hours.

(c) Knowledge of Latin.

A candidate must be able to read Latin prose of moderate difficulty. This requirement will ordinarily be met by the presentation of three units of matriculation credit. A candidate who falls short of this requirement must make up her deficiency in a way prescribed by the Committee on Graduate Students.

(d) Knowledge of French and German.

A candidate must prove her ability to read French and German by passing written examinations. The Bryn Mawr undergraduate examinations in French and German are accepted as fulfilling this requirement in the case of graduates of Bryn Mawr College.

Examinations in French and German are held each year within two weeks after the opening of college and candidates must present themselves for examination at this time. For candidates who fail in this examination a second examination is held before Thanksgiving. These examinations shall be of the type of the Bryn Mawr General Language Examinations for the A.B. degree, and shall be conducted by the Committees on General Language Examinations.

If five years have passed between the date of a candidate's language examination and the autumn of the year in which she proposes to present herself for the degree she shall be re-examined unless the department in which she is working recommends to the Graduate Committee to excuse her from further examination on the ground of her proficiency in French and German, or French, or German. This shall apply to Bryn Mawr graduates as to all other candidates.

(e) Ability to use English.

A candidate must be able to give a report and carry on discussion in satisfactory English. A candidate who is unable to write correct English will be required by the Committee on Graduate Students to make up her deficiencies in this respect by doing special work under the direction of the Department of English.

Deficiencies in preliminary requirements may not be made up later than the last year in which courses are taken for the degree.

REQUIREMENTS

Requirements for the Degree of Master of Arts

Courses.—Every candidate must attend at Bryn Mawr College three unit graduate courses* or two unit graduate courses and one and one-half units of advanced undergraduate work.† These courses must be taken in a field established by one of the accepted combinations of Majors and Minors for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.‡

Examinations.—Every candidate is required to take examinations on the courses offered. These examinations are held in the first week of the May examination period. The examination books together with the examiner's estimate of them as "satisfactory" or "unsatisfactory" shall be sent to the Committee on Graduate Students which shall report to the Academic Council.

The work for the degree need not be taken in one year, but examinations on all the courses offered must be taken in the May examination period of the year in which the degree is conferred.

The Degree of Doctor of Philosophy and Master of Arts

The degree of Doctor of Philosophy and Master of Arts will in no case be conferred by the college as an honorary degree, but only upon the completion of the following requirements:

Before an applicant for the degree of Ph.D. can be accepted as a candidate she must submit to the Committee on Graduate Students in writing§ an account of her general preparation, stating in particular the extent of her knowledge of French, German and Latin and also the subjects she wishes to offer as Major and Minors for the degree and the amount and character of her previous work in these subjects. If this statement is satisfactory she will be registered as a candidate. If the candidate's preparation is found by the Committee on Graduate Students to be in any way insufficient she shall be required to undertake suitable extra work.

REQUIREMENTS

Requirements for the Degree of Doctor of Philosophy and Master of Arts

1. Time.—The candidate shall devote to graduate work at least the equivalent of three full years. This minimum will usually be exceeded.

2. Residence.—Two years of work in residence at Bryn Mawr are required. The remainder of the work may be done at other institutions approved by the Committee on Graduate Students. In special cases the committee may accept work done under direction of scholars not directly connected with a college or university.

* A graduate seminary counts as one graduate unit.

† Undergraduate work thus substituted, while counting for the M.A. degree, may not be counted for the Ph.D. degree.

‡ In exceptional cases for students who have already proved their ability in graduate or advanced undergraduate work in their chief subject of study, a special plan of independent work may be recommended by the department concerned as a substitute for one of the unit graduate courses or for all or part of the one and one-half units of undergraduate work. The recommendation of students for this plan is entirely within the discretion of the department.

 This is the form in which the degree has always been conferred.

§ Using the application blank issued by the Committee on Graduate Students.

3. Subjects.—The course of study shall consist of one principal and one or two subordinate subjects and shall be divided between at least two departments. The principal subject is known as the Major. When there are two subordinate subjects, one shall be in the same department as the Major or in a closely allied department and is known as the Associated Minor; the other shall be in a different department from the Major and is known as the Independent Minor. When there is one subordinate subject it may be (a) the Independent Minor alone, in which case the Associated Minor and the Major are in the same subject, or (b) equivalent to both the Independent Minor and the Associated Minor, in which case it is known as a Double Minor. A list of all the approved combinations of Majors and Minors has been issued by the Academic Council and no combination not on this approved list shall be allowed without special action of the Council, except that in the case of Independent Minors the Committee on Graduate Students has the power to accept a subject in a combination not on the approved list, such action, when taken, to be reported to the Council.

4. Courses.—Subject to the exception stated below, eight unit graduate courses or seminaries are required for the Ph.D. degree. A unit graduate course or seminary requires approximately one-third of a student's time for one year, so that three such courses will represent full-time work. Students are not permitted to register for more work than this.

*Graduate
Courses or Seminaries*

Some courses are offered which require less than one-third of a student's time and these count as proportionate parts of a unit course. When work done elsewhere is offered in partial fulfilment of the requirements for the degree at Bryn Mawr, the Committee on Graduate Students shall determine the equivalent of such work in terms of unit graduate courses at Bryn Mawr.

Of the eight courses required, six shall be in the Major and Associated Minor and two in the Independent Minor. The division of courses between the Major and Associated Minor, whether these are in the same or different departments, shall be subject to the approval of the Supervising Committee. If the Associated Minor and Independent Minor are in the same department, not less than four courses shall be taken in the major subject.

While the eight graduate courses required are understood to be organized courses, as announced in the Calendar, the department in which a candidate's major work is being done may, at its discretion, direct that other work shall be substituted for one of them. This substitution may be in the Major or in one of the Minors. Work thus substituted for a regular course may not be work upon the dissertation, except in the departments of laboratory science, viz., Physics, Chemistry, Geology, Biology, and Experimental Psychology. Such work must be covered in one of the examinations regularly provided or by a special examination or report. It shall be registered at the Office of the Dean of the Graduate School and at the time of registration its character and the way in which it is to be tested shall be indicated. When, under this option, only one graduate course is taken in the Independent Minor, no mention of the Independent Minor shall be made in the diploma.

If a student's complete work in any one department exceeds two courses it may not be taken with a single instructor, except with the permission of the Committee on Graduate Students.

No undergraduate courses shall count towards the Ph.D. degree, even though a candidate may be obliged to take such courses in order to supplement her preparation in her subjects, except certain advanced courses in science recognized by the Committee on Graduate Students as equivalent to graduate courses in virtue of assigned supplementary reading or laboratory work or both. Such assigned supplementary reading or laboratory work shall be reported in writing by the instructor to the Committee on Graduate Students so as to indicate in what respect the course differs from undergraduate work.

All graduate courses must be completed before the Final Examination.

Clubs*

Journal Clubs.—Every candidate takes part in the work of three Journal Clubs, two in her Major and one in her Associated Minor; but candidates who are in residence for only two years may omit one of the three. Departments may, however, require participation in Journal Clubs on the part of all students who are pursuing the work as a Major.

*Language
Examinations*

5. Tests in French, German, English and Latin.—Every candidate must pass a written examination in the reading at sight of such French and German as it will be necessary for her to read in the course of her work in the major subject. These examinations shall be taken as soon after registration as possible; in any case not later than one calendar year* before the date of the Final Examination.† Any department so desiring may, however, require the passing of these examinations at an earlier point in the student's course. In case of failure, the Committee on Graduate Students may allow a second trial, but not later than an early date in the academic year in which the candidate is to complete the requirements for the degree. If the candidate's Major or Minor is modern French or German she will be excused from the corresponding test.

Every candidate must be able to write clear and correct English and may be required to furnish to the Committee on Graduate Students satisfactory evidence of such ability. The candidate may also be required to give evidence that she has some knowledge of Latin.

Dissertation

6. Dissertation.—The candidate shall present a dissertation which must be the result of independent investigation in the field covered by the major subject. It must contain new results, arguments or conclusions or it must present accepted results in a new light. It must be published within three years from the Commencement after the candidate has passed the

* The Committee on Graduate Students regularly offers these examinations on the first Saturday after the Thanksgiving vacation, on the first day of the Mid-Year Examination period and on the first Saturday after the Spring Vacation.

† Language examinations in French and German for the Ph.D. degree may be taken in the autumn of the year in which the student applies for the degree provided she has been abroad the preceding year and therefore unable to present herself for examination.

Final Examination (unless a special extension of time is granted by the Committee on Graduate Students), and 150* copies must be supplied to the College (addressed to the Office of the Dean of the Graduate School). The candidate shall not be entitled to use the degree until her dissertation shall have been published in approved form.

7. Examinations.—The progress and attainments of the candidate shall be tested by examinations and certified, as specified in the printed regulations.

Examinations

* Two of these must be bound in a specified manner for use in the Library.

COURSE OF STUDY

Graduate Courses

Graduate courses, which are open only to graduate students, are offered in Comparative Philology and Linguistics, Greek, Latin, English Philology, including Anglo-Saxon, Early and Middle English, English Literature, Modern and Old French, Italian, Spanish, German Literature, Gothic, Teutonic Philology, Old Norse, Old High German, Middle High German, Old Saxon, Biblical Literature, History, Economics and Politics, Social Economy and Social Research, Philosophy, Psychology, Education, Classical Archæology, History of Art, Music, Mathematics, Physics, Physical and Organic Chemistry, Geology, Mineralogy, Palæontology, Morphology and Physiology.

Advanced undergraduate courses to which graduate students are admitted are offered in all departments.

REGULATIONS

Regulations Lists of approved associated and independent minors for all departments will be found in the Regulations of the Academic Council.

Books needed by the graduate students are collected in the seminary library of each department.

Biblical Literature

PROFESSOR: HENRY JOEL CADBURY, Ph.D.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

The work of the department is so arranged that students may specialize in Biblical history and literature or in Hellenistic Greek and the private reading and original research of such students will be directed. Two hours a week of seminary work are offered in each subject and in some cases graduate students may profitably attend the elective courses.

Seminary in Critical Readings of the Greek New Testament: Dr. Cadbury. Two hours a week throughout the year.

Philological, historical and exegetical study of selected writings in the Greek Bible and in kindred Hellenistic literature. A knowledge of Greek is required.

Seminary in the Bible: Dr. Cadbury. Two hours a week throughout the year.

The study in successive years of different major literary and historical problems of the Bible, with the modern discussions of them. A knowledge of the original languages is useful but not indispensable.

1931-32: Gospel of John.

1st Semester.

() Contacts between Christianity and Paganism.

2nd Semester.

In the second semester the seminary will be conducted by Dr. Taylor, Dr. Cadbury and Professor Kirsopp Lake of Harvard University, Mary Flexner Lecturer for 1931-32.

1932-33: The Book of Acts.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Free Elective Courses

The Literary History of the Bible: Dr. Cadbury.
(Given in 1931-32)

Credit: One-half unit.

A general course on the contents of the English Bible (including apocryphal writings) studied from the viewpoint of literary forms and origins and aiming to enable the student to recognize the influence of the Bible on art, literature and other aspects of civilization.

Rapid Reading in the Greek New Testament: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

This course is open to students who have passed the matriculation examination in Greek or attended the elementary course in Greek. It is intended to give a knowledge of Biblical Greek and facility in reading. The course is varied so that it may be pursued through several semesters.

1st Semester.

The Religion of Israel: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

The course includes a survey of the development of religious ideas and practices among the Hebrews during the early monarchy, under the influence of the prophets and in the beginning of Judaism.

2nd Semester.

The Life and Teaching of Jesus: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

The course is a discussion of the principal problems presented by the gospels for a recovery of an understanding of the career and character of Jesus of Nazareth.

These courses may be elected separately each with one-half unit of credit.

Elementary Hebrew: Dr. Cadbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given when requested)

Biology

PROFESSOR:

DAVID HILT TENNENT, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATES:

*DOROTHEA EGLESTON SMITH, Ph.D.

ERNEST WESLEY BLANCHARD, Ph.D.

GRADUATE COURSES

Ten hours a week of seminary work and graduate lectures are offered to graduate students of biology accompanied by the direction of private reading, laboratory work and original research. The advanced undergraduate courses of the department may be elected by graduate students. These courses are varied from year to year, so as to form a consecutive course for students who wish to make biology one of the chief subjects of the examination for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Such students may specialize either in animal morphology under the guidance of Dr. Tennent or in physiology or biochemistry under the guidance of Dr. Blanchard.

*Graduate
Courses*

Seminary in Zoölogy: Dr. Tennent. Three hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1931-32: Cytology.

The work deals with the anatomy of the cell and the relations and functions of its various structures in unicellular and multicellular organisms. Special attention is given to the phenomena of spermatogenesis and oögenesis and the theories connected therewith.

1932-33: Embryology of Invertebrates.

* Granted leave of absence for the year 1931-32.

The work includes a systematic survey of the normal development of invertebrates; of the problems of germinal organization, cleavage and differentiation and a discussion of the bearing of these questions on evolution and inheritance.

Seminary in Physiology: Dr. Blanchard.

Three hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1931-32)

This course consists of supervised readings, lectures and discussions on selected topics. In order to introduce the student to the methods of physiological research it is recommended that each student undertake some special problem. The advanced course in physiology, or its equivalent, is a prerequisite. A knowledge of the elements of organic, physical and biochemistry is assumed.

Seminary in Biochemistry: Dr. Blanchard.

Three hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1932-33)

This course consists of supervised reading on some lectures and discussions on selected topics. It provides also a pre-research training in laboratory methods. In certain cases a special problem may be undertaken. The advanced undergraduate course or its equivalent is prerequisite. Some knowledge of organic and physical chemistry is assumed.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Tennent and Dr. Blanchard.

There is no regular course of laboratory instruction for graduates. Each student desiring to devote a considerable portion of her time to such work is given an experimental problem for verification or extension. The nature of the work depends in each case on the qualifications of the student.

Journal Club

Biological Journal Club: Dr. Tennent and Dr. Blanchard.

One hour a week throughout the year.

The advanced students and the instructors meet for the presentation and discussion of topics of current biological literature.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Advanced Courses

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses.

Embryology of Vertebrates: Dr. Tennent.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

This course consists of lectures, assigned reading and laboratory work on the embryology of vertebrates. The lectures deal with the development of specific forms and with theoretical questions of embryological interest. The department has material for the study of the development of Amphioxus, Ascidian, Amia, Lepidosteus, Squalus, Ctenolabrus, Necturus, Rana, Chrysemys, Chick and Pig. At least six hours of laboratory work are required.

The course is divided as follows: Early stages of Development is the subject of the first semester and Organogeny is the subject of the second semester.

Cytology: Dr. Tennent.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1932-33)

This course consists of a study of the structure of protoplasm, the structure of the cell, the phenomena of cell division, maturation and fertilization. Both plant and animal cells are studied and instruction is given in methods of preparing cytological material for microscopical examination. At least six hours of laboratory work are required.

Biochemistry: Dr. Blanchard.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

This course deals with the simpler aspects of the chemistry of living organisms. The properties and reactions of substances of biological importance are studied. Under ordinary circumstances it is expected that a student will have had organic chemistry. There are two lectures and six hours of laboratory work each week.

Advanced Physiology: Dr. Blanchard.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1932-33)

A study of the vital functions of living organisms from the chemical and physical as well as from the biological standpoint. During the second semester the stress is placed upon mammalian physiology. The laboratory work is planned to develop a knowledge of the technique of physiological experimentation as well as to present the facts in a form in which they may be easily grasped by the student. It is expected, except in special instances, that the student will have had the equivalent of two years of chemistry. There are two hours of lecture and a minimum of six hours of laboratory work per week. Students may, with the permission of the instructor, perform a certain amount of independent investigation.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Theoretical Biology: Dr. Tennent.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

This course deals with the development of theories of biology. It is open to students who have completed the first year course in biology. It will not be given for less than five students.

*Free
Elective
Courses*

Biology of Bacteria and Protozoa: Dr. Smith.

Credit: One unit.

During the first semester the time is devoted to an introduction to general bacteriology, covering the routine bacteriological technique and a consideration of the principles of immunity and infection. During the second semester problems of growth and cell division of bacteria and protozoa are treated. The rôle of bacteria in nature and their economic importance are also discussed. Some special work is assigned to each student. The first year course in Biology is prerequisite. There are two lectures and six hours of laboratory work each week. This course was given as an advanced undergraduate course in 1930-31.

Chemistry

PROFESSOR:

JAMES LLEWELLYN CRENSHAW, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATE:

NELSON KELLOGG RICHTMYER, Ph.D.

INSTRUCTOR:

EDITH HAMILTON LANMAN, M.A.

GRADUATE COURSES

The graduate courses in chemistry consist of lectures upon inorganic, organic and physical chemistry, seminars, reports upon current chemical literature and laboratory work. A reading knowledge of French and German is indispensable.

*Graduate
Courses*

The lecture courses are varied from year to year to meet the requirements of students and to form a consecutive course for those who wish to make chemistry the major subject in the examination for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Such students may specialize either in physical or inorganic chemistry under the direction of Dr. Crenshaw or in organic chemistry under the direction of Dr. Richtmyer.

Chemical Seminary, Physical Chemistry: Dr. Crenshaw.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

In the lectures no attempt is made to give a general survey of the subject but certain selected portions of the science are treated in detail and the student is made familiar with problems of current interest. Students counting this course as the equivalent of a seminary are required to do enough laboratory work to make the work of the course occupy fourteen hours a week. The laboratory work consists of physico-chemical measurements.

Inorganic Chemistry: Dr. Crenshaw. One hour a week throughout the year.
(Given in each year)

The work of the seminary consists of lectures, required reading and reports on various topics. The needs of the individual students are considered in selecting the subjects for discussion.

Chemical Seminary, Organic Chemistry: Dr. Richtmyer.
One hour a week throughout the year.
(Given in each year)

This is intended primarily for students who are carrying on research in organic chemistry and consists of reports on assigned topics which are usually related to the research in which the student is engaged.

Graduate Organic Chemistry: Dr. Richtmyer.
One hour a week throughout the year.
(Given in each year)

Lectures, reading and occasional reports cover the historical developments and present status of subjects of current interest.

Students counting this course as the equivalent of a seminary are required to do enough laboratory work to make the work of the course occupy fourteen hours a week. The nature of this work depends so largely on the past training of the student that no definite statement can be made regarding it. A sufficiently advanced student may be assigned a problem to investigate.

Journal Club Chemica' Journal Club: Dr. Crenshaw, Dr. Richtmyer and Miss Lanman.
One hour a week throughout the year.

The advanced students and the instructors meet to hear reports and discuss recent scientific articles.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Advanced Courses

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses.

Physical Chemistry: Dr. Crenshaw. Credit: One and one-half units.
(Given in each year)

The aim of the lectures is to extend the student's knowledge of physical chemistry and to lay a foundation for independent work in this subject. The lectures are supplemented by assigned reading and reports and are intended to give a general outline of the subject. The solution of a large number of problems is required.

The laboratory work is designed to prepare the students for physico-chemical research. When this course is offered as a seminary the student is required to devote to it one-third of her time.

Advanced Organic Chemistry: Dr. Richtmyer. Credit: One unit.
(Given in each year)

The course consists of lectures and assigned reading with occasional reports and laboratory work. During the past year the following subjects received particular emphasis: quaternary ammonium compounds, simple types of unsaturation, the ketenes, conjugated systems, non-benzenoid cyclic hydrocarbons, the properties of aromatic compounds, heterocyclic systems, the carbohydrates, stereochemistry. The laboratory work includes a study of the more important synthetical reactions of organic chemistry.

Inorganic Chemistry: Miss Lanman.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

Selected topics in inorganic chemistry are discussed in detail and parallel reading is required. The laboratory work consists of advanced quantitative analyses.

Classical Archæology

PROFESSOR:

*RHYS CARPENTER, Ph.D.

PROFESSOR AND ACTING

HEAD OF THE DEPARTMENT: MARY HAMILTON SWINDLER, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR:

VALENTIN MÜLLER, Ph.D.

Two archæological seminars of two hours a week each and a graduate lecture course of one hour a week throughout the year are offered to graduate students who have done elementary archæological work and also a journal club meeting one and one-half hours a fortnight. In addition individual students will be directed in special work by means of private conferences.

GRADUATE COURSES

Two seminars in archæology, a graduate course and a journal club in archæology are offered to graduate students in addition to the undergraduate courses which are open also to graduate students. A good reading knowledge of both French and German is indispensable and familiarity with both Greek and Latin, though not required, is of the utmost value for graduate work in archæology.

*Graduate
Courses*

In connection with graduate courses the students have access to the collections belonging to the department containing replicas of Greek and Roman Coins, facsimiles of gems and seals and a collection of original vase fragments.

The seminars are open only to graduate students who have had some previous training in classical archæology. The order of the subjects may be changed in accordance with the needs of the students.

Archæological Seminary: Dr. Swindler. Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1931-32: Greek Vase Painting of the Archaic Period.

1932-33: Ancient Painting, including a detailed survey of Cretan Frescoes, Painted Plaques, Stelæ and Sarcophagi, Greek Vases, Paintings found in Etruscan Tombs, Pompeian Wall Decoration and the Mummy Portraits from the Fayum.

1933-34: Aegean Archæology with Emphasis on the Recent Discoveries in Crete and Mycenæ.

Archæological Seminary: Dr. Müller. Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1931-32: Archaic Greek Art and its Origin.

1932-33: Interrelations between Oriental and Mediterranean Art.

* Granted leave of absence to fill the post of Director of the American School for Classical Studies in Athens.

Greek Epigraphy: Dr. Carpenter.* One hour a week throughout the year.
(Not given in 1931-32)

In the first semester the origin of the Greek alphabet and the epichoric forms are studied. Roehl's Imagines and Part I of Robert's Introduction to Greek Epigraphy are used as textbooks. In the second semester a variety of inscriptions of artistic and topographic interest are read. The emphasis is archæological rather than linguistic or politico-historical.

Journal Club Archaeological Journal Club: Dr. Carpenter,* Dr. Swindler and Dr. Müller. One and a half hours a fortnight throughout the year.

The graduate students and the instructors meet for the presentation and discussion of topics of current archæological literature.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSE

(Given in each year)

Advanced Course 1st Semester.

Egyptian and Mesopotamian Archæology: Dr. Müller.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

A study of the arts of Egypt, Mesopotamia, Persia and the smaller intermediate cultures of Eastern Asia Minor, Syria (Hittite art), Phœnicia and Palestine. Architecture, sculpture, relief work and minor arts are dealt with, their principles and evolution from prehistoric times until the end of the ancient world.

2nd Semester.

Ægean Archæology, Crete, Mycenæ and the Islands from 3000 to 1100 B. C.: Dr. Swindler.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Comparative Philology and Linguistics

This department is under the joint direction of the professors in charge of philological work in the language departments. Comparative Philology and Linguistics may be offered as an independent minor but not as a Major subject for the Ph.D. Graduate students in the language departments, if so directed by the department of major work, may take any of the courses listed below and count them as a part of their philology in the Major Department. Undergraduate preparation entitling a student to do graduate work in any of the language departments will entitle her to work in this department.

The following courses are offered:

Old and Middle Irish: Dr. Mezger. Two hours a week during one semester.
(Given in 1931-32)

Comparative grammar of Old Irish. Interpretation of texts. For students of comparative philology or such as want to read the tales of the Cuchulinn and Finn cycles.

Introduction to Indo-European Linguistics: Dr. Mezger.

Two hours a week during one semester.

(Given in 1931-32)

After a general introduction to linguistic science, the relations of the principal languages of the Indo-European group will be studied with respect to sounds, inflection, syntax and word-formation. One dialect (preferably Lithuanian or Church Slavonic) will be dealt with more closely.

*Granted leave of absence to fill the post of Director of the American School for Classical Studies in Athens.

Sanskrit: Dr. Mezger.

Two hours a week during one semester.

(Given in 1932-33)

Sounds and forms of Sanskrit are studied on a comparative basis.

Old and Middle Welsh: Dr. Mezger.

Two hours a week during one semester.

(Given in 1932-33)

Comparative grammar. Reading of the Mabinogion.

Historical Grammar of Greek and Latin: Dr. Broughton.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1933-34)

A study of the development of sounds and forms of Greek and Latin. Introduction to the study of Greek and Italic dialects.

The following courses are described in the announcements of the several language departments, but may also be offered as a part of the work in Comparative Philology:

Graduate Courses

ENGLISH PHILOLOGY

Old English.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

Middle English.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

English Historical Grammar.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

ROMANCE PHILOLOGY

Introduction to Old French Philology.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

Old Italian.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

Spanish Philology and Old Spanish Readings.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

GERMANIC PHILOLOGY

Introduction to Germanic Philology.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

Old Norse.

Two hours a week during the first semester.

Old Saxon and Old Frisian.

Two hours a week during the second semester.

Germanic Metrics and German Style.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

Seminary in Germanic Philology.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

GRADUATE COURSES

Two or three seminars are offered each year in addition to the direction of private reading and original research. Two or more advanced undergraduate courses which may be elected by graduate students are given in each year. Students may offer either economics or politics as their major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

Graduate Courses

Seminary in Economics: Dr. Marion Parris Smith.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

The object of the seminary is to train students in the methods of research and in the organization of material. Through short reports and longer papers, members of the seminary are given practice in using original sources and in critical study of secondary sources. The seminary discussion is supplemented by occasional lectures. Each student receives individual direction according to her particular needs and interests. The graduate studies pursued in the seminary are designed to assist in fulfilling the requirements for the higher degrees, in qualifying the student for teaching or further research in economics and in preparing for various government civil service examinations.

1931-32: Economic Thought in the Nineteenth Century.

1932-33: The Industrial Revolution in Great Britain and Europe.

1933-34: Modern Problems of Distribution.

Seminary in Politics: Dr. Fenwick.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

The methods of the seminary are designed to guide advanced students in special research work along the lines indicated by the titles of the courses. Some lectures are given but the main attention is devoted to the presentation and criticism of the results of studies made by the students themselves.

1931-32: Constitutional Questions Involved in Modern Economic and Social Problems.

1932-33: International Law.

1933-34: The Constitutional Law of the United States.

Seminary in Politics: Dr. Wells.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Not given in 1931-32)

1932-33: The History of Political Thought.

The purpose of this seminary is twofold: first, to familiarize the student with the writings of the principal political thinkers from Plato to the present time and second, to enable the student to grasp clearly the main problems which political theory is called upon to explain and to solve. The work of the seminary includes lectures, general reading, student reports and general class discussions.

1933-34: Comparative Municipal Government and Administration.

1934-35: American and Foreign Political Parties and Electoral Problems.

Journal Club

Economics and Politics Journal Club: Dr. Marion Parris Smith, Dr. Fenwick and Dr. Wells.

Two hours once a fortnight throughout the year.

At the meetings recent books and articles are reviewed and the results of special investigations presented for discussion, comment and criticism.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Advanced Courses

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses.

American Economic and Social Problems: Dr. M. P. Smith.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

(This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year courses in economics.)

The object of this course is to give advanced students training in the use of source material for studies in social and economic problems and in research methods useful for graduate or professional studies. The topics studied will vary from year to year according to the needs and interests of the students in the class, or as social and economic problems become centers of public attention. They will include such subjects as the Business Cycle, Unemployment and problems connected with the Depression.

International Law: Dr. Fenwick.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1932-33)

(This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year courses in politics.)

The object of the course is to examine the existing rules of international law in order to determine their origin, their general observance and their applicability to the changed conditions of modern life. Special stress is laid upon the interpretation of international law by the United States and upon the organization and administration of the League of Nations.

American Constitutional Law: Dr. Fenwick.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1933-34)

(This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year courses in politics.)

This is a strictly legal course devoted to an analysis and criticism of the leading decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States. The method followed consists in the assignment of individual cases for oral report and discussion, together with longer written reports covering a group of related cases.

2nd Semester.

Money and Banking: Dr. Dulles.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

(The course is open only to students who have completed the first year courses in economics.)

Political Parties and Public Opinion: Dr. Wells.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

(This course is open to students who have completed the first and second year courses in politics.)

The course begins with a study of various theories as to the nature and functions of political parties. The organization, methods, finance and legal regulation of American and foreign parties are next examined. Attention is then devoted to the nature and rôle of public opinion in modern politics and to the various agencies through which such opinion is expressed.

Municipal Institutions: Dr. Wells.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1932-33)

FREE ELECTIVE COURSE

Elements of Law: Dr. Fenwick.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

(This course may be elected only by students who have completed the first year course in politics or in economics or in history.)

The object of this course is to familiarize the student with the principles and technical terms of those branches of private law with which the ordinary citizen is brought into contact. The topics covered include Persons and Domestic Relations, Contracts, Torts, Real and Personal Property and the chief forms of procedure. The lectures are supplemented by a study and discussion of court cases bearing on the subject.

Education

This Department is organized in part from the Phebe Anna Thorne Endowment

PROFESSOR: AGNES LOW ROGERS, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR: ILSE FOREST, Ph.D.

INSTRUCTOR: E. LOUISE HAMILTON, Ph.D.

The department offers graduate courses designed to meet the needs of two types of students—graduate students who desire to qualify for a teacher's certificate and graduate students who have had sufficient undergraduate training in education to qualify them for graduate work leading to a higher degree.

The degree of Master of Arts in Education and the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Education are open to graduates of all colleges of high standing under the general conditions prescribed for their degrees.

Students offering themselves as candidates for these degrees in Education must have studied in undergraduate courses: Psychology for 10 semester hours, Principles of Education for 4 semester hours; Sociology, Statistics or Education singly or in any combination for 6 semester hours.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

Six hours a week of seminary work are offered in each year to graduate students of education.

The Department of Education maintains a clinic for the mental and educational examination of school children. It offers psychological service to the schools of the vicinity.

The clinic is housed in a building behind Cartref where rooms have been equipped for the individual examination of pupils and for remedial work with pupils. There is a laboratory for the statistical work involved in school service carried on by the department. In addition to intensive studies of individual children who are failing with school work, testing programs have been carried through in schools and complete psychological service has been supplied to one large school. The clinic is prepared to extend this service to other schools. In the clinic there is a collection of tests for these purposes together with measurement devices of all types. It is equipped also with remedial materials.

Students electing education as their major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy may elect educational psychology, educational methodology, economics, social economy, social history, social psychology or experimental and systematic psychology, as the associated minor. The list of approved independent minors will be found in the Regulations of the Academic Council.

Dr. Rogers will offer one of the following seminaries in accordance with the need and preparation of the students.

Seminary in Advanced Mental Measurement: Dr. Rogers.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

This seminary is devoted to the critical investigation of specific problems in the field of mental measurement.

Seminary in Clinical Methods in Child Guidance: Dr. Rogers.Three hours a week throughout the year.

This seminary gives training in the diagnosis of educational difficulties at all levels and practical experience in giving remedial treatment. Critical study is made of the diagnostic and remedial methods now in use. The seminary is recommended to students preparing for work in child guidance clinics, in child welfare and as school supervisors, visiting teachers and school counsellors.

Seminary in Psychology of Speech: Dr. Rogers.Two hours a week throughout the year.

This seminary gives a systematic presentation of the psychology of speech, the physiological basis of speech, speech defects and methods of correction.

Seminary in Social Education: Dr. Forest.Two hours a week during the first semester.Seminary in Advanced Principles of Education: Dr. Forest.Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in each year)

This seminary is organized to give students' experience in recognizing and solving in actual practice some of the problems inherent in teaching their major subject to high school and elementary school pupils. The work includes a study of child development and behavior in direct relation to problems of curriculum making and class room method. The seminary is planned with special reference to the needs of students taking their first year of graduate study in education.

Seminary in Theory of Education: Dr. Forest.Two hours a week throughout the year.

This seminary is devoted to the study of modern educational theory and to a consideration of the issues involved in actual and proposed solutions of present educational problems. Practical problems of curriculum, method and school administration directly in line with the interests of individual students will be discussed in the seminary and will in so far as possible determine the content of the theoretical readings in the philosophy of education.

Journal Club in Education: Dr. Rogers, Dr. Forest and Dr. Hamilton.*Two hours once a fortnight throughout the year.Journal
Club

The instructors and students meet to report on and discuss recent reviews and articles and the results of special investigations are presented for comment and criticism.

Journal Club: Miss Donnelly, Dr. Chew, Dr. Crandall, Dr. Herben and Dr. Mezger. Journal Club

One and one-half hours in alternate weeks throughout the year.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

English Critics of the Nineteenth Century: Miss Donnelly. Advanced Courses
Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32 and again in 1933-34)

Carlyle, Ruskin, Arnold, Pater and, if time allows, two or three other writers are studied with regard to their theories of criticism and their influence upon the thought of their time. Reports are required from each student.

English Literature from Dryden to Johnson: Miss Donnelly. Credit: One unit

(Given in 1932-33 and again in 1934-35)

Dryden, Swift, Pope, Addison, Johnson and, if time allows, other writers are studied, with regard to the development of classicism. Reports are required from each student.

Tudor and Stuart Drama: Dr. Chew. Credit: One unit.
(Given in each year)

A review of the earlier periods of the drama is followed by more detailed study of the dramatists from Lyly and Marlowe to Ford and Shirley. The lectures deal in part with aspects of contemporary life as reflected in the drama. Reports are required from each student.

Middle English Romances: Dr. Herben. Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32 and again in 1933-34)

Selected romances in Middle English are read. The lectures deal with the development of Romance literature in Europe, with special reference to the romances of the Arthurian cycle.

Old English Literature; Beowulf: Dr. Herben. Credit: One unit.
(Given in 1932-33 and again in 1934-35)

The first part of the course is devoted to an outline of Old English grammar. Graded selections of Old English prose and poetry are read, followed by the Beowulf entire.

Private Reading. Credit: One-half unit.

For students who elect English as a major. Reading under direction to supplement the regular courses for which a time allowance is made. Occasional conferences are held.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Rhetoric: Dr. Crandall. Free Elective Courses
(Given in each year) Credit: One-half unit.

The course consists of the study of rhetoric, with parallel reading and analysis of English prose and verse and the writing of illustrative papers. The course is open to students who have completed the required course in English composition.

Argumentation: Dr. Crandall.Credit: One-half unit.(Given in each year)

The writing of arguments, the study of the form with reference to other types of writing and other problems connected with argumentation, formal and informal, make up the work of the course. The course is open to students who have completed the required course in English composition.

Criticism: Dr. Crandall.Credit: One-half unit.(Given in 1931-32 and again in 1933-34)

The course includes a study of the principles of criticism and the writing of critical exposition, the essay and kindred forms. The course is open to students who have completed the required course in English composition.

The Short Story: Dr. Crandall.Credit: One-half unit.(Given in 1932-33 and again in 1934-35)

The course deals with various forms of narrative, more especially the short story and includes a study of the work of representative authors, both English and French. The course is open to students who have completed the required course in English composition.

Versification: Mrs. King.Credit: One-half unit.(Given in each year)

The course is not historical but theoretical and students are required to write short exercises in verse every week. The course is open to students who have completed the required course in English composition.

Play Writing: Mr. Hughes.Credit: One-half unit.(Given in alternate years; to be given in 1932-33)

The modern drama is studied in connection with the writing of plays.

English Literature of the Seventeenth Century: Dr. Glen.Credit: One-half unit.(Given in 1931-32)

The literature of the seventeenth century, with especial stress on Milton and the lyric poets. Certain prose writers are also studied.

Reading of Shakespeare: Mr. King.Credit: One-half unit.(Given in 1931-32 and again in 1933-34)

This course is open only to those students who have attended the lectures in English diction given in the general course. A special study is made of the principles of correct delivery of blank verse. The needs of those students who expect to teach English literature and desire to read Shakespeare to their pupils are given special attention.

General Reading of Prose Authors: Mr. King.Credit: One-half unit.(Given in 1932-33 and again in 1934-35)

This course is open only to those students who have attended the lectures in English diction given in the general course.

Public Discussion and Debate: Mr. McKean.Credit: One-half unit.(Given in 1931-32)

This is a course in public speaking with special attention to the presentation of persuasive and interesting discussions of questions of persistent public interest, the rhetoric of public speaking and the delivery of speeches. Each student will prepare and deliver several speeches each term and participate in a class debate.

GRADUATE COURSES

Nine hours a week of seminary work and graduate lectures are offered each year to graduate students of French, accompanied by the direction of private reading and original research. The courses, covering the field of Old and Modern French Language and Literature, are arranged to form a triennial cycle. The work of each year centers about one main topic to be studied as a part of the history of French literature in its various relations to the general literature and civilization of the period concerned. Students may enter a seminary in any year and pursue it during three or more consecutive years.

Graduate Courses

Students who choose French literature as their major subject in their examination for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy must offer French philology as the associated minor and students who offer French philology as a major subject must offer French literature as the associated minor.

Seminary in French Literature of the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries: Dr. Schenck.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1931-32: Flaubert: Dr. Schenck.

1st Semester.

Baudelaire: Dr. Gilman.

2nd Semester.

1932-33: French Drama of the Eighteenth Century.

1933-34: Theories of French Romanticism.

Seminary in Historical Background of French Literature of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries: Mr. Canu.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1931-32: The Preparation for Classicism (1598-1660)

1932-33: The Monarchy of Louis XIV and Classicism (1660-1715).

1933-34: The Reformation and the Renaissance in France (1494-1559).

Seminary in Mediæval French Literature: Mrs. Frank.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1931-32: The Lyric, including the Courtly Lyric of Provence.

1932-33: Old French Narrative Poetry as Represented by the Chansons de Geste and the Romans Courtois.

1933-34: The Dramatic Literature of Mediæval France.

Introduction to Old French Philology: Mrs. Frank.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Part of each session is devoted to a critical reading of selected texts. This course is equivalent to a full seminary and counts as such.

Journal Club Romance Languages Journal Club: Dr. Schenck, Mrs. Frank, Dr. Gilman, Mr. Canu, Miss Soubeiran, Miss Marti, Dr. Gillet and Dr. Lograsso.

One and one-half hours a fortnight throughout the year.

The journal club is intended to acquaint the students with the results of contemporary research in the Romance languages and literature.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Advanced Courses The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses.

Geology

ASSOCIATES: EDWARD H. WATSON, Ph.D.
A. LINCOLN DRYDEN, JR., Ph.D.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses The graduate courses in geology consist of lectures, reports and laboratory work in the general fields of petrologic, stratigraphic and paleontologic geology. They are intended for students who have had undergraduate courses in general geology, paleontology and mineralogy. A reading knowledge of French and German is necessary.

The lecture courses may vary from year to year to meet the requirements or interests of students. In general, work in petrology and mineralogy will be under Dr. Watson and work in stratigraphy, sedimentation and paleontology under Dr. Dryden.

Students wishing to specialize in petrology or mineralogy should have had courses in general chemistry, general physics and physical chemistry; for those specializing in paleontology or stratigraphy, general biology, general chemistry and invertebrate zoology are necessary.

Seminary in Petrology: Dr. Watson. Three hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in each year)

The seminary is conducted by means of lectures, informal discussions, laboratory work and formal reports. The selection of subjects is dependent upon the needs of the individual students and is varied from year to year. It may include petrology, metamorphic geology or mineral deposits, with the main emphasis placed on the modern theories of origin for these bodies. This seminary is intended for those students wishing to make petrology the major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

Seminary in Sedimentation or Stratigraphy: Dr. Dryden.
Three hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in each year)

Detailed study of sediments is made by mechanical analysis and "heavy mineral" investigation. More general work is undertaken on the origin of the various sedimentary types. The work in stratigraphy will be a study of recent methods in correlation and differentiation of lithologic units.

Petrographic Methods: Dr. Watson. Six hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in each year)

The technique of the separation, identification and interpretation of minerals and rocks will be studied. The course will largely consist of laboratory work on specific problems for which formal reports will be made. It should be preceded by courses in determinative mineralogy and optical mineralogy.

Geological Surveying: Dr. Watson and Dr. Dryden.
Three hours a week with field work in the spring and fall.
(Given in alternate years)

The methods of geologic surveying and mapping, with the interpretation of field structures, will be considered. In the spring and fall actual problems in the field will be undertaken, including plane-table surveying.

Invertebrate Paleontology: Dr. Dryden.
Three hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in each year)

The course will serve as a guide to research work in paleontology. Questions of classification and nomenclature will be treated through several groups of invertebrates. Special problems and reports will be a part of the work.

Geological Journal Club: Dr. Watson and Dr. Dryden.
Two hours once a fortnight throughout the year.

*Journal
Club*

The graduate students and the instructors meet for the presentation and discussion of recent geological literature.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses.

*Advanced
Courses*

Optical Mineralogy and Descriptive Petrography: Dr. Watson.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Watson.

Credit: One and one-half units.

(Given in each year)

Optical Mineralogy is given during the first semester. The course deals with the principles of optical mineralogy and a full training is given in the immersion method of mineral identification. This course is essential for all courses in petrography and petrology.

Descriptive Petrography is given during the second semester. The course deals with the mineralogy, texture, chemistry, origin, and geographic distribution of igneous rocks.

Prerequisites: general geology, determinative mineralogy and optical mineralogy.

Stratigraphy: Dr. Dryden:

Laboratory Work: Dr. Dryden.

Credit: One and one-half units.

(Given in each year)

The course is essentially a study of regional geology with particular emphasis on physiography and environment. Recent advances in stratigraphic research, particularly those in sedimentation, are stressed.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Free Elective Courses

The elective courses in the Department of Geology will be given as the occasion arises.

1st Semester.

Vertebrate Paleontology: Dr. Dryden.

Credit: One-half unit.

Laboratory Work: Dr. Dryden.

A study of the general biology and detailed osteology of the great groups of the vertebrate fossils. Evolutionary trends in several groups will be given special attention.

2nd Semester.

History of Geology: Dr. Dryden.

Credit: One-half unit.

A lecture and reading course designed to impart a knowledge of the contributions of the outstanding workers in geology and to follow the development of the major geologic theories.

1st Semester.

Crystallography: Dr. Watson.

Credit: One-half unit.

Geometrical, physical and chemical crystallography will be discussed in the classroom. In the laboratory the study and determination of crystal models are undertaken and direction given in crystal measurement with the two-circle goniometer, in crystal projection and crystal drawing.

2nd Semester.

Introductory Economic Geology: Dr. Watson.

Credit: One-half unit.

The occurrence and origin of metallic and non-metallic mineral deposits. Reading with formal reports will be made on certain specific deposits. Elementary geology, historical geology and determinative mineralogy are prerequisites to this course.

GERMANIC PHILOLOGY

The instruction in this department is under the direction of Dr. Fritz Mezger. The English and the German departments together have provided for a complete course in Germanic philology, comprising both the study of the individual languages (Gothic, Norse, Anglo-Saxon, Old Saxon, Old High German, Middle High German, Middle Low German, etc.) and the study of general comparative philology.

Students intending to elect Germanic philology are advised to study Greek for at least one year during their undergraduate course.

Old Norse: Dr. Mezger.

Two hours a week during the first semester.

(Given in 1931-32)

This seminary is given when no seminary in Comparative Philology is given.

Old Saxon and Old Frisian: Dr. Mezger.

Two hours a week during the second semester.

(Given in 1931-32)

This seminary is given when no seminary in Comparative Philology is given.

Introduction to Germanic Philology: Dr. Mezger.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1932-33)

Gothic and West Germanic sounds and inflection are studied on a comparative basis.

Germanic Metrics and German Style: Dr. Mezger.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

This seminary is given when the seminars in Introduction to Germanic Philology and in Germanic Philology are not given.

Seminary in Germanic Philology: Dr. Mezger.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1931-32 and again in 1932-33)

Open to students who have had at least one year of Germanic or Indo-European philology.
 1931-32: Studies in the History of the German Language. Interpretation of Old High German, Middle High German and Old Saxon Texts. Topics in Old High German and Middle High German Literature.

1932-33: Studies in Comparative Germanic Philology: Syntax and Word-formation; Problems of Word-Geography based on a comparative study of Tatian and Wulfila and of Tatian and the West Saxon Gospels.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

Six hours a week of seminary work are offered each year to graduate students of Greek, accompanied by the direction of private reading and original research.

The graduate courses in Greek are varied from year to year in two series, Attic Tragedy, Orators and Historians; the Homeric Question, Plato, Aristophanes and Greek Sophists, in order that they may be taken in consecutive years. Students electing Greek as a major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy must offer not less than two seminars and the journal club for two years and if Greek be also elected as the associated minor the candidate must offer two seminars and the journal club for three years. A large part of the work expected of graduate students consists of courses of reading pursued under the direction of the department and reports on this reading are from time to time required of the students. A reading knowledge of French and German is required. The course in Comparative Philology is recommended to graduate students of Greek. For graduate courses in Classical Archaeology, which may be offered as an associated or independent minor by students taking Greek as a major for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, see pages 47 and 48.

Greek Seminary: Dr. Sanders.

Three hours a week throughout the year.(Given in each year)

1931-32: Greek Orators

The work consists of the reading of large portions of all the orators and the critical interpretation of a selected part of each. Lectures are given on legal antiquities, the syntax and the style of the various authors, in conjunction with which Dionysius of Halicarnassus and the Greek rhetoricians are studied. The later rhetoricians are treated and their criticisms of antiquity investigated. Students are expected to provide themselves with the Teubner text editions of Antiphon, Andocides, Lysias, Isocrates, Isæus, Æschines, Hyperides and Demosthenes. The classical library is well equipped with works on the orators.

1932-33: Greek Historians.

Thucydides is studied in detail and reports are made on data of history contained in Greek literature in general. Lectures are given by the instructor on subjects connected with Greek historiography, such as the composition of Thucydides' history, the syntax and style of Thucydides, the history of early prose, Greek historical inscriptions.

1933-34: Attic Tragedy.

The work of the seminary in textual criticism is devoted to Sophocles. Members of the seminary report on assigned subjects and give critical summaries of current classical literature.

Greek Seminary: Dr. Wright.

Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in each year)

1931-32: The Homeric Question.

1st Semester.

The work consists of a review of the discussions of the Homeric question since the publication of Wolf's Prolegomena. The various tests that have been applied to the poems by archæologists, linguists, historians of myths and æsthetic critics are taken up and criticized in detail.

Greek Sophists of the Fourth Century A.D.

2nd Semester.

The works of the Emperor Julian, Libanius and others are read and discussed. Lectures and reports are given on the literary movements of the second, third and fourth centuries A.D.

1932-33: Aristophanes.

The aim of the seminary is to make the students familiar with the more important Aristophanic literature up to the present day. Portions of the text are interpreted by the class and reports on assigned topics, literary, historical and archæological, connected with the plays are expected from all the members. All the comedies of Aristophanes are read in the course of the year; lectures are given by the instructor on the metres and syntax of Aristophanes, on the dramatic structure of the plays and on the history of Attic comedy. Part of the work consists of analyses of dissertations on Aristophanes which are presented by members of the class. Every member of the class should provide herself in advance with a complete text of Aristophanes. The Clarendon Press (Oxford) edition is recommended.

1933-34: Plato.

The work is mainly literary and critical. Lectures on the style, philosophy and chronology of the dialogues are given by the instructor; a detailed interpretation of a portion of Plato and reports on topics set for discussion are given by the class. The students are expected to read the Republic, Theætetus, Parmenides and Sophist and discuss certain problems arising from these dialogues. The aim of the course is to lay a foundation for independent work by familiarizing the students with the achievements of scholarship and the general field of Platonic literature up to the present day. Every member of the seminary should provide herself in advance with a complete text of Plato. The Clarendon Press (Oxford) edition is recommended.

Greek Journal Club: Dr. Sanders and Dr. Wright.

One and one-half hours once a fortnight throughout the year.

The instructors and the advanced students meet to report on and discuss recent articles and books.

*Graduate
Courses*

Apart from the direction of private reading and original research, seminars in Mediæval and Modern European history and in American history are offered to graduate students of history together with a graduate course in Historical Bibliography and Criticism and the Auxiliary Sciences. Students may offer either European History or American History as a major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

Seminary in Mediæval and Modern European History: Dr. Gray.

Two or three hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1931-32: Topics in the History of England from 1450 to 1600.

Among these are the significance of the War of the Roses, the reconstructed administration of Yorkists and Tudors, the agrarian and industrial problems of the sixteenth century, new international ambitions after 1485, the renunciation of papal authority by the English church, the consequent dogmatic and social changes, the maintenance of Protestantism under Elizabeth, commercial rivalry with Spain and the defeat of the Armada.

1932-33: Topics in the History of Europe since 1870.

Among these are the Bismarckian system, the rise of the third French Republic, the development of industrial England, the policy of the Tsars, the genesis and progress of the World War, the Treaty of Versailles and the problems of post-war Europe.

1933-34: Topics in the History of England from 1250 to 1450.

Among these are national resistance to papal encroachments, the military, financial and legal innovations of Edward I, the causes of the Hundred Years War, the conduct of the war by Edward III, the role of Italians and Hansards in English economic life, the rise of the woolen industry and of a native merchant class, the consequences of the Great Pestilence, the doctrines advocated by Wycliffe, the Council of Constance, the loss of English possessions on the Continent and the development of Parliament.

Seminary in American History: Dr. William Roy Smith.

Two or three hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1931-32: The Revolution, the Confederation and the Constitution.

American history from 1776 to 1789 is discussed primarily from the local point of view as a step in the conflict between the seaboard aristocracy and the democracy of the frontier. The social and economic forces which led to the adoption of the Federal Constitution and the subsequent formation of national political parties are investigated.

1932-33: The Civil War and Reconstruction.

Special stress is laid upon the social, economic and political reorganization of the South, the North and the West and also of the nation as a whole during the period from 1861 to 1877.

1933-34: Slavery and Negro Problem.

After a preliminary survey of the history of slavery in the colonial period such topics as the slavery compromises of the constitution, the growth of slavery in the South, the abolition of the slave trade, the Missouri Compromise, the anti-Slavery movement, nullification, the Mexican War, the Wilmot Proviso, the compromise measures of 1859, the Kansas-Nebraska bill, the Dred Scott decision, the abolition of slavery and the adoption of the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments are discussed. Special attention is paid to the conflict between sectionalism and nationalism and the connection between slavery, territorial expansion and the development of constitutional theories.

Seminary in the Constitutional History of England from earliest times to the Accession of Edward I.: Dr. David.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1932-33)

The course is based upon a wide reading of the sources, particularly those collected in Select Charters and other Illustrations of English Constitutional History, arranged and edited by William Stubbs and on a careful examination of the older and the more recent theories of English constitutional development which are contained in an extensive secondary literature. The topics studied include: the origin of early English institutions, the institutions of the Anglo-Saxon period, the consequences of the Norman Conquest, the introduction of feudalism and its influence on constitutional development, the growth of the Norman monarchy, legal and administrative institutions under Henry II, the Exchequer, finance and taxation, Magna Carta, municipal institutions, the rise of a national spirit, the struggle between the king and the barons and the attempts to devise constitutional checks upon royal power during the reign of Henry III.

Seminary in Social and Constitutional History of England under the Stuarts, 1603-1714: Dr. Robbins.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Not given in 1931-32)

Seminary in Western European History, from the accession of Isabella in Castile, 1474, to the meetings of the States-general in France, 1789: Dr. Robbins.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1931-32)

The development of society, institutions, religion and overseas enterprise in France, Spain and Germany will be studied. Attention will be given to the decline of the Cortes of Spain, the estates in France and the diet in Germany; to the rise and spread of the Jesuits; to the Protestant Reformation; to the growth of absolutism. The colonial efforts of France and Spain will be compared and their relation to similar movements elsewhere. If time permit, the changing attitude of European writers to their own history and to education generally will be studied from contemporary sources. A reading knowledge of French is essential for this course.

Seminary on the Age of the French Revolution: Dr. David.Two or three hours a week throughout the year.(Given in 1933-34)

The subject matter of the course is chosen with reference to the needs and interests of the students who take it, the principal emphasis usually being placed upon France, but sometimes upon England. Topics are selected with a view to illustrating different kinds of historical problems and gaining an acquaintance with the principal printed sources and secondary works and extending the student's knowledge of the whole era from about 1750 to 1815. Attention is paid to social and economic as well as to political problems. The intellectual background of the revolutionary and reform efforts is also considered.

Historical Bibliography and Criticism and the Auxiliary Sciences: Dr. David.Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in 1931-32)

This graduate course should be elected by all students who are preparing themselves for the Ph.D. degree with History as a Major.

The principal subjects studied are historical bibliography, historical criticism, the history of history, and the auxiliary sciences, chronology, palaeography, and diplomatics. The course consists of lectures, assigned reading and problem work. Adjustments are made to meet the needs of individual students.

Journal Club

Historical Journal Club: Dr. Gray, Dr. William Roy Smith, Dr. David, Dean Manning and Dr. Robbins.

The instructors in the department of history and the graduate students who are pursuing advanced courses in history meet once a fortnight to make reports upon assigned topics, review recent articles and books, and present the results of special investigations.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSEAdvanced Course

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. Since the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses.

Europe since 1870: Dr. Gray.Credit: One unit.(Given in each year)

This course is designed for students who wish to know the genesis and setting of contemporary social and political problems. It is of necessity largely concerned with the causes, progress and effects of the World War. The rise of Germany as a unified industrial state, her rivalry with her neighbours, the consequent formation of alliances, the immediate antecedents of the war, the military and industrial conduct of it, the appearances of revolutionary governments in central and eastern Europe, the consequences of the peace of Versailles and the strong position of labour in post-bellum society are among the subjects studied. A reading knowledge of French is required.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSEFree Elective Courses*Civilization of the Ancient World: Dr. Broughton.Credit: One unit.(Given in 1931-32)*

Special attention is paid to Greece and Rome; but consideration is also given to the subject of pre-history, to the early civilizations of western Asia, Egypt and the Aegean region and to the influence of environment, race and culture upon human development. The evolution of civilization as a whole, from earliest times to the Fourth Century A. D., is presented in a single synthesis.

(This course may be taken as a free elective and if elected must be continued throughout the year.)

History of Art

PROFESSOR:	GEORGINA GODDARD KING, M.A.
ASSOCIATE:	EDWARD S. KING, M.F.A.
LECTURER:	EDWARD M. M. WARBURG, A.P.
INSTRUCTOR:	ELIZABETH H. NORTON, M.A.

GRADUATE COURSES

Four hours a week of seminary work are offered each year to graduate students of history of art accompanied by the direction of private reading and original research and the courses are varied from year to year so that they may be pursued by students through three or more successive years. In addition to the graduate seminaries announced other courses will be provided as need for them arises and individual students will be directed in special work by means of private conferences. History of Art may be offered as a major for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. The first and second year courses of the department amounting to four and one-half units may be elected by graduate students as well as two units of advanced graduate work.

Graduate Courses

Seminary in History of Art: Miss King. Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1931-32: Romanesque Origins; Architecture.

The work is devoted to architecture in Italy, France and Spain; the theories of Dieulafoy, Rivoira and Strzygowski are examined and appraised and special regions particularly studied, while the students give close attention to individual monuments. In another year the sources of Romanesque figure-sculpture, especially in the selected countries, are studied and its development traced with due consideration of current theories as to priority, influence and outcome.

This course may be varied from year to year so as to permit a student's following it for more than one year, if desirable.

1932-33: Spanish Painting; Early Manuscripts to the Primitives, ending arbitrarily in 1550.

1933-34: Spanish Painting; The Golden Century.

In this two-year course the sources and development of Spanish painting are considered from the early miniature down to the work of living painters, a single epoch being selected in any one year. Students are expected to learn something about the Spanish character and history and to make short trips to see paintings on exhibition in America.

Either in 1934-35 or in the following year the subject will be Renaissance Sculpture and the students will be expected to study the various aspects of the art in the different countries of Europe, as well as the development of particular sculptors.

Graduate work in modern painting will also be arranged for any student who wishes to combine History of Art with English or French literature and a course, if needed, offered in Sources and Problems of Modern Art. While the order of the courses may be altered to suit the needs of individual students, certain canons of art and certain aesthetic problems will be considered in successive years.

Tuscan Painting in the Trecento: Mr. E. S. King.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1931-32)

The first semester is devoted to an intensive study of the main problems of late thirteenth and early fourteenth century painting in Tuscany and Umbria. The pertinent frescoes of the church of S. Francesco at Assisi are given particular attention, with the emphasis placed on the origins and character of the Cimabue series. The Roman school at Assisi and elsewhere is investigated in some detail; likewise the Gothic painting of Tuscany generally.

The second semester continues the work of the first, with Giotto and Duccio forming the principal studies. While the plan of study aims to acquaint the student with the salient aspects of the greater artists, special problems, such as, for example, Barna Senese, may be undertaken according to the student's particular needs and interests.

*Journal
Club*

Journal Club in the History of Art: Miss King, Mr. E. S. King, Mr. Warburg and Miss Norton.

Two hours once a fortnight throughout the year.

The instructors and the graduate students meet for the presentation and discussion of current literature on Mediæval Archæology and the History of Art and for discussion of current exhibitions.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

*Advanced
Courses*

Spanish Primitives: Miss King.

Credit: One unit.

(Not given in 1931-32)

The work begins with a consideration of the Mozarabic and proto-Mudéjar manuscripts and is occupied with the Catalan and Valencian primitives, their sources and their special qualities, for the greater part of the year. Castilian, Leonese and early Sevillian painting are taken into account and the study stops arbitrarily at 1500.

Spanish Architecture: Miss King.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1932-33)

This course is open only to students who have completed the first and second year work in history of art, or an equivalent course. After the Visigothic, Reconquest and Mozarabic churches have been considered, the greater part of the work is devoted to Romanesque and Gothic, with a short study of Mudéjar art in the middle of the year and one later of the special aspects of the Spanish Renaissance.

Renaissance Sculpture: Miss King.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1933-34)

The first semester is devoted to the sculpture of the Italian Renaissance, the second partly to Northern art and in especial to figure sculpture in France and Spain from the finishing of the cathedrals to the close of the Renaissance. The great sculptors of Germany are studied carefully in between. The course is illustrated with photographs and lantern slides.

Oriental Art: Mr. King.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

The main object of the course is an interpretation, by means of a careful consideration of the more important historical, esthetic and cultural issues involved, of the principal arts of China, India and Japan. While the treatment is more or less topical the historical sequence of the national arts is adhered to. Chinese painting receives the fullest attention. Chinese sculpture, Japanese sculpture and painting are investigated in considerable detail. The arts of Central and South-Eastern Asia are studied comprehensively. Consideration is given to the demands of students with special interests and qualifications.

Renaissance and Baroque Architecture: Mr. King.

Credit: One unit.

(Not given in 1931-32)

This course covers the main aspects of Renaissance and Baroque architecture in Italy, France, Spain, Germany and England. The principles and development of design are made the integrating feature of the survey, whose object is to show the essential relations between the nature of the age and its architecture. Sculpture and painting are constantly referred to in the interests of interpretation. Drawings or reports are required.

Sculpture in the Renaissance and Since: Mr. Warburg. Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

Taking the sculpture of the Italian Renaissance as point of departure, the work will be devoted, in the first semester, to that, to the late Gothic of the north, and to the Baroque art of Europe; and in the second semester to the tendencies and problems of modern art as exemplified in sculpture. While the material for study will necessarily be sought chiefly in books and photographs, it is hoped that the class will be enabled to study some modern carving and statuary during the academic year, either in term or during the vacations.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Art of the Far East: Mr. King.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

*Free
Elective
Courses*

A general introduction to the history of art in Asia from the earliest times. The architecture, sculpture and painting of China, India and Japan constitute the main burden of the course. Special problems, such as the interrelations between the arts of the Oriental nations and the esthetic differences between the East and West are considered.

Students majoring in history of art are expected to elect this course before being admitted to advanced work.

Modern Art: Mr. Warburg.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

The intention in this course is to indicate the present situation and tendency of American and European art (chiefly in painting, sculpture and architecture); the causes which gave rise thereto, the canons which have been defined and the distinctions observed; also the chief differences still in dispute. While the main consideration will be aesthetic, the method of the study will be historical and the work will be conducted in constant dependence on actual works of art, by means of photographs and other reproductions and, where possible, inspection of examples, on loan at the college, on exhibition in Philadelphia, or accessible elsewhere.

Italian

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR:

ANGELINE HELEN LOGRASSO, Ph.D.

GRADUATE COURSES

The graduate seminary in Italian is varied from year to year in order that it may be pursued by a student for consecutive years. Students electing Italian as a major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy are required to offer French philology as an associated minor.

*Graduate
Courses*

Seminary in Italian Literature: Dr. Lograsso.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

1931-32: The Literature of the Nineteenth Century.

If necessary, modifications may be made in the work of the seminary to meet the special needs of students.

Old Italian: Dr. Lograsso.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

Old Italian philology, with critical reading of early Italian texts.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. Graduate students will usually find it advisable to elect the three-hour course before entering the seminary.

*Advanced
Courses*

The Italian Literature of the Cinquecento: Dr. Lograsso.

(Given in 1931-32)

Credit: One unit.

During the first semester selections from Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, Michaelangelo's Rime and Cellini's Vita are read. During the second semester Machiavelli's Principe and Selections from Tasso's Gerusalemme Liberata and Castiglione's Cortegiano are read.

Advanced Italian Composition: Dr. Lograsso. Credit: One-half unit.
(Given in each year)

Dante: Dr. Lograsso. Credit: One unit.
(Given in 1932-33)

All of the Vita Nuova and the Divine Comedy will be read and discussed. Attention will be given also to Dante's other works in Italian and in Latin.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSE

Free Elective Course

The Italian Literature of the Nineteenth Century: Dr. Lograsso.
(Given in each year) Credit: One unit.

During the first semester the course deals with Foscolo, Manzoni, Leopardi and De Sanctis. During the second semester the course deals with Carducci, Pascoli, D'Annunzio, Verga and others.

Only those students will be admitted who have completed the course in general English Literature and have a wider knowledge of Italian than is required in the first year course.

Latin

PROFESSOR: LILY ROSS TAYLOR, Ph.D.
ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR: THOMAS ROBERT SHANNON BROUGHTON, Ph.D.
INSTRUCTORS: RUTH FAIRMAN, M.A.
BERTHE-MARIE MARTI, M.A.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

Two seminars are offered to graduate students of Latin accompanied by the direction of private reading and original research. The advanced undergraduate courses of the department may also be elected by graduate students.

The graduate courses in Latin are varied from year to year in such a way as to enable candidates for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy to pursue the work for three successive years. Students electing Latin as a major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy must offer not less than two seminars and the journal club for two years and if Latin be also elected as the associated minor the candidate must offer two seminars and the journal club for three years.

It is desirable that all students who intend to do advanced work in Latin should have a good knowledge of Greek. A reading knowledge of French and German is necessary.

Latin Seminary: Dr. Taylor. Two hours a week throughout the year.

1931-32: Historical Problems of the Roman Empire.

In the first semester Tacitus's Annals will form the basis of the work. In the second semester the contacts between Christianity and Paganism will be discussed. The seminary will be conducted jointly in the second semester by Dr. Cadbury of the Department of Biblical Literature and Dr. Taylor. Professor Kirsopp Lake of Harvard University, Mary Flexner Lecturer for 1931-32, will have charge of the seminary for the first six weeks of the semester and will discuss the New Testament as a source for the history of the Roman Empire.

1932-33: Latin Literature from Livius Andronicus to Terence. The chief emphasis is placed upon Ennius and Plautus.

1933-34: Roman Religion and Latin Inscriptions.

Roman Religion is studied from the sources with special emphasis on the material provided by the Fasti of Ovid. The early Roman calendar, the coming in of Italic and Greek gods, the origin and development of the imperial cult and the growth of the Oriental Religions are considered. In the second semester the work centres on inscriptions with special study of those dealing with religion and with Roman social life.

Latin Seminary: Dr. Broughton.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

1931-32: The Poetry of the Augustan Age.

Special emphasis on the work of Horace and Vergil in its relation to the principate of Augustus. The subjects for investigation by each student may be selected from the whole field of Augustan poetry.

1932-33: Cicero's Correspondence.

An effort is made to master typical textual and linguistic problems presented by the text and special attention is paid to Roman administration and political conditions during the last years of the Republic. The edition of Tyrrell and Purser, The Correspondence of M. Tullius Cicero, 7 vols., forms the basis of the work.

1933-34: Livy's History.

A study is made of the political and institutional development of Rome from the earliest times to the close of the Punic wars. The works of Livy are used as the basis of study with criticism of other sources.

Historical Grammar of Greek and Latin:* Dr. Broughton.

One hour a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1933-34)

This course may be elected by any students taking seminaries in Latin or Greek. A knowledge of Greek is essential.

Palacography: Miss Fairman.

One hour a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1932-33)

A study of the more important Roman and mediæval hands with practical exercises in collation and textual emendation.

Latin Journal Club: President Park, Dr. Taylor, Dr. Broughton, Miss Fairman and Miss Marti.

Journal
Club

One and a half hours once a fortnight throughout the year.

The instructors and the advanced students meet to report on and discuss recent articles and books.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges, graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses.

Except for the course in Latin Prose Style the work of the advanced Latin is arranged in semester courses. If elected separately the credit for each course is one-half unit.

Advanced
Courses

Latin Prose Style: Miss Fairman.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Weekly exercises in the writing of Latin prose combined with the reading of Cicero, Cæsar and Livy and the study of their style.

* See Comparative Philology, page 49.

(Given in 1931-32)

1st Semester.

Lucretius and Cicero: Dr. Taylor.

Credit: One-half unit.

The De Rerum Natura of Lucretius and selections from Cicero's philosophical works will be read. The work will include a study of the chief schools of philosophy in the period with special emphasis upon Epicureanism.

*2nd Semester.*Vergil's Aeneid: Dr. Broughton.Credit: One-half unit.

The poem will be studied as a whole, with consideration of its language, its structure and its place in the history of the epic.

(Given in 1932-33)

1st Semester.

Cæsar and Cicero: Dr. Taylor.

Credit: One-half unit.

Extensive selections from Cicero's Orations and Letters and from Cæsar's Commentaries will be read. The chief emphasis will be upon the social and political history of the period.

2nd Semester.

Literature of the Empire: Dr. Broughton.

Credit: One-half unit.

Literature of the Empire will be studied. The reading will be from Seneca, Petronius, Martial, Pliny and Juvenal. The chief emphasis will be upon the social life of the Empire.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSE

Mediæval Latin Literature: Miss Marti.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

A survey of mediæval Latin Literature from the fourth to the fourteenth century. The reading is supplemented by lectures on the influence of classical culture on the Middle Ages and on the influence of mediæval Latin Literature on early English and French Literature.

This course may be elected by students who have had first year Latin Literature.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

Six and a half hours a week of seminary work and graduate lectures are offered each year to graduate students of mathematics accompanied by the direction of private reading and original research. The subjects vary from year to year so that the seminaries may be pursued by candidates for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy for three or more successive years. The advanced undergraduate courses of the department amounting to eight hours a week may be elected by graduate students. Students who elect mathematics as a major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy are required to elect mathematics also as an associated minor.

Functional Equations: Dr. Pell-Wheeler.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1931-32)

* Granted leave of absence for the year 1931-32. The courses announced by Dr. Lehr will be given by Dr. Flexner.

Projective Geometry: Dr. Lehr.* Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1931-32)

Theory of Functions of a Complex Variable: Dr. Hedlund.
Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1931-32)

Theory of Functions of a Complex Variable: Dr. Pell-Wheeler.
Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1932-33)

Differential Geometry: Dr. Lehr. Two hours a week throughout the year.

Algebraic Geometry: Dr. Lehr. Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1933-34)

Calculus of Variations: Dr. Hedlund.
Two hours a week during the first semester.
(Given in 1933-34)

Analysis Situs: Dr. Hedlund. Two hours a week during the second semester.
(Given in 1933-34)

Mathematical Journal Club: Dr. Pell-Wheeler, Dr. Lehr* and Dr. Hedlund.
One hour a fortnight throughout the year.

*Journal
Club*

The journal club holds fortnightly meetings at which reports on special topics or memoirs are presented by the instructors and the graduate students.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

The advanced courses in mathematics are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to mathematical studies differs in different colleges, graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses. Regular written work is expected from all mathematical students and a reading knowledge of French and German is presupposed.

*Advanced
Courses*

The advanced courses given are selected from the following, with occasional modifications:

Advanced Calculus: Dr. Pell-Wheeler. Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

This course is open to students who have had three and one-half units of mathematics.

Music

PROFESSOR:

HORACE ALWYNE, F.R.M.C.M.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

The graduate courses and seminary may lead under certain fixed conditions to the degree of Master of Arts, but are not permitted to count as any part of the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

Students wishing to specialize in music who meet the preliminary requirements of the Academic Council for the degree of Master of Arts will be allowed to become candidates for the degree of Master of Arts of Bryn Mawr College in Music only if they have offered the equivalent of two seminars in Music together with a seminary in Education or some other seminary, subject in each case to the approval of the Committee on Graduate Courses and of the Director of the Department of Music.

Preliminary requirements for admission to graduate courses in music:

1. A.B. degree from a college of recognized standing.
2. Certain standards of knowledge or facility in instrumental or vocal music will be required of all students. Students offering vocal music to answer the above requirements will be expected to have some facility in piano playing. Students who are deficient in the above requirements will be recommended by the Department of Music to certain qualified teachers outside the college.
3. Courses in the History of Music, Harmony and Counterpoint, in general equivalent to the undergraduate courses given in Bryn Mawr College, must have been taken, or must be taken without credit, as preliminary to graduate work.

Canon and Fugue: Mr. Alwyne.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the four undergraduate courses in Harmony and Counterpoint; or the student must satisfy the Instructor that she is qualified to enter.

This course deals with the application of counterpoint to composition in these established forms: it requires some originality on the part of the student and some facility in piano-forte playing.

Orchestration: Mr. Alwyne.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the four undergraduate courses in Harmony and Counterpoint; or the student must satisfy the Instructor that she is qualified to enter.

This course deals with the characteristics of each instrument in the orchestra—its tonality, range, technique, etc.—with the grouping of the instruments—strings, woodwind, brass, percussion, etc.—and with the orchestra as a whole. Orchestral scores will be studied. Students will be required to apply the foregoing in scoring for orchestra and in original work.

Seminary in Music, Free Composition: Mr. Alwyne.Two hours a week throughout the year.(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the four undergraduate courses in Harmony and Counterpoint; or the student must satisfy the Instructor that she is qualified to enter. This seminary deals with the application to Free Composition of the preceding courses in Harmony and Counterpoint.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSESHistory and Appreciation of Music: Mr. Alwyne and Mr. Willoughby.Credit: One unit.Free
Elective
Courses(Given in each year)*

This course consists of the study of the History of Music up to and including Beethoven, and of the masterpieces of music produced during that period. Characteristic examples of Early Church Music, in the form of Plain Chant, Organum, Discant, etc., and of Sixteenth Century vocal polyphony, Reformation Chorales and Bach choral works are illustrated by the College Choir in class. Compositions of the following composers are performed in class: Monteverdi, Corelli, Scarlatti, Rameau, Couperin, Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven. The forms included are folk-song, motet, madrigal, fantasia, toccata, early dance-forms, fugue, suite, rondo, variations, sonata and symphony. All study and analysis is based on the actual hearing of the music itself. The instruction is given by means of lectures, required reading, discussion, and by analysis by the students in class. At occasional meetings of the class, members of the Faculty of the Departments of History, Classical Archaeology, History of Art, and English discuss social, artistic and literary movements which were of special importance in the history of the evolution of music.

Advanced History and Appreciation of Music: Mr. Alwyne and Mr. Willoughby.Credit: One unit.(Given in each year)

The course in History and Appreciation of Music is required for admission.

The course consists of the study of the history of music from Schubert to the present day and of the musical masterpieces produced during that period. The instruction follows the same plan as in the preceding course.

Third Year History and Appreciation of Music: Mr. Alwyne and Mr. Willoughby.Credit: One-half unit.(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the two courses in History and Appreciation of Music.

This course consists of two special courses of one semester each in some particular period or aspect of Music. The subjects are Bach and Wagner, or Symphonic Music and Modern Music. These subjects are dealt with in a more detailed and amplified way than is possible in the two foregoing courses in History and Appreciation of Music. The instruction follows the same plan as in the preceding courses.

Elementary Harmony: Mr. Willoughby.Credit: One-half unit.(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: knowledge of intervals, scales and keys, ability to sing simple melodies at sight.

This course is the beginning of composition. It does not impose upon the student the mere copying of a model but gives her some intellectual and aesthetic liberty.

Melodic movement and harmonic progression are studied concurrently. The student learns to write simple melodies based on poetic meters and the addition of a second melody to one already given with ornamentation by means of passing notes, neighbouring notes, etc. When some facility in horizontal writing has been obtained melodies are harmonized in four parts using major and minor triads in root positions and their inversions.

The importance of the student being able to hear what she writes is stressed by means of progressive ear training and musical dictation.

Advanced Harmony: Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the course in Elementary Harmony; or the student must satisfy the instructor that she is qualified to enter.

This course is the continuation of the course in Elementary Harmony, starting with the Chord of the Dominant Seventh and carries the student through modern harmonic relations. Original melodies are written and harmonized in both close and open score and the use of C clefs is studied when writing for strings. Modern compositions are analyzed. This course gives an opportunity for freedom of expression and calls for more original work on the part of the student.

Elementary Counterpoint: Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the two courses in Harmony; or the student must satisfy the examiner that she is qualified to enter.

This course deals with the various modes of counterpoint to which the courses in Harmony have led in so far as it has been possible to bring about "horizontal" writing in those courses. This course consists of Strict Counterpoint in two parts up to and including Fifth Species and three-part Strict Counterpoint up to and including Third Species.

Advanced Counterpoint: Mr. Willoughby.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Requirements for admission: the three preceding courses in Harmony and Counterpoint; or the student must satisfy the instructor that she is qualified to enter.

This course is a continuation of Elementary Counterpoint and carries the student through to Strict and Combined Counterpoint in three and four parts, later dealing with the stated contrapuntal forms. The course requires some originality on the part of the student and some facility in pianoforte playing.

Philosophy

PROFESSOR:

GRACE ANDRUS DE LAGUNA, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATES:

PAUL WEISS, Ph.D.

MILTON CHARLES NAHM, B.Litt.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses.

Two seminars and a Journal Club are offered each year to graduate students of philosophy, accompanied by the direction of private reading and original research.

In general, one historical seminary and one of a systematic character will be offered each year. The latter will be either in the field of logic and epistemology, or in ethics or aesthetics, depending on the interests of the students electing it. The subjects of study are changed from year to year through a cycle of three years.

Seminary in the History of Philosophy: Dr. de Laguna, or Dr. Weiss, or Mr. Nahm.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

1931-32: Pre-Kantian Rationalism.

In the first semester the work is principally based upon Descartes and in the second semester on Spinoza and Leibniz. This seminary is conducted by Dr. de Laguna.

1932-33: English Empiricism.

The principal works of Locke, Berkeley and Hume form the basis of study. This seminary is conducted by Dr. Weiss.

1933-34: Kant.

The Critique of Pure Reason forms the basis of the work of the first semester. In the second semester, the later Critiques and the other ethical writings are studied. The seminary is conducted in the first semester by Dr. Weiss and in the second semester by Mr. Nahm.

Seminary in Logic and Epistemology: Dr. de Laguna and Dr. Weiss.
Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1931-32 and again in 1933-34)

1931-32: Logic: Dr. Weiss.

A preliminary survey will first be made of such typical approaches to logic as the Aristotelian, that of Boole-Schröder, Principia Mathematica, etc. Certain special topics will then be studied: the nature of concepts, propositions, judgment, implication, entailment, inference and paradoxes. Finally, more general topics will be discussed: the foundations of mathematics, alternative mathematics and logics, and the relation of logic to other sciences.

1933-34: Recent Epistemological Theory: Dr. de Laguna.

Works of recent writers on epistemology are discussed. In 1930-31 the theories of Lovejoy, Santayana, Meyerson and Cassirer were chosen.

Seminary in Ethics: Mr. Nahm. Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1932-33)

History of English Ethics:

A general examination of Greek ethics will be made as an introduction to the development of English ethical theory from Hobbes to Sidgwick.

Seminary in Aesthetics: Mr. Nahm. Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1933-34)

History and Problems of Aesthetics.

The development of aesthetic theory among the Greeks and mediaeval philosophers is examined during the first semester. The history and problems of modern aesthetics will constitute the work of the second semester.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Credit: One and one-half units

The advanced courses in philosophy are open only to students who have taken the second year courses in Elementary Ethics and Philosophical Problems. They may be taken as free electives.

Advanced Courses

Elementary Aesthetics: Mr. Nahm. Credit: One-half unit
(Given throughout the year)

The problem of the origin of art is approached by use of museum material and anthropological data. After this introduction an examination is made of the nature of the aesthetic response and a study of aesthetic types, such as the comic, the tragic, the sublime and the characteristic. The conclusion of the course will involve a close study of the aesthetics of painting, sculpture and poetry. If this course is elected in the first semester it must be continued in the second.

1st Semester:

German Idealism: Dr. de Laguna. Credit: One-half unit.

About half of the course is devoted to the study of Kant. The systems of the post-Kantian idealists are treated more briefly.

2nd Semester:

Recent Philosophical Tendencies: Dr. Weiss. Credit: One-half unit.

This course will deal in detail with the philosophies of Bergson, Dewey and Whitehead. There will be collateral reading in Peirce, James, Bradley, Santayana and Russell.

Physics

PROFESSOR:

WILLIAM B. HUFF, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATE:

JANE DEWEY, Ph.D.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate Courses

The graduate seminars consist of lectures, laboratory work and original research under the direction of the instructors, the subjects varying from year to year so that the seminars may be pursued by students through consecutive years. A good working library containing the current and bound numbers of all the important physical journals is kept in the laboratory. Students electing physics as their major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy may elect it also as the associated minor, provided either mathematics or applied mathematics is taken as the independent minor; or mathematics or applied mathematics may be taken as the associated minor.

Seminary in Physics: Dr. Huff.

*Three hours a week throughout the year.(Given in alternate years)*1932-33: Radio-activity and Discharge of Electricity Through Gases. 1st semester.

The earlier lectures treat of the effects of fields on the path of a moving charged particle. A discussion of typical experimental methods of measuring velocity and the ratio of charge to the mass follows. After a study of the phenomena of electrical discharge and of radio-activity a brief account of theories is given.

Electron Theory.

2nd semester.

In the Electron Theory the mathematical development of the subject is first dealt with and this is followed by experimental tests of theory.

Seminary in Physics: Dr. Dewey.

Three hours a week throughout the year.(Given in alternate years)

1931-32: A General Mathematical Discussion of Physical Optics.

Students are expected to give detailed reports on the methods and results of investigations which illustrate the theory. When it seems desirable two and a half hours of experimental work will be substituted for one hour of the seminary.

1933-34: Radiation.

The modern developments of radiation from cosmic to infra-red are considered.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Advanced Courses

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. As the amount of time given to undergraduate subjects differs in different colleges graduate students frequently find it advisable to elect some of these courses. A knowledge of differential and integral calculus is required. These lectures deal not only with the theoretical development of the subject, but emphasis is laid on the important experimental work. The object of the courses is to prepare students to undertake independent work. The laboratory work is planned with this object in view and is arranged to meet the special needs of each individual student. In addition to the laboratory work which accompanies the lectures a student may take extra laboratory work.

Electricity and Magnetism: Dr. Huff.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1931-32)

The lectures of this course treat typical mathematical and experimental problems chosen from the various parts of the entire subject. A large number of problems is assigned.

By special arrangement this course may count for more than one unit.

Properties of Matter: Dr. Huff.

Theory of Sound: Dr. Huff.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1933-34)

Properties of Matter is given during the first semester. The lectures cover the general subject of the properties of matter. Poynting and Thomson's Properties of Matter is read in connection with the course.

Theory of Sound is given during the second semester. The lectures form an introduction to the theory of modes of vibration of pipes, strings and rods. Poynting and Thomson's Sound is used during the earlier part of the course and frequent references are made to Helmholtz and Rayleigh.

These semester courses may be elected separately and by special arrangement they may count for more than the half unit.

Spectroscopy: Dr. Dewey.

Astrophysics: Dr. Dewey.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1932-33)

Spectroscopy is given during the first semester. The course begins with a complete discussion of the apparatus used in this subject; the results of past and present investigations are then considered and problems for investigation are pointed out. The many important applications of spectroscopy to astronomy and atomic structure are not neglected. The standard books of reference are Kayser's Handbuch der Spectroscopie and Sommerfeld's Atom Structure and Spectral Lines. Detailed reports of laboratory investigations are required.

Astrophysics is given during the second semester. This course consists of lectures on the application of physical principles and methods to the study of the composition, structure and motions of the heavenly bodies. Selected chapters in Moulton's Celestial Mechanics and many papers from the Astrophysical Journal are read and discussed.

General Optics: Dr. Dewey.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in 1934-35)

These lectures give a general discussion of the theories advanced to explain many phenomena in light. Students are required to have a good knowledge of elementary optics and to be sufficiently familiar with optical apparatus to undertake a detailed study of some special problem. The books on optics by Drude, Wood and Schuster are used for reference.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Physical Basis of Music: Dr. Huff.

In the lectures of this course it is planned to present some of the physical principles illustrated in the construction of musical instruments and underlying the general theory of music. Private reading is assigned. This course was given in 1929-30.

Descriptive Astronomy: Dr. Huff.

This course is elementary. Students use a text-book and star-maps and do some general reading on assigned topics. Lecture-experiments and lantern-slides are used. The course is open to juniors and seniors only, but not to auditors or hearers. This course was given in 1923-29.

Psychology

PROFESSORS:

JAMES H. LEUBA, Ph.D.

AGNES LOW ROGERS, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR AND DIRECTOR OF THE LABORATORY:

HARRY HELSON, Ph.D.

INSTRUCTOR:

WILLIAM D. TURNER, Ph.D.

GRADUATE COURSES

Graduate
Courses

At least seven hours a week seminary work and graduate lectures are offered each year to graduate students of psychology, accompanied by the direction of private reading and original research and the courses are varied from year to year so that they may be pursued by students through three or more successive years. The books needed by the graduate students are collected in the seminary library of the department. No undergraduates are admitted to graduate courses or to the seminary library, but the second and third year courses of the undergraduate department amounting to sixteen hours a week may be elected by graduate students. The laboratory of experimental psychology is open to graduate students for research work.

Psychological Seminary: Dr. Leuba.
Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1931-32)

As the foundation of the work of the seminary one or two of the following subjects is chosen each year: the psychology of mental and moral deficiencies with reference to the social problems they present, including case studies; social psychology; abnormal psychology and the Freudian psychology; the fundamental principles and theories of psychology; the psychology of religion and ethics.

Seminary in Research Problems: Dr. Helson.
Two or more hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in each year)

This course is intended for students who wish to be trained in research work. Methods of measurement, particularly modern psychophysics, practise in observation and acquaintance with standard types of apparatus are stressed. The instructor co-operates with the students in the solution of some original problems.

Seminary in Physiological Psychology: Dr. Helson.
Two or more hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1931-32)

The physiological foundations of behavior will be investigated through a consideration of selected topics from the fields common to physiology and psychology. Among the subjects discussed are: chronaxie, the conditioned reflex experimentation, membrane theory of nerve conduction, theories of central neural mechanisms, gradients and special states having a bearing upon a theory of behavior. Some laboratory work will be done although the course is not primarily an experimental one.

Seminary in the History of Psychology: Dr. Helson.
Two or more hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1932-33)

The work of this seminary consists of three parts: (1) lectures by the instructor in which the history of psychology is treated through the consideration of fundamental problems; (2) readings and reports by students involving the use of sources; (3) a semester paper upon some selected topic in which the student's ability to organize and criticize material is tested.

Psychological Journal Club: Dr. Leuba, Dr. Helson and Dr. Turner.

*Journal
Club*

Two hours in alternate weeks throughout the year.

The students meet with the instructors to hear reports on recent psychological literature and on the work done in the laboratory.

For graduate work in Educational Psychology see the Department of Education (pages 52 and 53).

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

Credit: Two and one-half units

Advanced Experimental Psychology: Dr. Helson and Dr. Turner.

*Advanced
Courses*

Credit: One unit.

(Given throughout the year)

This course is intended for students who wish to be trained in research work. It may be taken by students who have taken the second year course in Experimental Psychology. The course is continued in the second semester. The instructors co-operate with the students in the solution of some original problems.

1st Semester:

Abnormal Psychology: Dr. Leuba.

Credit: One-half unit.

This course is a study of the main forms of mental disorders with clinical demonstrations. The course will include a consideration of Individual Differences, Types of Personality and Mental Hygiene. It may be taken as a free elective by students who have taken the Motivation of Action; Experimental Psychology is not a prerequisite.

2nd Semester:

Social Psychology: Dr. Leuba.

Credit: One-half unit.

A study of Group Life and of some Social Institutions. It may be taken as a free elective by students who have taken the Motivation of Action; Experimental Psychology is not a prerequisite.

2nd Semester:

Psychological Theory: A systematic survey of the main types of psychological theory: Dr. Helson.

Credit: One-half unit.

The concepts underlying the various approaches to the problems of psychology will be examined with special reference to the history of psychology. This course is intended for students who wish a survey of the various fields of psychology in the light of recent developments. Two units of psychology are prerequisites.

Social Economy and Social Research

The Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department of Social Economy and Social Research

PROFESSORS:

SUSAN MYRA KINGSBURY, Ph.D.

HORNELL HART, Ph.D.

ASSOCIATE:

MILDRED FAIRCHILD, Ph.D.

LECTURER:

ALMENA DAWLEY, M.A.

SPECIAL LECTURERS:

EVA WHITING WHITE, A.B.

ALICE HAMILTON, M.D.

The Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department of Social Economy and Social Research was opened in the autumn of 1915 in order to afford women an opportunity to obtain an advanced scientific education in Social Economy which, it is hoped, will compare favorably with the best preparation in any profession. It is known as the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department in order that the name of Carola Woerishoffer, who devoted her life to social service and industrial relations, may be associated in a fitting and lasting way with Bryn Mawr College which she so generously endowed.

The departments of Economics and Politics, Psychology, Education and Philosophy offer seminars strongly recommended to students of Social Economy. These seminars are given by Dr. Marion Parris Smith, Professor of Economics; Dr. Charles Ghequiere Fenwick, Professor of Political Science; Dr. Roger Hewes Wells, Associate Professor of Economics and Politics; Dr. Milton Charles Nahm, Lecturer in Philosophy; Dr. James H. Leuba, Professor of Psychology; Dr. Harry Helson, Associate Professor of Experimental Psychology; Dr. Agnes Low Rogers, Professor of Education and Psychology; Dr. Ilse Forest, Associate Professor of Education and Mr. Samuel Arthur King, Non-resident Lecturer in English Diction.

The graduate courses in Social Economy and Social Research are intended for graduate students who present a diploma from some college of acknowledged standing and no undergraduate students are admitted.

Students of this department must offer for admission to their graduate work a preliminary course in economics, in psychology and in sociology* and in addition more advanced courses equivalent to the Bryn Mawr College major course in one of the following subjects: economics and politics, sociology, history, psychology or philosophy (that is altogether two and one-half units in one of these subjects).†

The courses are planned on the principle that about two-thirds of the student's time shall be given to the study of theory and the remaining one-third to a seminary including field and laboratory work.

In the first year the student will probably pursue a seminary in the theory and technique applied to her chosen field, as for example: Social Case Work or Community Organization or Industrial Relations in which she will give seven to ten hours a week during the term time and full time in vacation practica to practice or field work in an institution or with a social agency or in a business firm chosen in relation to her selected field; she will take the seminary in theory most closely related to her special interests; unless already qualified she will take the course in statistics and she will elect a third seminary. In addition all students attend the Journal Club. Each seminary requires about 14 hours of work each week, including hours of discussion, preparation and conference. Full graduate work involves about 44 hours of work per week.

Practice work in each field consists of two types: (1) field work consisting of seven hours each week, one hour of conference each week and two hours of seminary discussion in alternate weeks; (2) non-resident experience with social institutions, agencies or business firms obtained during one month

* Students not having had courses in psychology and sociology may be expected to supplement their preparation by taking work at a university summer school of recognized standing.

† The "unit" represents one-quarter of the student's time for one year or approximately ten hours of work a week, including class meetings.

in December and January and during two months in the summer following the eight months of work in Bryn Mawr College.

The department will endeavor to arrange that the students shall be at a minimum expense for room and board during the midwinter practicum, other than that paid to the college from December 8th to 18th and during the two months of the summer practicum.

The year's programme of the students will therefore run as follows: (1) Work at Bryn Mawr College, September 29th to December 7th, during which period at least one day a week is given to field work. (2) A mid-winter practicum in which the student gives full service to a social organization or a business establishment or to research, from December 7th to January 1st in New York, Boston, Philadelphia or elsewhere. (3) January 2nd to January 29th, during which period the student will give her entire time to classes and study at Bryn Mawr College. (4) February 2nd to June 1st, during which time the student will give one day a week to field practice work, with the exception of the spring vacation. (5) The summer practicum from June 6th to July 30th, during which time the student will give all of her time to practical work with a social organization or a mercantile or manufacturing establishment. The field work during the time of residence at the college and during the mid-winter and summer practica is under the careful supervision of an instructor of the department. After one year of work in this department one-half year may be given to a practicum in residence in a social service institution, in connection with a social welfare or community organization, in a federal or state department of labour and industry, in a federal or state employment office or in a manufacturing or mechanical establishment in Philadelphia, New York, New England or elsewhere, during which time the practical work and special reading and research will be supervised by the instructor in charge of the practicum and by the head of the institution, department or business firm.

Students entering the department are expected to pursue the work throughout one year. Unless the student has had graduate courses providing a foundation for professional social work or acceptable experience in social work, at least two years are necessary for satisfactory preparation. A certificate will be given upon the completion of one or two years' study. The candidate for a certificate must offer a seminary which includes practice or laboratory work or a seminary in social and industrial research.

Graduates of Bryn Mawr College and graduates of other colleges who shall have satisfied the Academic Council that the course of study for which they have received a degree is equivalent to that for which the degree of Bachelor of Arts is given by Bryn Mawr College or who shall have attended such additional courses of lectures as may be prescribed, may apply to the Academic Council to be enrolled as candidates for the degree of Master of Arts or of Doctor of Philosophy;* admission to the graduate school does not in itself qualify a student to become a candidate for these degrees.

*Certificates
and Degrees*

* For requirements for the Master's degree and the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, see pages 36 to 41.

GRADUATE COURSES

*Graduate
Courses*

The seminars and courses described below may be elected subject to the approval of the Director of the Department by students working for the first and second year certificates as well as by candidates for the degree of Master of Arts or of Doctor of Philosophy in Social Economy and Social Research or may be offered as the associated or independent minor with the approval of the Director of the Department when the major is taken in certain other departments according to the regulations of the Academic Council.

Seminary in Social and Industrial Research: Dr. Kingsbury.

Three hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Research in Social Economy involves two distinct types of studies. First, that which uses manuscripts or printed documents as sources of information and second, that which secures data concerning human relations and social conditions from individuals, groups, organizations or institutions. Both phases of social research necessitate an ability to discover cause and effect, to see the relations and interpret the interaction of social forces, to recognize and evaluate the factors conditioning or controlling social situations and to establish facts concerning social phenomena.

Consequently, training in the acquisition, arrangement, analysis and interpretation of data is essential for students undertaking either phase of social research. As other seminars in the Department and allied departments deal primarily with the first type of studies, this seminary is devoted exclusively to the second type. A subject is selected and arrangements made which will require students to secure social data by work in the field. The material is then organized, analyzed and interpreted by the members of the seminary. In this way, training is given in filling out schedules, classifying data, drawing up tables, analyzing results and interpreting material as a whole. The group of students may cooperate to produce a study which it is hoped will prove a contribution to our knowledge of social or industrial conditions. Students not taking a seminary in which field practice is required will be expected to carry on a mid-winter practicum in this seminary (see page 83). Previous graduate study or acceptable experience in social or in industrial work is required for admission to this seminary.

Seminary in Administration of Social Agencies: Dr. Kingsbury.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1931-32 and again in 1933-34)

This course studies the sources of financial support of social agencies, the education of the community, cooperation in larger social programmes, the relationships between public and private agencies, the organization and supervision of a staff and the development and installation of methods to secure high standards of work. Opportunities for field work and research are arranged according to the needs of the student. This seminary is open to advanced students with the approval of the instructor.

Seminary in Statistics: Dr. Kingsbury. Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1932-33)

The work of the seminary is divided into three sections and considers: first, the principles of statistical measurement—frequency distributions, averages, index numbers, measures of association, correlation and partial correlation, theories of probability and probable error; second, standard and model forms of schedules and the methods of tabulation and analysis of data, together with criticisms of the methods employed in some of the best social investigations which have been carried on; third, a study of the application of statistics to the analysis of social problems including a review of the outstanding contributions in the subject and a criticism of selected statistical reports. Important correlations already established between socially significant variables will be reviewed and their application in connection with further research indicated.

Seminary in The Family: Dr. Hart. *Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1931-33 and again in 1933-34)*

The evolution of the family as a social institution will be reviewed briefly. The course will deal chiefly with the social problems involved in relations between men and women, parents and children, young people and their parents, the family and society and the like. Problems related to social attitudes, agencies and legislation dealing with the family will be taken up by the project method.

Seminary in Social Change: Dr. Hart. *Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1933-34)*

Problems related to the nature of social progress and the methods whereby it can be achieved are studied by members of the seminary. The course begins with a review of prehistoric cultural evolution and of modern primitive cultures, including visits to ethnological and archaeological exhibits in Philadelphia, New York or Washington. The natural laws of invention and of diffusion of culture are studied inductively by analyzing the history of various culture elements in primitive and civilized societies. The applicability of these laws to the origin and spread of social movements and agencies is worked out in specific instances. Various prognoses as to the future of our civilization are reviewed in relation to the foregoing material and principles essential to sound social reform are developed.

Seminary in Research in Sociology: Dr. Hart. *Two hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in 1931-32 and each year thereafter)*

Seminary in Community Organization and Administration: Dr. Hart. Two hours a week throughout the year.

Laboratory and Field Work. *Seven hours a week throughout the year.
(Given in each year)*

The technique of integration of purpose as applied to social work with groups, through such agencies as settlements, playgrounds, social centers, Y. W. C. A.'s, councils of social agencies, community chests, civic organizations, legislative commissions and research and propaganda agencies, forms the subject-matter of the course. In connection with the discussion of these topics by the instructor, a series of representative community organization workers are invited to meet with the class to answer questions from their experience in the problems which have arisen in the course of the students' work. Special attention is given to the practical problems involved in introducing new social movements into communities, in organizing and conducting clubs and classes, in work with committees and boards, in publicity work and in financial and legislative campaigns.

The Practicum in Community Organization and Administration combines practical work in social and community education with reports and discussions. In addition to reports and conferences, seven hours a week are devoted to active work in a social center or settlement by which the student gains vital illustration of the principles and organization of community work.

The practicum is under the direction of Dr. Kingsbury and the director of the particular agency or department and is so arranged as to give to the student training during the academic year and the midwinter and summer practice (see page 53) in some one or more of the following activities:

- (1) Direction and teaching of clubs and classes as observers, visitors, helpers and assistants.
- (2) Regular daily management as assistants and later as directors.
- (3) General administrative assistance in office work, including record-keeping, in library work, in activities to secure publicity, in preparation of newspaper articles, reports, posters, exhibits, parades, dramatics, plays, festivals, demonstrations, concerts and lectures, in public speaking and writing and in conducting financial campaigns and special studies.
- (4) Teaching in night schools of classes in civics and elementary subjects and conducting games, dramatics, gymnastics, playgrounds and kindergarten activities.
- (5) Co-operation with civic movements, community campaigns and emergency activities, school programmes and publicity.

The fields from which the subject for the practicum may be chosen are community, civic and social centers, settlements, playgrounds and health and recreation centers, and have included the Bryn Mawr Community Center, The Philadelphia College Settlement, The Young Women's Christian Association and work in smaller neighboring communities.

Seminary in Labour Organization: Dr. Fairchild.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Some of the forces found in modern industry, the inequality of distribution and the gradual development of democratic ideas that lead to labour organization are reviewed as an introduction to trade union history and the development of labour organization in America is compared with that in Europe and especially in England. The methods used by labour are studied in detail—the strike, boycott, sabotage, picketing and various aspects of labour warfare—as well as the attempts of the employer to suppress unionism. The bearing of the law and the courts on the labour struggle and the use of the injunction are considered critically. The significance of social legislation, welfare work and the intervention of the state are discussed with a view to understanding the probable future of labour organization. The changing philosophy of labour as it is embodied in experiments in various countries, England, France and Russia, is given particular attention. As a part of the seminary, students attend trade union meetings and conferences, visit factories and various state and private organizations which are concerned with employment, vocational guidance and legislative reform.

Seminary in Industrial Relations: Dr. Fairchild.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

Laboratory and Field Work.

Seven hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

The aim of this seminary is to secure an understanding of actual conditions, methods and relations in industry in the United States. A brief introduction to the evolution of the modern industrial system is followed by an analysis of large scale productive units and monopolistic control of industry. A study is then made of production problems in certain basic industries with particular stress on planning systems and process analysis. The procedure of the personnel office, hiring of labour, rating, training, promotion, discharge and methods of wage payments are considered in detail. On the basis of critical comparisons of methods, fundamental principles are brought to light. A comparison of retail trade with factory production brings out significant phases of industrial relations. Special lectures on psychology in industry, labour exchanges, government agencies, scientific management, industrial poisons and other topics are included in the course. Actual cases are studied and observation trips give the student first hand information regarding present day conditions and methods.

The field work in the factories and stores, which is a part of the work of this seminary, is accompanied in alternate weeks by a two-hour discussion period on the practical problems which the student must meet.

This seminary must be accompanied by the Seminary in Labour Organization.

Seminary in Research in Labour Organization or Industrial Relations:
Dr. Fairchild.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Each student pursues a separate research problem of her own choice, conferring with the instructor individually as her work progresses, and reporting periodically to joint meetings of the students in the seminary. The course is open to advanced students with the consent of the instructor.

Seminary in Social Case Work: Miss Dawley.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

Laboratory and Field Work.

Ten hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

The object of this course is to understand the basis of each human being's failure in self-maintenance, to interpret his reactions and behavior in terms of his life experiences and relationships, and to utilize this evaluation in the carrying out of treatment. Emphasis is placed on the various processes of case work, the evaluation of case material, case recording, the community resources essential for treatment and the case worker's relationship to these resources.

The Practicum in Social Case Work during the past year has consisted of field work carried on 7 to 10 hours per week and a mid-winter and a summer practicum (see page 83) with the following agencies: The Family Society of Philadelphia, the Children's Aid Society and the White-Williams Foundation. The field work with these agencies is under the supervision of Miss Dawley and the supervisor of the particular agency or department.

Social Statistics: Dr. Kingsbury.

Two hours a week throughout the year

(Given in each year)

The subjects considered are those required for an understanding of statistical studies in social economy, for use in conducting inquiries into social and economic conditions and for analysis of data secured from Federal or State reports and from records of social and industrial organizations and institutions. Included in the course are the following topics: schedule making, accumulation of data, making of tables, the use of computing and filing devices, the array, frequency distributions, averages, index numbers, measures of association and variation, the theory of probability and of error and linear correlation.

No knowledge of mathematics beyond the usual college entrance requirements is presupposed. This course is required of all graduate students in the department who have not had a satisfactory introductory course.

General Course in Articulation and Voice Production: Mr. King.

One-half hour a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

The object of this course is to train speakers in accurate and distinct articulation and to eliminate the faults of bad production. Speech is resolved into its phonetic elements which are made the basis of practical exercises so arranged as to be progressive in their difficulties.

The following courses in the University of Pennsylvania are open to graduate students by special arrangement:

Criminal Law.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

By special arrangement with the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania students in this department may pursue the course in Criminal Law offered by Dean Mikell at the Law School, Thirty-fourth and Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia.

This course may accompany the seminary in Social Case Work.

Criminal Procedure.

Two hours a week throughout the year

By special arrangement with the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania students in this department may pursue the course in Criminal Procedure offered by Dean Mikell, at the Law School, Thirty-fourth and Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia.

This course must be preceded by the course in Criminal Law.

Social Economy Journal Club: Dr. Kingsbury, Dr. Hart and Dr. Fairchild.

Two hours once a fortnight throughout the year.

*Journal
Club*

Current articles are reviewed, recent reports, surveys and investigations are criticised and the results of important research are presented for discussion.

FREE ELECTIVE COURSES

Elements of Statistics: Dr. Kingsbury.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

*Free
Elective
Courses*

This course deals with the elementary principles of statistics. Among the topics are the array, frequency distributions, graphic methods, averages, measures of variation, theory of sampling, index numbers, theory of probability and linear correlation. It also attempts briefly to acquaint the student with the principles and methods of record keeping and filing which are applicable to municipal, state and federal offices, to business organizations and to social organizations.

The course is recommended to students of social economy, of economics and of education. No knowledge of mathematics beyond the requirements for matriculation is presupposed.

Applied Sociology: Dr. Hart.

Credit: One-half unit.

(Given in each year)

Relationships between personalities, the causes of social conflicts, and the methods, whereby maximum stimulation, release, facilitation and integration of the purposes and possibilities of all members of society may be attained, constitute the problems of the course. Specific applications to social relations in the family, in industry, between races, and the like, are worked out. By means of laboratory experiments and objective observation of social phenomena, outstanding sociological theories are tested by attempting to apply them to concrete data. A course in some social science is prerequisite for this course.

Social Anthropology: Dr. Hart.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

An anthropological approach to the problems of human progress. An objective definition of progress is developed. Data relating to prehistoric, primitive, ancient and modern cultural and racial development, bearing on the amount and the direction of change in human intelligence, technology, and social relations, are examined. The desirability of various possible future directions of social change is explored. Methods of innovation in mechanical invention, medicine, science, social work, and other fields, are studied in terms of instances, with a view to developing the fundamental principles of the technique and dynamics of social progress. A course in some social science is prerequisite for this course.

Labour Movements: Dr. Fairchild.

Credit: One unit.

(Given in each year)

The present day problems of labour considered with special reference to the history of the labour movement form the subject matter of this course. A study of critical episodes in labour's struggle for organization is made in order to forecast tendencies in trade unionism and to appraise efforts for industrial peace. Some of the topics considered are the strike, the lockout, working conditions, industrial accidents, scientific management and labour, compensation, social insurance, welfare work, and the radical experiments of labour. The significance of workers' education and of the various labour colleges and schools is stressed with special reference to the Bryn Mawr Summer School for Women Workers in Industry.

The following seminaries offered in other departments are recommended to graduate students of Social Economy and Social Research:

Seminary in Economics: Dr. Marion Parris Smith.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Seminary in Politics: Dr. Fenwick.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in each year)

Seminary in Politics: Dr. Wells.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Not given in 1931-32)

Psychological Seminary: Dr. Leuba.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1931-32)

Seminary in Physiological Psychology: Dr. Helson.

Two or more hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1931-32)

Seminary in Research Problems: Dr. Helson.

Two or more hours a week throughout the year.

(Given in 1931-32)

Seminary in Advanced Mental Measurement: Dr. Rogers.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

Either this seminary or one of the following seminars will be given in 1931-32.

Seminary in Clinical Methods in Child Guidance: Dr. Rogers.

Three hours a week throughout the year.

Seminary in Advanced Principles of Education. Dr. Forest.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

PROFESSOR:

JOSEPH E. GILLET, Ph.D.

GRADUATE COURSES

Two to four hours a week of seminary work or graduate courses are offered each year to graduate students of Spanish accompanied by the direction of private reading and original research.

*Graduate
Courses*

The graduate seminars in Spanish are varied from year to year in order that they may be pursued by a student for consecutive years. Students electing Spanish as a major subject for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy are required to offer French philology as an associated minor.

Seminary in Spanish: Dr. Gillet.

Two hours a week throughout the year.

1931-32: The Spanish drama of the Sixteenth Century.

1932-33: Cervantes, the Novelas exemplares and the Entremeses.

1933-34: Literary criticism in Spain.

Dr. Gillet offers in each year, if his time permits, the following graduate courses:

Spanish Philology.

One hour a week throughout the year.

Old Spanish Readings.

One hour a week throughout the year.

ADVANCED UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

The advanced courses are designed to bridge over the interval between the ordinary undergraduate studies and graduate work. Graduate students will usually find it advisable to elect these courses.

*Advanced
Courses*

Lectures on Spanish Literature of the Sixteenth Century and the Golden Age; Dr. Gillet.

Credit: One unit.

The course includes collateral reading and reports.

Advanced and Free Spanish Composition: Dr. Gillet. Credit: One-half unit.

Fellowships and Graduate Scholarships

Date of Application for Fellowships and Scholarships

Application for resident fellowships or scholarships should be made as early as possible to the Dean of the Graduate School and must be made not later than the first of March preceding the academic year for which the fellowship or scholarship is desired. Blank forms of application will be forwarded to the applicants. A definite answer will be given within a few weeks from the latest date set for receiving applications. Any original papers, printed or in manuscript, which have been prepared by the applicant and sent in support of her application, will be returned when stamps for that purpose are enclosed or specific directions for return by express are given. Letters or testimonials from professors and instructors will be filed for reference.

European Traveling Fellowships

Bryn Mawr European Fellowship

The Bryn Mawr European Fellowship of the value of $500 was founded in 1889. It is awarded annually to a member of the graduating class of Bryn Mawr College on the ground of excellence in scholarship. The fellowship is intended to be applied toward the expenses of one year's study and residence at some foreign university, English or Continental. The choice of a university may be determined by the holder's own preference, subject to the approval of the Faculty. The Bryn Mawr European fellow receives in addition the Elizabeth S. Shippen foreign scholarship of the value of $200.

Mary Elizabeth Garrett European Fellowship

*The Mary Elizabeth Garrett European Fellowship of the value of $1,000 was founded by Miss Garrett of Baltimore and is awarded annually on the ground of excellence in scholarship to a student still in residence who has completed at least three semesters of graduate studies at Bryn Mawr College. The fellowship is to be applied towards the expenses of one year's study and residence at some foreign university, English or Continental. The choice of a university may be determined by the holder's own preference, subject to the approval of the Faculty.

Since this fellowship is awarded to assist candidates for the Doctor's degree at Bryn Mawr College to complete their preparation, it is understood that the holders of the Mary Elizabeth Garrett Fellowship will not present themselves as candidates for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy elsewhere than at Bryn Mawr College.

Anna Ottendorfer Memorial Research Fellowship

The Anna Ottendorfer Memorial Research Fellowship in German and Teutonic Philology of the value of $1,200 was founded in 1907 by Mrs. Anna Woerishoffer of New York City in memory of her mother. It is to be applied towards the expenses of one year's study and residence at some

* By vote of the Trustees of Bryn Mawr College in February, 1927, the President M. Carey Thomas European Fellowship of the value of $500, founded by Miss Garrett in 1896, and the Mary Elizabeth Garrett European Fellowship of the value of $500, founded by Miss Garrett in 1894, are offered jointly as one fellowship of the value of $1000.

German university and is offered annually to a graduate student who has completed at least one year of graduate study at Bryn Mawr College but is not necessarily still in residence when making application for the fellowship. The fellowship will be awarded to the candidate who shows such proficiency in her studies or in independent work as to furnish reason to believe that she will be able to conduct independent investigations in the field of Teutonic Philology or German. The choice of a university may be determined by the holder's own preference subject to the approval of the Faculty.

The Fanny Bullock Workman Fellowship of the value of $1,500, to be held during a year of study or research abroad, is offered annually to a graduate student studying at Bryn Mawr College. The holder of the fellowship must be a student of proved ability who is working for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy and who could not have the advantages of such a year without assistance. At the discretion of the Faculty the fellowship for any one year may be divided between two students or the same student may hold the fellowship for more than one year.

Resident Fellowships

The Helen Schaeffer Huff Memorial Research Fellowship founded in 1913 of the value of $1,200, is offered annually to a student desiring to carry on research in either Physics or Chemistry, to be held during one year's work at Bryn Mawr College.

*Helen
Schaeffer
Huff
Memorial
Research Fellowship*

Applicants for this fellowship must be students who have done advanced graduate work at some college or university of recognized standing and have shown capacity for research. The award of the fellowship will depend primarily upon the applicant's record as a research student. Where equally good candidates are considered, preference will be given to a student working on problems which may be considered to lie along the borderline between Chemistry and Physics. The fellowship may under exceptional circumstances be awarded in consecutive years to the same student or the fellowship may be given to a graduate student studying at Bryn Mawr College to be held during one year's work at some other American college or university if in the opinion of the Committee it is imperative for that student to go elsewhere in order to complete an important piece of investigation.

Twenty-three resident fellowships, of the value of $860 each, are offered annually in Biblical Literature, Biology, Chemistry, Classical Archaeology, Economics and Politics (the Justus C. Strawbridge Fellowship), Education, English, Geology, German, Greek, History, History of Art, Latin, Mathematics, Philosophy, Physics, Psychology, Romance Languages (two fellowships) and two Carola Woerishoffer Memorial Fellowships in Social Economy and Social Research and two Grace H. Dodge Memorial Fellowships in Industrial Relations and Personnel Administration. They are open for competition to graduates of any college of good standing and will be awarded only to candidates who have completed at least one year of graduate work after obtaining their first degree.*

Fellowships*

Fellows who continue their studies at the college after the expiration of the fellowship, may, by a vote of the Directors, receive the rank of Fellows by courtesy.

DUTIES OF RESIDENT FELLOWS

Duties of Resident Fellows

Fellows are expected to attend all college functions, to assist in the conduct of examinations and to give about an hour a week to the care of special libraries in the seminaries; they are not permitted while holding the fellowship to teach or to undertake any other duties in addition to their college work. They are expected to uphold the college standards of scholarship and conduct and to conform to the Self-Government regulations. They are required to reside in the graduate hall and are assigned rooms by the Secretary and Registrar of the College. They are charged the usual fee of seven hundred and seventy dollars for tuition, board, room rent and infirmary fee.

The holder of a fellowship is expected to devote at least one-half her time to the department in which the fellowship is awarded and to show by the presentation of a thesis or in some other manner that her studies have not been without result.

Resident Graduate Scholarships

Resident Scholarships

Twenty Graduate Scholarships, of the value of $400 each, may be awarded to candidates next in merit to the successful candidates for the fellowships; they are also open for competition to graduates of any college of good standing. Scholars may undertake while holding a scholarship only a very limited amount of teaching or other paid work approved in advance by the Dean of the Graduate School.

Robert G. Valentine Memorial Scholarship

The Robert G. Valentine Memorial Scholarship in Social Economy of the value of $400 is offered annually by Mrs. Frank W. Hallowell of Chestnut Hill, Massachusetts, to be awarded by the President and Faculty of Bryn Mawr College on the recommendation of the Director of the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department of Social Economy and Social Research to a candidate approved by the donor. It is open to graduates of any college of good standing.

Grace H. Dodge Scholarships

Two Grace H. Dodge Scholarships in Social Economy for work in Industrial Relations of the value of $400 each, are offered annually and are open for competition to graduates of any college of good standing.

Opportunity is offered by the College Settlement of Philadelphia for two graduate students to reside at the settlement, paying a minimum rate of board, to take at least six hours of practice work at the Settlement, and to pursue courses in the Carola Woerishoffer Graduate Department.

* Any student who has received the M.A. degree from a college or university of recognized standing shall be eligible for a resident fellowship.

Graduate Prize

The Susan B. Anthony Memorial Prize of the value of $500 commemorates the great work for women of Susan B. Anthony. It was founded in 1910 by her friend Anna Howard Shaw and her niece Lucy E. Anthony.

*Susan B.
Anthony
Memorial
Prize*

From 1910 to 1928 the Memorial of Susan B. Anthony was a graduate scholarship in social economy or politics of the value of $250 awarded annually to the student who agreed to complete for publication a study on some phase of the woman question. With the consent of the surviving donor, Miss Lucy E. Anthony, the form of the memorial has been changed to a prize.

It is awarded every two years to a graduate student of Bryn Mawr College who has published (or submitted in final form for publication approved by the Committee) the best study dealing with the industrial, social, economic, or political position of women in the past, present or future. The next award will be made in June 1932.

The award will be made by the President of the College, acting as chairman and four members of the teaching staff appointed by her, two from the department under which, or in which the study has been written and two from allied or associated departments.

*Scholarships for Foreign Women

Five graduate scholarships, of the value of one thousand dollars each, are offered annually to women students outside the United States and Canada. They are open for competition to women whose academic work has reached a standard equivalent to that denoted by the Bachelor's degree of an American college or university of acknowledged standing, that is, a three or four years' university course.† It is essential that applicants should be able to speak and understand English. Application for these scholarships should be made before April first. Renewal of the scholarships for a second year will not be granted except in very exceptional cases. Holders of the scholarships are required to be in continuous residence at the college and to follow regular approved courses of study.

Scholarships for Foreign Women

* Applications for the scholarships for foreign women should be accompanied by full particulars of the candidate's academic work, by diplomas or certificates and by letters of recommendation from professors and should be addressed to the office of the Dean of the Graduate School, Bryn Mawr College, Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, U. S. A. Through coöperation with the Institute of International Education, 2 West 45th Street, New York City, applications from nationals of the countries with which the Institute maintains international student exchange relations, should be addressed to the Institute representatives in those countries:—Austria: Dr. Paul Dengler, Austro-American Institute of Education, 1 Elisabethstrasse 9, Vienna; Czechoslovakia: Dr. F. Spisek, Ministry of Education, Nostie Palace, Prague III; France: Monsieur A. V. Desclos, Office National des Universités et Écoles Françaises, 96 Boulevard Raspail, Paris; Germany: Dr. A. Morsbach, Akademischer Austauschdienst, Schloss Portal III, Berlin C 2; Hungary: Dr. Alois Lőczka, Ministry of Education, V. Bathory-utca 12, Budapest; Italy: Dr. Piero Parini, Ministero Degli Affari Esteri, Il Direttore Generale Delle Scuole Italiane All' Estero, Rome; Spain: Dr. José Castellejo, La Junta para Ampliación de Estudios, Madrid; Switzerland: Dr. Arthur Rohn, Eidgenössische Technische Hochschule, Zurich.

† For British women the degree of Bachelor of Arts, for French women the Licence, for Norwegian and Swedish women the Cand. Philol., or their equivalents are desired.

The cost of board, residence and tuition for the academic year is $770, and an additional charge of $15 a week is made for students who remain at the college during the three weeks of the Christmas and Easter vacations. The value of the scholarship, $1000, therefore covers more than the fixed college expenses and the remainder may be applied toward the other expenses which must be met by the student, i. e., traveling expenses to and from Europe, books, laundry and all incidental personal expenses.

DUTIES OF RESIDENT SCHOLARS

Duties of Resident Scholars

Scholars are expected to reside in the graduate hall, to attend all college functions and to assist in the conduct of examinations. It is understood that they will uphold the college standards of scholarship and conduct and conform to the Self-Government regulations.

Students' Loan Fund

Students' Loan Fund

The Students' Loan Fund of the Alumnae Association of Bryn Mawr College was founded by the Class of 1890 for the use of students who need to borrow money in order to continue their college work and for the purpose of receiving contributions, no matter how small, from those who are interested in helping students to obtain an education. The Fund is managed by a committee consisting of the President of the College and the Alumnae Scholarships and Loan Fund Committee.

The Committee in administering this money follow a definite policy, designed to serve the best interests of the students concerned. Loans may be used for any purpose approved by the Committee, who strongly recommend the borrowing of small sums to relieve undue financial pressure, or to meet special emergencies. As a rule, money is not loaned to Freshmen. The terms under which money is loaned are as liberal as is consistent with business-like principles. Interest, which begins with the date of graduation, is at the rate of four per cent. Payment of the loan must be made in five years according to the following system: ten per cent in each of the first two years; fifteen per cent each in the third and fourth years; fifty per cent in the fifth year. At the discretion of the Committee exceptions are made in special cases, for example that of a student working for a higher degree, to both the five-year limit and the date of the first interest charge.

Contributions may be sent to the chairman of the Scholarships and Loan Fund Committee, Alumnae Office, Taylor Hall, Bryn Mawr, Pa. Application blanks may be obtained from the Alumnae Office on the third floor of Taylor Hall by students who wish to borrow from the Loan Fund.

THE BUREAU OF RECOMMENDATIONS

The college conducts a Bureau of Recommendations which assists students, alumnae and former undergraduate and graduate students by securing recommendations from their professors and forwarding these to individuals or agencies to whom they may apply for positions. It is not primarily a bureau of employment or appointments, although it is often instrumental in putting individuals directly in touch with positions. The bureau also helps graduate and undergraduate students to find summer work. A series of vocational lectures and conferences is conducted each year. The services of the bureau are given free of charge to students, alumnae and former students of Bryn Mawr College.

BEQUEST FORM

The Trustees of Bryn Mawr College will welcome any gift, bequest, or award which is to be devoted to scholarships, fellowships, or the endowment of professors' chairs in accordance with the wishes of the donor. Such funds may constitute memorials to the donor or to any person he may name. The sum of $9,000 yields sufficient income at present to provide tuition for one undergraduate or two graduate students at Bryn Mawr College.

Form of Bequest

I give and bequeath to The Trustees of Bryn Mawr College, a corporation established by law in the State of Pennsylvania, the sum of.....
to be invested and preserved inviolably for the endowment
 of Bryn Mawr College, located at Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania.

LIBRARY

The Bryn Mawr College Library is designed to be as far as possible a library for special study. There are at present on its shelves about 135,000 bound volumes and 10,000 dissertations and pamphlets. Of special interest is the classical library of the late Professor Sauppe of Göttingen, the Semitic library of the late Professor Amiaud of Paris, the mathematical library of Professor Charlotte Angus Scott and the Germanic library of the late Professor Karl Detlev Jessen.

The library is open daily except Sundays from 8 A. M. to 10 P. M. and on Sunday from 9 A. M. to 10 P. M. Books may be taken out by the students unless specially reserved for library reference use.

The sum of over fourteen thousand dollars is expended yearly for books under the direction of the heads of the several collegiate departments and, in addition to many gifts of single books, about thirty thousand dollars has been presented to the library during the past twenty years for expenditure in special departments.

Students may enjoy also the privileges of Haverford College Library, and the following:

The Library Company of Philadelphia, which contains about 260,000 volumes, divided between the Locust Street Building and the Ridgway Branch. Its valuable collection of pamphlets is not included in the number of volumes as given above. The Library is open from 9 A. M. to 5.30 P. M. and is open to students for consultation freely during these hours. To take books from the building a deposit must be made or subscriptions will be received as follows: $12.00 for one year, $6.00 for six months, $4.00 for three months.

The Mercantile Library, which contains about 250,000 volumes. Private subscription, $6.00 a year for two separate works at a time.

The Library of the Academy of Natural Sciences, which contains about 95,000 volumes. The Council of the Academy has generously conceded the use of its library and of its museum to the students of Bryn Mawr College.

The Library of the University of Pennsylvania, which contains about 700,000 volumes and 50,000 pamphlets. The custodians of this library have always been liberal in extending to the College inter-library loan courtesies.

The Free Library of Philadelphia, which contains over 730,000 volumes and 510,000 pamphlets and unbound documents and is at all times open to the students for consultation.

The American Philosophical Society Library, which contains about 75,000 volumes, admission by card from a member.

The Historical Society of Pennsylvania Library, which contains over 200,000 bound volumes and 300,000 pamphlets, is for reference only. The collection of manuscripts is one of the best in the country, comprising 8,000 volumes containing over 1,000,000 items. Every courtesy is extended to members of the college and students and members of the Faculty are specially invited to all lectures delivered at the Library.

Over six hundred publications and reviews in the English, Greek, French Italian, Spanish, German and Swedish languages, are received by the library, as follows:
